LIBRARY CORNER

Retirement party

The Friends of the Library, the Library Trustees and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library staff invites the community and friends of Susan Watrous to a celebration in her honor. Susan, a librarian at Pratt Memorial Library for 29 years retires the beginning of June.

A party for Susan will be held on Friday, June 15 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the home of Linda Wakeman, President of the Friends of the Library, at 255 Atlantic Ave.

Suzanne Terry, the children's librarian at Pratt for 15 years, will also be honored at this time. Suzanne has taken a new position as the very first children's librarian at the Boston Athenaeum.

Come bid a fond farewell on June 15 to two of the library's finest.

Thank you

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library staff would like to extend its thanks to Jim Benedict who recently donated a copy machine to the library's back office. It is a very convenient addition for all and everyone is grateful for Jim's generosity.

Children's room

A free series of programs for preschoolers, ages 3 to 5 years began this spring. This combination of entertaining performances began May 4 and continues through Thursday, June 21.

The Music Lady joined Pratt Library May 12 and is scheduled to return on Thursday, June 21 at 7 p.m. Pre-school children are invited to bring their favorite bear and pajamas are optional. All programs are sponsored by South Shore Community Action and "Helping Children Have Success Now."

Summer reading program

Look for this year's summer reading program information soon! The Pratt Library will be sponsoring the "Score Big with Books" reading program which will include a wonderful selection of posters and prizes for children of all ages.

The program begins the day after school ends. For information, call 781-383-1348.

Video event for teens

Calling all Cohasset teens, in grades 7 through 12! You are invited to create a short video (no more than 20 minutes long) this summer. Create an original video that does not include any copyrighted images or music.

Submit your entry to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. A local panel of judges will view all entries and determine one grand prize winner from one of the participating South Shore libraries. Screenings of all videos will take place at the "Oscar Night of Stars" on Friday, August 24 at 7 p.m. at the Duxbury Free Library.

For more information, call the Pratt Library at 781-383-1348.

Unlocking the DOORS

The Soft Parade pays tribute to Jim Morrison's legacy

The doors tribute band The Soft Parade will perform at Norwell's Company Theatre Saturday, June 16.

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

It's about as close as you can come to the real Doors since that day back in 1971, when the band's revered front man Jim Morrison died — or as some believe, simply disappeared.

Joe Russo, front man and honorary Jim Morrison of the New Jersey-based Doors tribute band The Soft Parade, would probably tell you just this himself. Together since 1990, The Soft Parade has taken its appreciation for the musical legacy of the band to becoming not just the world's premier Doors tribute act — touring throughout the U.S. as well as countries in Europe, Central America, Canada and Isreal — but also critical raves as perhaps the best of all the tribute bands on the international circuit, a field that has included performing homages to the Beatles, Led Zeppelin, Aerosmith, Pink Floyd, The Grateful Dead and scores of others.

THE SOFT PARADE
TRIBUTE TO THE DOORS

Russo is not afraid to let you know about his band's ability to replicate virtually every aspect of the classic Doors show, from the music and onstage theatrics to the costuming, live-set visuals and overall legendary atmosphere and attitude. And he does so with a healthy confidence and assuredness that would impress even the late Lizard King himself.

The singer/performance-artist also mentions that The Soft Parade, named for an epic-length title track of a Doors album, has never gone a week in its eleven years of carrying the Doors torch without playing a live date somewhere. Two weeks from Saturday, the tribute lives on as the band parades into Norwell's Company Theatre, for an 8 p.m. show.

"From the time we first formed, we've tried to be the first Doors tribute act to recreate the band's entire live show, from the music and clothes to the way the band improvised and all their vintage equipment and instrumentation they used to create that unique sound," said Russo. "I think we've succeeded at reliving this aspect of the Doors experience and the positive reaction we've gotten from listeners and press and media people worldwide really speaks for itself."

Among those listeners is none other than former Doors keyboardist and co-founder Ray Manzarek, who has described The Soft Parade as "an excellent recreation of the Doors experience."

Manzarek is not the only ex-Door original to show his appreciation; guitarist Robbie Krieger was impressed enough to join the band onstage during its tour of France last year. And Soft Parade marked another career milestone in 1994 when it became the only tribute act invited to the Woodstock 25th Anniversary Festival at the original 1969 site in Bethel, New York (running simultaneously with the Anninversary Concert in Saugerties, New York), sharing the bill with such original Woodstock vets as Richie Havens, Mountain and Country Joe McDonald.

Said Russo, "Other Doors tribute bands have mostly just replicated the studio versions of the band's songs. We've taken the approach of doing the songs with a live feel, which has always seemed more creative and more vital. Plus, with our repertiore of over sixty Doors songs, up to 80 percent of them are songs that the actual Doors never played live. And a lot of these songs include the more obscure gems from the catalog, stuff like `Hyacinth House,' `Shaman's Blues,' `Love Street.' Also, `Waiting For the Sun,' with its really explosive keyboards and intense screams, is another lesser known song that we really like to do in our show."

"All this is what's made the difference with our act. While other Doors tribute bands have fallen by the wayside over the last few years, we've been able to endure and keep moving forward," Russo said.

Along with Russo, The Soft Parade includes guitarist Joseph Bilotti, keyboardist Mike Abel and drummer Roy Weinberger, playing the respective roles of Krieger, Manzarek and John Densmore. On his own, Russo has released a maxi-CD of original music and self-styled covers, featuring ex-Young Rascals drummer Dino Danelli as well as the singer's updated takes on songs by The Rolling Stones and 60s underground-rock legends Love (a favorite band of Morrison's). The CD, along with informative features and photo gallery links, is available on The Soft Parade's website at www.thesoftparade.com.

"More than anything, you have to appreciate The Doors' unique blend of performance style, the way they put together the theatrical aspect with the atmospheric," Russo said. "The music was very creative and innovative, but it also made you think and made you question with its lyrics and subject matter. The Doors had those types of songs, but they also had sweet, romantic ballads and played everything else from psychedelia and even world music to blues and flat-out, high-energy rock 'n' roll. This is pretty much why each succeeding generation has cottoned to the Doors' music like they have, because the music has never sounded dated."

The Pernice Brothers band includes Joe Pernice, Bob Pernice, Peyton Pinkerton, Laura Stein, Mike Belitsky, and Thom Monahan.

SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

After all his years in the music industry, Joe Pernice is not only releasing a new album with his band The Pernice Brothers on June 5—he is releasing it on a new record label which he co-founded —Ashmont Records.

Pernice, a Holbrook native, now a resident of western Massachusetts, co-owns the Dorchester-based record label along with South Shore Music Circus publicist Joyce Linehan.

Pernice's musical success comes after many years of writing music, recording, and touring, and it was only fate which brought him and Linehan to the same place.

"I met her when she was working at Sub-Pop Records in 1995," Pernice said, adding the Seattle-based record company has an east coast branch in Dorchester. "She was the one who actually signed me to that label. We hit it off."

Pernice explained at that time, Linehan signed he and his former band called the Scud Mountain Boys, which Pernice formed in 1994 while he was a graduate student at UMass-Amherst.

The Scud Mountain Boys released two critically acclaimed albums, but in 1997, Pernice began playing music with his brother Bob on the side.

"Bob and I decided it would be fun to record a couple of seven-inch singles on Sub-Pop," Pernice said. I was having a great time playing with him, and it was at that time that I figured out I was enjoying playing with the Scud Mountain Boys less and less."

Pernice said the Scud Mountain Boys broke up in 1997 because each of the band members seemed to be going in different musical directions. At the same time, Pernice, who was then forming a band with his brother, said he had some explaining to do to Sub-Pop records because he and the Scud Mountain Boys had a contract with the company.

"I talked to people at Sub-Pop about making The Pernice Brothers a full-time thing," Pernice said. And that is exactly what happened. Sub-Pop essentially agreed to let Pernice switch bands.

The cover of the Pernice Brothers' new album "The World Won't End."

Pernice knew there needed to be more to The Pernice Brothers than just he and Bob. So, he decided to regroup with many people he had worked with previously on other albums, including his bass-player Thom Monahan who produced six of Pernice's various bands' records.

The other band members include Mike Belitsky on drums, Laura Stein on keyboards and vocals, and Peyton Pinkerton on guitars and vocals. Pernice also recruited several other musicians for the studio including Jeremy Smith on percussion, Mike Daly, Jeffrey Underhill, and Joe Harvard on guitars, Anne Viebig on vocals, Jane Scarpentoni on cello, Antoine Silverman and Lorenza Ponce on violins, and David Gold on viola.

Pernice said when it was formed, his brother Bob decided to take a smaller role in the band because he already had a full-time job, and even until this day, Bob only plays with the band when they do local venues.

In May, 1998, The Pernice Brothers released their first album called "Overcome By Happiness" on Sub-Pop records. After that release, Pernice began working on what he called a "solo" project, although many Pernice Brothers members were involved in the effort.

In 1999, Pernice began talking to Linehan about the possibility of forming an independent record label together, and as a result, Linehan stopped working at Sub-Pop in order to pursue that idea.

In January, 2000, Pernice released his first solo effort called "Chappaquiddick Skyline," and in June of that same year, he released another solo album called "Big Tobacco." Both albums were distributed on Sub-Pop records, but despite that, Pernice still was able to get out of his contract with the company in order to work with Linehan and form Ashmont records.

Now, The Pernice Brothers are preparing for their first release on the label with an album called "The World Won't End."

"It's a pop record, really," Pernice said. "It's pretty lush...pretty full. There's a lot of guitars, harmonies, and a great string section. I'm a pretty dark lyricist, and the music is pretty melodic. I wouldn't know how to describe it—I don't really listen to the songs, I just make them."

The Pernice Brothers will start their overseas tour on May 30 as they will travel to places like the United Kingdom, Scotland, and Ireland. That part of the tour will last until June 12.

But when he is not touring or recording with the band, Pernice involves himself deeply within his craft.

"I write a lot," he said. "I basically get up everyday and play music. I think there are all different types of good songs out there, but I think my definition of a good song is one that sparks something inside of you, something that hits you on an emotional level. A good song is not something that has to be beautifully recorded as long as it stirs up some internal emotions."

Strawberry-rhubarb crisp

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

The problem with crisps is that they are usually anything but crisp. The topping is sodden or gluey and is matched to a fruit base that is overly sweetened. Strawberry-rhubarb crisps have the added burden of using fruits that vary tremendously in flavor, texture, and sweetness. Instead of a heavy, dull dessert, I was looking for a truly crisp topping married to a fresh fruit base that tasted like fruit, not sugar.

The first issue was the fruit. Rhubarb ribs vary from 1/4 inch to 1 1/4 inches in width. For the sake of uniformity in cooking, I purchased fairly evenly sized stalks. I like using thinner ribs, 1/2 to 3/4 inches thick, since they are easier to handle and make nice, bite-sized pieces. One and a quarter pounds of rhubarb yields about 3 cups.

I know that some cooks soak rhubarb in cold water before cooking it to tone down its acidity (see Cook's Illustrated, May/June 2001), so I made crisps using rhubarb that had been soaked for 1 hour, 1/2 hour, and not at all. The rhubarb that was soaked for 1 hour was remarkably less tangy than the unsoaked rhubarb, while the rhubarb soaked for 1/2 hour was in between the two extremes. The soaking also dulled the color of the fruit. I preferred the unsoaked rhubarb since it had the signature tangy finish and the trademark jewel tone.So for this application, soaking was out. (Soaked rhubarb, however, does taste better in the English dessert called a fool, where a soft, creamy flavor is preferred.)

I thought the strawberries would be a cinch, but they turned out to be troublesome. My first trip to the market provided me with small, perfectly ripe, sweet berries, and I found that 1/2 cup of sugar for the fruit mixture was just right. During subsequent testing, however, I could find only very large berries that were white in the center as well as sour, and these required 2/3 cup sugar. (They also made an inferior crisp.) My conclusion is that a fruit crisp ought to be made with perfectly ripe strawberries, since they have a starring role.

The next question was how to thicken the fruit. The juice rendered from cooking the fruit is substantial, making the dish a bit on the soupy side. Nonetheless, when I tested Minute Tapioca and even potato starch, I preferred the crisp without thickener. Since a crisp is spooned out of the baking dish (a slice of pie needs to stand on its own) and the juices marry nicely to a scoop of vanilla ice cream, I found the extra juice to be a good thing. As for other ingredients, I preferred orange juice and zest over lemon juice and zest, the latter being too sour when matched with the rhubarb. Six cups of the fruit mixture fit nicely into a 9-inch pie dish or an 8-inch-square baking dish.

Now I was on to the topping. I had done a good deal of work with simple flour and oatmeal toppings. Both yielded gummy crisps. My solution was to use a combination of nuts and flour, which make a truly crisp top layer. I found walnuts to be bitter and therefore most prefer a combination of pecans and almonds, although either one by itself is fine. Most crisps use a heavy hand when it comes to spices, but I found a mere 1/8 teaspoon of cinnamon and nutmeg to be plenty. (I often leave them out entirely if the fruit is top quality.) The basic method is to pulse the dry flour, sugars (light brown and granulated), spices, and salt in a food processor (a hand method is also included below), then add cold butter and pulse until barely incorporated. The nuts are added next, and the mixture is processed quickly until the texture resembles wet sand. Do not overprocess.

For baking, I start out at 375 degrees for 40 minutes and turn the heat up to 400 degrees for an additional five minutes to crisp up the top. Crisps are best served warm or at room temperature.

EASY STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB CRISP

If you do not have a food processor, use finely chopped nuts and combine all dry ingredients, including the nuts, in a medium bowl. Add the chilled butter chunks and pinch between your fingers until the mixture looks like wet, lumpy sand.

Fruit

3 cups rhubarb ri inch thick, cut dia inch lengths (about

3 cups ripe strawberries, hulled and cut into bite-sized pieces
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon orange zest
Juice from 1/2 orange

Topping

6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/4 cup light brown sugar, packed
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons unsalted butter, chilled and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
3/4 cup almonds and/or pecans, coarsely chopped

1. Heat the oven to 375 and adjust rack to center position. Toss fruit with the sugar, orange zest, and orange juice. Place mixture in a 9-inch pie plate or an 8-inch square ing dish.

2. For the topping, place the flour, sugars, cinnamon, nutmeg, and salt in the work bowl of a food processor. Add the butter and pulse until the mixture resembles coarse cornmeal, with pea-sized chunks of butter remaining. Add the nuts and pulse for about five 1-second bursts, or until the mixture looks like wet, lumpy sand. Be careful not to overprocess.

3. Distribute the topping evenly over the fruit and bake for 40 minutes. Increase the oven temperature to 400 degrees and bake 5 minutes more or until the fruit is bubbling and the topping is deep golden brown. Serve warm or at room temperature with vanilla ice cream. Serves 6

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, MAY 31

This is a wonderful day for vacationing, socializing. The Virgo moon becomes inactive at 5:40 a.m. until 6:41 a.m., when a Libra moon takes over. The moon interacts with Saturn in the afternoon and Neptune in the evening. In addition, Venus, the planetary ruler of Libra, forms a harmonious alignment to Uranus. Influences are prime for starting important relationships or strengthening the ties in existing partnerships. Romance is in the air this evening. Ride the love boat to exotic ports.

FRIDAY, JUNE 1

June is likely to be one of the most challenging months of the year. Expect the unexpected. Life will not be dull. Mercury and Mars travel in retrograde motion in opposing signs, Gemini and Sagittarius. Expansive Jupiter interacts with Mars and Mercury during the month. In addition, a solar eclipse culminates on June 21, the day the summer solstice arrives. All new starts are off limits. Cool your heels. Don't act anymore than you have to. Take a sabbatical. Today a Libra moon and Venus/Mars alignment highlights all social activities. Plan a romantic evening with the love in your life.

SATURDAY, JUNE 2

The combination of a Scorpio moon, Mercury turning retrograde and full moon buildup makes for an intense weekend. Keep a low profile. Pursue activities that help you to relax and maintain a positive, lighthearted attitude. The Libra moon becomes inactive at 10:41 a.m. until 10:56 a.m., when it enters Scorpio. If you have work projects to accomplish, plan to finish jobs already begun, make repairs, redo, renovate.

SUNDAY, JUNE 3

Be sure to take extra quiet time out for yourself today. Instead of trying to change others or transform external situations, this is a time to look within, change your thinking and find a new course of action for yourself. The moon continues its travel in Scorpio. Others maybe pensive, moody, difficult to get along with. Making important decisions or launching large-scale enterprises are off limits. Finish old business rather than starting anything new.

MONDAY, JUNE 4

Gear up for a hectic, demanding day. Stop, look and listen. The planet Mercury takes the spotlight. At 1:22 a.m., Mercury, standing at the last degree of Gemini, begins retrograde travel until June 28. Although this period is not favorable for making changes in your external life, it is an ideal time for inner healing. Profound, life-transforming insights may come, if you have the quiet space and time to listen. In addition, a polarity of the sun and Pluto prompts you to let go of old habits, negative behaviors. Consider ways you can experience renewal. The Scorpio moon becomes inactive at 7:29 a.m. The final windup to the full moon begins at 4:58 p.m., when the moon enters Sagittarius.

TUESDAY, JUNE 5

The full moon continues to build until 9:39 p.m., when it culminates at 15 1/2-degrees of Sagittarius. Slow down. Don't take risks. Channel high energy constructively. Tackle jobs you've been putting off and get them out of the way. A harmonious alignment of Mercury and Venus this evening urges you to open the doors to a higher level of communications with others.

Select fragrant plants for the spring landscape

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

PART II

Greatly needed soaking rains have rejuvenated our parched lawns and gardens, greening the landscape and promoting strong, lush growth in the perennial borders. The beneficial moisture has prompted new foliage to emerge from trees and shrubs decimated by the severe frost and with some warmth and sunshine most of these plants should now be on the road to recovery. Perhaps the only major drawback to this extended period of rainfall is the staggering number of weeds which seem to have germinated overnight in response to the dampness.

As I begin the never-ending chore of removing these intruders from the perennial borders, I pause to inhale the sweet perfume of a nearby patch of lily-of-the-valley (Convallaria). The slender, arching stems, bearing dainty, white, bell-shaped flowers, glisten in the dappled sunlight against a dense backdrop of large, satiny green leaves. The flowers of this May-blooming, rhizomatous groundcover rekindle childhood memories of wandering through my mother's woodland garden, picking bouquets of these fragrant stalks along with pink and blue wood hyacinths and sunny yellow buttercups.

A tiny rhizome was accidentally introduced into my garden years ago among plants I received as a gift and in recent years has spread vigorously to produce a dense carpet which is beginning to encroach upon my lawn, necessitating its constant removal. In recent years I have added a pink-flowering variety, C. rosea, and a rather unique variegated form, C. albostriata, characterized by longitudinal white stripes on the foliage although the latter has a tendency to revert to solid green leaves as it spreads. A hardy groundcover for moisture-retentive soils in sun or part shade, it is ideally suited for the naturalistic, woodland garden but may be too aggressive to be used in a formal, shady perennial border. Division is usually best performed in autumn.

A handsome addition to the sunny border, the spicy, clove-scented members of the Dianthus family will soon be smothered with dozens of 1-inch flowers in shades of pink, white and red, many of them speckled, spotted, eyed or margined in a contrasting color. Most of the perennial forms offer attractive, mat-forming, blue-green foliage which remains evergreen through the winter months. Prolonged dampness due to heavy soils, organic mulches, poor drainage or winter wetness will often cause them to succumb. Sandy, porous soils, to which lime has been added, are ideal, as Dianthus, commonly known as carnations or pinks, prefer neutral to slightly alkaline conditions.

Few fragrant shrubs are better known than lilacs (Syringa). These suckering, deciduous shrubs produce elegant, sweetly-scented, conical clusters containing a myriad of small, tubular, single or double flowers in shades of pink, lavender, blue, purple, or white. Numerous varieties are available, although the most popular types tend to be cultivars of the French lilacs (S. vulgaris) which exhibit rounded, heart-shaped leaves and may grow to an ultimate height of 20 feet or more. These floriferous shrubs should be grown in full sun in a neutral to alkaline, moisture-retentive soil. Lime should be applied around the base of plants on a yearly basis. Powdery mildew, leaf spot, and borers can be a problem.

As shrubs mature and expand in width and height, a vigorous renewal pruning may be advisable. Older trunks can be reduced to a foot or two in height or cut to the ground and will sprout new growth creating a denser, bushier shrub. It is usually wise to prune about one-third of the trunks each season to rejuvenate an old, leggy specimen.

In addition to the common lilac, several other types of lilacs are usually available through local sources. I am particularly fond of several varieties which demonstrate smaller stature and foliage including, the Littleleaf lilac (s. microphylla), the Korean lilac (S. meyeri) which maintains a height of only 5 feet, and S. `Miss Kim' which reaches 8 feet at maturity. Flower clusters tend to be smaller but very fragrant and may exhibit sporadic bloom in autumn. These shrubs seem less susceptible to disease and pests than their showier cousins. It should be noted that there is also an elegant Japanese tree lilac (S. reticulata) with handsome reddish-brown bark and aromatic white flowers. Swallow-tail butterflies find members of the lilac family irresistible.

Many varieties of honeysuckle (Lonicera) offer a delightful perfume but some species have become invasive. There are both shrubby and vining types which display clusters of tubular flowers in multiple colors including red, yellow, orange, pink and white. They serve as an excellent enticement for hummingbirds, who favor their nectar, and for other bird species that quickly devour the colorful berries which appear later in the season. The most troublesome, invasive species are the extremely fragrant, twining, Japanese honeysuckle (L. japonica) with yellow and white flowers, and the Tatarian honeysuckle (L. tatarica), a vigorous shrub. Other vining cultivars, such as the `Gold Flame' honeysuckle, tend to be less rampant while still attracting hummingbirds, but they do not seem to be as strongly scented.

Town eyes fields at pit

Would expand Barnes' facility

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

A town committee has voted to recommend developing athletic fields on the site of the former town gravel pits off North Main Street.

The Gravel Pit Reuse Committee, consisting of town officials, local residents and members of the town baseball league and Recreation Department have been brainstorming ideas for the past nine months and have decided to ask the town to expand the Barnes Field facility.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the current plan is to layout one youth baseball field, and possibly another youth baseball field/soccer field combination. Because of wetlands located in the back of the property, the plan for the two fields would need Conservation Commission approval.

Then the plans would go before selectmen and possibly Town

Public health nurse moves to Town Hall

Contract with Social Service League expires

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The services will remain the same and she'll be as available as ever — only out of a new location, health officials say.

Come July, Judy Fitzsimmons, the town's public health nurse, is going to set up office at Town Hall — just a few hundred yards from where she's been based for the past 15 years at St. Stephen's Church.

The physical move marks the end of a near 20-year contract the town had with the Social Service League, a private non-profit organization housed at St. Stephen's Church, to provide public nursing services.

The change is not a result of any beef the town has with the Social Service League, founded about 90 years ago, which will continue to provide Meals on Wheels, the services of a social worker, and myriad other activities to benefit local citizens.

"It's been an excellent relationship," said Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik. "It's not like we're unhappy with the services provided by the Social Service League."

Health board chairman Stephen Bobo said the move makes sense.

"This provides an opportunity for the Board of Health to really look at the issue of a public health nurse," Bobo said. He explained that Fitzsimmons will be much more visible at Town Hall.

"She is a brilliant person who wants to do further outreach for the town," he said.

The town pays about $30,000 annually to the Social Service League. The money included Fitzsimmons' part-time salary, the hourly wages for another nurse who filled in when needed, and administrative costs. Godzik said the move would save the town about $12,000 in fiscal year 2002, which starts July 1.

Cohasset High School to graduate class of achievers

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Cohasset High School will say goodbye to 72 seniors Saturday, described as one of the best and brightest classes in recent years.

The graduation ceremony, which will be held under the tent at the South Shore Music Circus, begins at 1:30 p.m. Class valedictorian Clara Sceery will speak at the ceremony, as will class salutatorian Chris Golden and other school officials.

High school principal Dr. Michael Jones called the group "exceptionally well-rounded" and was a great senior class to preside over in his first year at the school.

"Some distinguished themselves scholastically, some through the arts, and some public service. But all seem to be passionately involved in what they're doing."

— CHS Principal Dr. Michael Jones, on the Class of 2001

"It has been absolutely delightful," he said this week. "This is, without a question, the most gratifying position I have ever had, and that is largely from the students here."

Dr. Jones said the Class of 2001 is "truly a group of high achievers" that succeeded in the classroom, in ...allways, on the athletic fields, and in the community.

"Academically, it's pretty safe to say this is the best class we've had in many, many years," he said. "They've distinguished themselves in a number of ways, through highest SAT scores we've ever seen, highest AP scores ever seen, they're

Sandy Beach prepares for summer season

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Although the weather has been more like mid-spring in recent weeks, instead of mid-summer as it was at the beginning of May — hot, humid temperatures are bound to return, and people will soon seek refuge on the town's beaches.

The Sandy Beach Association knows the weekly migrations to the popular beach are about to begin, and are in the process of prepping the beach for the thousands of people that come to bask, swim and play each summer.

For more than 50 years now, the association and its seven-member board have been the caretakers of the beach just off Jerusalem Road. Current association president Robin Lawrence says preparation for the beach's June 16 opening will consist mainly of a large-scale beach combing, as it has for years.

"We have a contractor come in with a tractor and actually sift through the sand to remove any flotsam and jetsam and any non-natural items," Lawrence said. "Nothing natural is taken, no seaweed or rocks. Whatever should be there, remains there."

He said every spring the tractor removes pieces of wood, lobster traps and buoys that have washed up over the winter. Even though the Massachusetts coast has battered by a series of storms this winter, Lawrence didn't think the damage to the beach was any worse than normal.

"Every spring you think it was worse than the previous year, but you can't quite remember what it looked like last year," he said.

Lawrence did, however, think the north end of the beach was in a bit worse condition than the rest.

For the first time, the association was asked to file a Notice of Intent with the town Conservation Commission about the beach cleaning activities this year. Lawrence said the commission approved the work but asked the association to consider such things as using a smaller tractor, designate paths onto the beach, and moving the volleyball net away from a dune.

Lawrence said a smaller tractor wasn't available for the work, but the association will attempt to keep folks on "designated paths" while walking to the beach to prevent further dune damage, and will plant dune grass "as necessary" to hinder dune erosion.

Lawrence said the association has not made a decision on whether to move the volleyball net.

Each summer, the private, nonprofit association hires five lifeguards, including one manager, to patrol the beach for the summer. He said at least two or three will work the beach during a weekday, and possibly all five on the weekends.

Though they own the beach, the association does not control the parking lot, which is owned by the town, and requires a sticker to park. Right now, town residents can buy an "all facilities" sticker for both the parking lot and the Recycling Transfer Facility for $50, and a second sticker for $20. For families that do not use the RTF, beach stickers can be purchased for $7; $3 for those 60 and older.

Cars will enter through the southern part of the lot, and exit through the north. The town opened the north end of the lot last summer after residents complained about diminished visibility because of dune grass while exiting.

Clarification

The former owners of the "Wolfpit Property" have agreed to accept the town's offer of $150,000 for its taking of the property, but also have reserved their right to seek additional damages.

Wayne Sawchuck, of Beechwood Street, said he and former co-owners Leland and Leonora Jenkins, of Jerusalem Road, will take the $150,000 but are still looking into whether they have a case for further damages.

The Cohasset Water Commission took the land by eminent domain in May, saying development on the property, which is in the Lily Pond watershed area could possibly harm the town's water supply.

Forest Ave. sidewalk

The selectmen's office has notified Forest Avenue residents of an upcoming meeting to review plans for a new sidewalk along the street.

The meeting will be held July 10 at Town Hall.

Liquor license

Selectmen granted the South Shore Arts Center a one-day liquor license for its upcoming kickoff party for the Festival on the Common.

Liquor will be served Friday, June 15 from 6- 8 p.m. The license allows the alcohol to be delivered at 3 p.m. and remain on the premises until the next morning.

Speed limit signs

Town Manager Mark Haddad told selectmen Tuesday that traffic signs indicating a 30 mile per hour zone along Summer Street have been ordered and are do in shortly.

Selectmen Merle Brown said residents along Pleasant Street, Clay Spring Road and Reservoir Road have also asked that new speed limit signs be put up.

"Yea, there's some guy that lives up there and is always bombing down those roads," Haddad said, poking fun at selectmen chairman Fred Koed, a Pleasant Street resident.

Selectmen approved the signs in a 4-0 vote. Koed abstained from voting.

Storm cleanup

Town Finance Director Michael Buckley notified selectmen that Cohasset will receive $26,741.52 from the Federal Emergency Management Agency for the cleanup efforts resulting from the March 5 Nor'easter.

Town Manager Mark Haddad had asked the town police, fire and public works department to bill any overtime and other expenses accrued during the storm to the town's snow and ice fund.

The sum represents a 75 percent reimbursement of the town's costs, and will go to offset the $77,000 deficit in the town's snow and ice budget.

House to reconsider seatbelt bill after tie vote last week

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

House legislators are expected to reconsider a bill that would allow police to pull over motorists not wearing seatbelts and issue a $25 ticket, after a 76-76 tie vote last Tuesday.

The bill, which would give police "primary enforcement" of the current seatbelt law, was passed by a voice-vote in the Senate.

Seatbelts have been required under state law since 1994. Currently, not buckling up is subject to secondary enforcement, meaning the officer can cite a motorist for not using a seatbelt only if he or she is stopped for something else. A police officer can only use primary enforcement to stop a vehicle for a seatbelt infraction if a child, age 12 or under, is not wearing a seatbelt.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley said a motion by Public Safety Committee Co-chairman Timothy Toomey, D-Cambridge, to reconsider the vote will more than likely be taken up at the next formal session, scheduled for sometime next week.

Bradley who supports the bill, said by having primary enforcement of the seatbelt law, it would result in a 15 percent increase in seat belt usage, 39 fewer deaths and 3,000 less injuries suffered in car accidents a year. He also said taxpayers could save up to $154 million a year in medical costs accrued by people in car accidents with minimal or no medical insurance. The money to treat those people comes from a hospital's taxpayer-funded uncompensated care pool.

"That's our tax dollars being used to fund that pool," he said. "Also, your medical costs are seven times higher when in an accident and not wearing a seatbelt, than be if you were wearing one."

Massachusetts ranks 49th in the nation in seat belt usage, with just 50 percent of Bay State motorists buckling up. Bradley said primary enforcement would result in more people buckling up including young drivers.

"Ninety-one percent of drivers 16 to 19 year olds whose parents don't wear seatbelts, also don't wear them," he said. "That's a staggering statistic."

The main argument raised against a mandatory seatbelt law is that it is another example of government trying to control another aspect of people's lives.

House Minority Leader Fran Marini, R-Hanson, argued that the bill went past protecting the public safety to interfering in a person's private behavior. "What's next? You have to eat your vegetables?" he asked. "You can't be choking down junk food because if you get sick, taxpayers are going to have to pay the bills?"

Bradley said he thinks primary enforcement of the seat belt law is a "reasonable restriction" on an activity that already is partially restricted.

"Driving in this country is a privilege, and it can be restricted," Bradley argued. "You can't hang fuzzy dice on your mirror anymore. You can't drive without shoes. If you're under 18, you can't drive after midnight."

The $25 ticket would not be considered a surchargeable offense. "It's not like a speeding ticket," explained Bradley, "it's more like a parking ticket."

Legislators on both sides of the bill are now scrambling to lobby the four legislators who did not vote, as well as newly-elected Weymouth Democrat James Murphy, who won a special election last month to replace former House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Paul Haley.

"You can't hang fuzzy dice on your mirror anymore. You can't drive without shoes. If you're under 18, you can't drive after midnight."
— State Rep. Garrett Bradley

The four absent legislators were split on the issue, however House Majority Leader William Nagle, D-Northampton, who vote in favor of the bill, was recently confirmed as the new clerk-magistrate of the Ware District Court, and will not vote when it is reconsidered.

Bradley said he has talked to Murphy, and informed him of his position on the bill.

Another wild card is the Black Legislative Caucus, a bloc of black legislators that decided to vote against the bill because of concerns it could be used as an excuse for randomly pulling over black motorists. Brian Condron, a lobbyist for Rasky Baerlin hired by supporters of the seatbelt bill, said when last year's racial profiling data collection bill was passed, seatbelt proponents hoped that would ease the concerns of the black caucus. The data collection bill allows the state to examine tickets to determine if there are patterns of racial profiling.

Condron said he didn't think the entire caucus would vote against it.

"We knew Rep. Benjamin Swan, D-Springfield, had concerns from the beginning, and Rep. Byron Rushing, D-Boston, did not vote for it and we hoped he would," Condron said. "And other members primarily out of Boston we thought might support it and still hoping they will."

He said the national caucus of black legislators supports primary enforcement and "hopes they weigh in before it's taken up for reconsideration."

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said the Senate leadership decided to approve the vote on a voice vote, and will take it up for debate if the House sends it back for a final "enactment" vote.

But if it does come back, don't count on a "yes" vote from Hedlund. Even though he has faithfully worn his seatbelt since witnessing an accident in 1986 and says "only a fool would drive around without one," Hedlund thinks the bill intrudes too far into a person's privacy.

"I have some misgivings about it. It's a significant step in giving greater power over what is traditionally assumed somewhat as a right to privacy, if that person is driving and not harming anyone and not in violation of any existing laws," he said.

Hedlund thinks the state should instead focus on educating motorists of the advantages to wearing a seatbelt. "Extending the long arm of the law into one's auto is really going a pretty far way to accomplish greater use of seatbelts," he said.

Meeting schedule

The following is a list of town meetings scheduled as of May 4. All meetings will be held in Town Hall unless noted.

Library name change would face legal hurdles

Fund drive prompts question

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are pondering whether to change the name of the library back to the Cohasset Free Public Library as a way to honor the tremendous public support and generosity residents of Cohasset have shown in the development of a new town library.

"There's been so much given in private contributions, that we said maybe it's time to name the library after the whole town instead of one person," said Trustee Patience Towle.

The library is slated to move into the renovated former Osgood School on Ripley Road, after 98 years at its South Main Street site. A delay in awarding the Massachusetts Library Building Grant has bumped the price of the Town Meeting approved project up from $2.9 million to $3.3 million. The trustees have already collected $800,000 in private donations and are in the process of raising another $300,000.

Towle said when the fund drive is complete, enough money will have been raised to come close to the amount of the original donation by Pratt's family, when adjusted for inflation. She said the idea to change the name was "just a thought" and asked town counsel to look into its feasibility.

The report from Valerie Swett of Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis Holland & Drachman said the change could be made, but only after a great deal of legal work.

Swett pointed to a 1975 Town Meeting article that formally incorporated the Paul Pratt Memorial Library into the Cohasset Free Public Library and said the entity would retain the Pratt Library name. She also said the will of Pratt's daughter Harriet Eustis Pratt said the estate is left to establish and maintain a public library in Cohasset known as the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

"We said, maybe it's time to name the library after the whole town instead of one person."
— Patience Towle, trustee and fund drive president

Swett said the one way to change the name would be through a Town Meeting vote, and a court order reversing Pratt's will.

"While these may be possible to obtain, they could be time consuming and costly, and there is no assurance of success," Swett said. She also pointed out that a number of Pratts still live in town and "would likely have standing to file a lawsuit or take public action adverse to a decision to discontinue use of the name 'Paul Pratt Memorial Library'."

Ripley Road resident Peter Pratt is one of those distant relatives of Paul Pratt still living in town. He said, speaking personally and not for the rest of the family, that although he thinks the trustees have worked hard to improve the library's resources, he hopes they will decide to leave the Pratt name on the town library.

"The reason we preserve names on historical edifices is it allows philanthropists to know that their good works will carry on," he said. "It's been a foundation of public and philanthropic institutions in town for the entire 20th Century... I think it's important to preserve that."

Towle said she was unsure what would happen with the suggestion to change the name, and that they "probably won't do anything." She also said the suggestion was not intended to take anything away from the library's original donation. "We are still incredibly grateful to the Pratt family," she said

The current town Pratts are not direct descendants of Capt. Paul Pratt, as he only had two daughters, both of whom never married. Towle said Pratt's two daughters "adored him dearly" and gave the money to the town for a library in 1898 when Harriet died

At the time, the Cohasset Free Public Library was housed in Town Hall. The free library and Pratt Library first came together in 1903, according to the Narrative History in Cohasset, Volume II, written by Peter Pratt's father, the late Burtram Pratt, in 1956. "This brought together the Cohasset Free Public Library, a collection of books without a building, and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, a building without books," he wrote. The two libraries resided in the same building but remained separate collections until the 1975 Town Meeting vote which incorporated the Pratt Library into the public library.

The current library was built in 1903 on land donated by the Snow family, and was constructed for a population of 2,700. It has since undergone a 2,300 square foot expansion in 1964 and 40 percent expansion in1975.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Hello Cohasset! Nice weather is here, the flowers are in full bloom and our pasty white skin is starting to show signs of color once again. As we enter the final month of school for this year, make sure to take some time to thank and acknowledge all of the people who make a difference in your child's day, the teachers, crossing guards, bus drivers, janitors, extra staff, school nurse and the many others who put in "that extra stuff" that makes our children feel safe and happy. For those of you who do not have children or whose children are grown and on their own, make sure to say a special thanks to the baggers at the grocery store, the bank tellers, the town workers who make our town so nice and anyone else who you think of in your day. A smile and a thank you go a long way in making someone feel appreciated! Last week, the prom for our graduating seniors was on Friday evening. Everyone looked spectacular and the evening went wonderfully from all accounts. Congratulations to a very talented and dynamic class! Enjoy your day this Saturday when you graduate amongst your family and friends.

NEW ARRIVALS

We have some announcements to share with everyone here in town. Sean and Kerry (O'Brien) Murphy announce the birth of their first child, Liam John Murphy. Liam was born on May 23 and weighed 7 lbs., 11 oz and was 19-1/2 ins. long. Liam's proud grandparents are Mary O'Brien now living in Duxbury and John and Mary Murphy of Carpinteria, Calif. Sean, Kerry and little Liam make their home in Mill Valley, Calif. Congratulations.

Also making his entrance on the same date, May 23 is Eric Micheal Swanson, the new son of Andy and Rachel Swanson. Andy is the working foreman of the Cohasset Tree, Park and Cemetery department. Eric weighed 7 lbs., 14 oz. and was born at 6:53 p.m. Eric joins his mom and dad and big brother, Tim, at home where all are happy and healthy. Congratulations to you all.

SUMMER PROGRAMS

The Cohasset Recreation Department has some wonderful summer programs that are in store for the summer. From baseball to lacrosse, tennis to acting and of course, summer camp, they have got it all. For any information you can call 781-383-4109 or stop in at the office on the first floor of Town Hall.

HOME SWAP?

As I mentioned in last week's column, a wonderful family and former Cohasset residents are seeking a "house swap" for this summer. If you are looking for a fun and inexpensive adventure this summer and would love to take a little trip to Edinburgh, Scotland, make sure to set your eyes right here. Elspeth and Alasdair Muir are seeking a home to live in here for a 1-3 week stay in mid-July or early August. If you are interested in this, please email them at elalmuir@btinternet.com or, you can call them at 011-44131-337-2082. For more local contact, you can call Laure Kimla at 781-383-8161 for more information. What a great experience for the right family.

PROVIDENCE GRADS

We have some graduations to report on from various schools and colleges. Providence College recently held its 83rd commencement exercise. Andrea Freeman and Brian Kilroy, both of Cohasset, were awarded bachelor degrees. Andrea received hers in management and Brian received his in finance. Congratulations to both of you, your hard work has paid off.

Julia DeWaal received her masters at Leslie College.

Brian Kilroy, Providence College graduate.

HONORS GRADUATE

The Roger Williams University in Rhode Island announced their graduates as well. Megan Ann Pratt of Cohasset received a bachelor of arts, magna cum laude, Feinstein College of Arts and Sciences. Great Job Megan!

BC HIGH AWARDS

Boston College High School held their Art, Drama and Music Award ceremony in which more than 125 students participated in many music and arts programs. Dillon Bustin, former Executive Director of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, was guest speaker. Mr. Bustin recently assumed a new position of the Emerson Umbrella Center for Arts in Concord. Paul Trendowicz, of Cohasset, a junior, received a Certificate of Merit for studio art. Congratulations Paul!

MASTER'S DEGREE

I received some wonderful news about a woman that so many us know and love. Mrs. Julia DeWaal, a very well-known kindergarten teacher at the Joseph Osgood School,(Cody is watching me type this and is very proud of his teacher) was awarded a master of education degree in curriculum and instruction at Leslie College's May 21 commencement ceremony. The program is based upon the Theory of Multiple Intelligence and allows educators to teach through a variety of approaches so that they may be better able to meet the diverse learning styles of today's students. Mrs. DeWaal lives here in town with her family and I am sure join all of us in congratulating her on a remarkable job!

TAPS TRIBUTE

We talked about the wonderful Memorial Day parade in last week's edition and how impressed I was with the great turnout and participation to honor all the veterans in our town. One piece that was not talked about was the beautiful and stirring rendition of "Taps" played by Janet Hoyler. Janet is the daughter of a Cohasset veteran of the Vietnam War and is the granddaughter of a Cohasset WWII veteran. She has played "Taps" for the town of Cohasset for seven years — four years while at CHS and three of them, after she graduated.

Janet just completed her junior year at the University of Delaware where she is majoring in psychology, minoring in linguistics and rowing on the women's crew team. Thank you so much Janet for this as it is such a perfect part of our Memorial Day.

The kind of dedication you show is so important in showing the true meaning of the day.

Dillon Bustin is guest speaker at BC High awards night.

RETURN LACROSSE STICK

I have a request from a young boy here in town. Recently, he was playing at the Old Joseph Osgood School with several children, one being his younger brother. When his brother was hurt, he went to take him home which is right across the street. The problem? While he was doing this, another child took his brand new lacrosse stick, got into his parents' green van and off they went! This stick was a gift to him and was something he cherished quite a bit! Yes, leaving it was probably not a great idea but his brother's well-being came first. This incident was witnessed by several others but as the van was pulling away, no one knew who the people were. Please, whoever it is return the stick, no questions asked! You can call me on my business line, email or even fax a response and we will arrange to get it back for this boy. His parents have been in touch with me and besides the fact that he no longer has this gift, how do you explain to him that a grown-up would allow this to happen? Bottom line is you can't, but getting it back would be a step in the right direction. Thank you for your help in this.

FRENCH MAJOR

Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn. also held its commencement ceremonies on Sunday, May 20. Jennifer Cellucci, daughter of Dan and Judy Celluci, was a member of this graduating class and majored in marketing and French. Jennifer was also active as a member of Alpha Mu Gamma and the French Honor Society.

Congratulations Jennifer, I know how proud your parents are of you as well they should be. Good luck with all that you do in your future.

FESTIVAL TIME

The South Shore Art Center will kick off its 64th Festival on the Common with a festival party featuring a concert by blues/rocker Les Sampou, a limited auction with celebrity guest, Anthony Everett and hors d'oeuvres by Tosca Chef/caterer Lorraine Bachman. Festival offCommon will take place on Friday, June 15 at 8 p.m. in the Bancroft Gallery of the South Shore Art Center. Tickets are $25 in advance and $30 at the door.

Festival offCommon's Silent Auction will include unique handcrafted items by some of the 80 craft artisans who will be offering their work during the three days of festival and paintings by Art Center Gallery Artists.

Cohasset resident WCVB-TV news anchorman Anthony Everett will auction off the signature Festival Painting by artist Michael Moss. All are invited to welcome Festival at this gala reception as the Art Center brings back popular vocalist Les Sampou. Proceeds will support the exhibitions and educational programs of the South Shore Art Center. For reservations or for more information, call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Andrea Freeman, Providence College graduate.

MISSING CAT

A three-year-old male cat, which was recently adopted by a family in the West Corner area, is missing. He is grey and white with a little bit of black and weighs about 13 pounds. He answers to "George." If you see him, please call 781-925-9393.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Elinor Whitney Kennedy is celebrating her 99th birthday today, June 7! She taught at the old Osgood School for 30 years. Many will remember her love of wildflowers. She now resides at the New England Friends Home in Hingham atop Turkey Hill. Mrs. Kennedy is very alert. She keeps up with all the Cohasset happenings, paints, writes poetry, and enjoys conversation and music. She is truly a grand lady, who is loved and fondly remembered by her hundreds of "kids"! Happy Birthday!

That is all for this week. Please send me all Birthday, Graduation and other important news in one of the following ways. All photos are welcomed as well and can be emailed to myself or Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com or dropped off at Cohasset News. Email: jenpiep@yahoo.com

Old Ship history buffs at work on church pews

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Old Ship meetinghouse has survived more than three centuries because over time, people cared about its preservation.

And a group of enthusiastic church members — fondly dubbed the "Old Ship Polishers" — is no different. The dozen or so helpers, who meet about once a month, are about one-quarter the way through the painstaking task of cleaning and polishing the dozens of box pews in the structure that dates back to 1681.

"We want them to look well loved."
— Marty Saunders,
Old Ship polisher

"We want them to look well loved," says Marty Saunders, the group's organizer, who is co-chairman of the building committee for First Parish at Old Ship.

The box pews — so named because they form a square in which families sit to hear the Sunday sermons — haven't been cleaned in 71 years. It was back in 1930, Saunders explained, that a major restoration effort at the meetinghouse took place.

Decades earlier, in the 1860s, the interior of the meetinghouse was remodeled in a Victorian style and the familiar square pews were torn out and replaced with benches. But luckily many families — whose descendants had paid for the original box pews — took them home. Some of those families brought them back in 1930 when the church returned to its colonial roots during a major restoration effort.

The "original" pews — including the one used by Revolutionary War hero and town father Maj. Gen. Benjamin Lincoln and his descendants — are distinctive because the decorative "spindles" in the pew walls turn. In the "new" 1930s pews, the spindles are fixed. But otherwise the pews are identical and there is almost no way to tell the old from the "new."

To make sure the cleaning is done without any damage to the wood, the parish called in wooden objects conservator, Melissa Carr of Arlington, who explained the process.

Anita Franks of Hingham gives box pew No. 54 some tender loving care. Franks is part of the Old Ship Polishers, a group of church members who are cleaning the historic pews inside the 1681 meetinghouse. Old Ship served as the First Parish in Cohasset before Cohasset broke away from Hingham.

The Old Ship Polishers use distilled water and soft cotton rags to wipe the pews down, and then they use a mild "de-ionized" cleaning agent, rinse that off and finish with a thin coat of paste wax, the kind that is used on bowling alleys. Wax is used instead of oils, which actually attract dirt.

The point is not to take off the patina of age but to remove the "boulders," a friendly nickname, the polishers gave the tough grime.

"Our goal is not to take it back to brand-new," says Elizabeth Morse of Cohasset, one of the volunteers on the job last Friday.

Each polisher does a pew from start to finish and many are finding a connection with the pews and their history.

"When you clean your church you are close to the actual fabric of the building, there is a bond here that goes beyond the Sunday morning service," Morse says.

Some discoveries include a secret panel in one pew and a 300-year-old fold-out child seat in another.

Back in the 1700s when the square pews replaced the original backless benches, the church building was a dark, cold place. Heating wasn't added until1822 when stoves were installed and there was no lighting until oil lamps were used in the 1870s. The floors of the pews were built up several inches for warmth because, in those days, the church had no foundation. Families would put cloaks and blankets around the walls of the pews and sit and face each other. During the long sermons, church reeves or attendants would make sure adults didn't fall asleep by using a feather, Saunders says.

According to the church history pamphlet, the name Old Ship probably comes from the building's roof structure that if inverted, would resemble the hull of a ship. But from the inside of the church, the roof was hidden from view with a ceiling until the 1930s restoration project when the axe-hewn frames that support the roof were exposed.

Carr, the wooden objects conservator, says part of conserving wood is protecting the information found there, such as tool marks or remains of old finishes.

"Whatever you do you try to be sure it is able to be undone by the next person who might have more information about the piece," Carr says.

The priority with the pews was to maintain their well lived-in look, she said. "The point is not to scrub them raw so they looked skinned," Carr explained. "It's not hard to go too far here and the hardest thing in the world is to put dirt back on a piece."

Carr said the vertical services won't need another cleaning for a long time — but horizontal surfaces like the hand rails might need a fresh coat of wax in about three years.

"Wax doesn't disappear, it only wears off," she says.

Carr said when it comes to historic places, Old Ship is in a class by itself because of the care it has received over the centuries.

"Because of those involved with it now and those involved with it before, I see a place that is very old and very well maintained," she says.

Saunders, the leader of the polishers, keeps a sheet with details about which of the 84 pews have been cleaned and which are partially cleaned. She also notes which ones have wobbly hinges, cracked spindles, loose handles, protruding nails and even wads of gum under the seats.

For Saunders, the pew project is all part of the continuum of Old Ship, which is the oldest church in continuous use in the country and was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 1963. For more than a century, Old Ship served as both meetinghouse and church. Town meetings were held here until 1780.

"Talk about history, American history was made here," Saunders says proudly.

OPINION

A message to graduates

The future holds much promise for you. Unemployment is at a 30-year low. Technology advances, thanks to the computer, are revolutionizing the workplace. The information age is making the world a smaller place. The Internet allows a steady stream of ideas to be exchanged around the globe. As a result, cultural barriers are being penetrated at a dazzling pace.

When you were born, the shadow of the Cold War loomed over the planet. Nuclear weapons were stockpiled by the U.S. and the former Soviet Union. The fear of a nuclear holocaust prompted many to speculate what "the day after" in the U.S. would be like.

These fears were eased several years after your birth when the Iron Curtain nations loosened themselves from the dying grasps of the Soviet Union. You probably don't remember that historic night in downtown Berlin when the Berlin Wall fell. But the peace that followed is allowing the global economy to expand to new frontiers while the information age continues unabated.

These events have created more opportunities for you in the years ahead. These choices also enable you to help make this world a better place. Remember, having a well-paying career is not an end within itself. Whatever path you choose, strive toward the values which can't be bought.

Shortly after the Civil War ended, Confederate Army general Robert E. Lee, became nearly penniless. The Confederacy's defeat left the southern states in an economic shambles. Lee had been stripped of his right to vote. Within weeks following the war, Lee was approached by a businessman who wanted to use his name for a new firm. Although the Confederacy had been defeated, Lee's name held high esteem among southerners. Lee did not drink alcohol or smoke, and was faithful toward his wife. He never believed in slavery and had freed several upon inheriting them from his father. Although Lee was poor he turned down the offer. "My name is not for sale," Lee flatly said. When Lee died in 1870, his funeral was well attended by former foes and friends alike. Nearly 130 years later, Lee remains admired by Americans from both northern and southern states.

The decisions you make will define your name within the years ahead. The world offers a variety of career enticements which promise a shortcut toward fame and fortune.

All too often these shortcuts fail to deliver the goods they promise. Don't sell yourselves short. There are no easy ways to success. Beware of the allure material goods espouse. Their pleasures are temporary. Approach your career path toward making the world around you a better place.

There are a lot of young adults between ages 18 to 24 with shattered dreams. Many of them didn't have the privilege of receiving a fine education or comfortable home.

During the days and weeks ahead, take time to recall the people who've helped you along the way. Don't forget to thank your parents for the sacrifices they made so you could enjoy your school years. Remember the countless times they stood alongside a chilly ball field to watch you play and then drove you home. Don't forget how they rushed home from work to get you to your music lessons, or Little League games. Their encouragement and efforts toward helping you discover your abilities cannot be calculated. Always remain open toward their advice.

Be sure to thank your teachers and coaches. Many of them could have entered careers with more pay but found greater satisfaction with helping you learn. They need to know how much their efforts meant to you.

Your graduation day is something you've earned. Treasure its importance. Use it as a launching pad toward achieving excellence in both your career path and your community.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wrong message

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to you to express my feelings and the feelings of many veterans who took the time on Monday, Memorial Day, to honor and remember the veterans and the war heroes of Cohasset.

When we passed by Barnes Field at 8:45 a.m., we saw little league baseball underway at the field. What is the message that is being sent to the young boys and girls of Cohasset?

On a day that the nation stops to honor and remember our war heroes, the men and women that answered their nation's call, served and sacrificed for the freedoms we enjoy today in America — how is the baseball game more important, or even contemplated, on Memorial Day morning?

For your information, 22 young Cohasset men died for this country, six of which played at Barnes Field in the late-1950s. Wouldn't it be good for the boys and girls who play today to know that they too, may be called to serve at some point in their lives, and for them to be brought up learning to respect and honor veterans?

I believe you should take a look at your scheduling requirements and be sure your priorities are in order; baseball is a game and nothing more. Generations of young people need to be taught that remembering and honoring American servicemen and veterans comes first on Memorial Day.

Glenn A. Pratt, Chairman,
Veterans Memorial Committee

Editors note: Mr. Pratt provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter for publication.

Game schedule

482 King Street

Thank you for your letter of May 29, 2001, I want to assure you that the scheduling of the 8 a.m. game on Memorial Day was in no way intended as a slight to our veterans, in fact, quite the opposite is true. Last winter when we struggled to put together a schedule using the limited fields that are available this season, we spent a great deal of time discussing the scheduling of this particular game. We all agreed that notwithstanding our lack of fields, no games would be scheduled at a time that would conflict with the Memorial Day parade. We scheduled this one game on the morning of Memorial Day, with a specific ending time of 10 a.m. in order to give our players and parents plenty of time to view the parade at the common or at the harbor. We thought that having Cohasset's children lining the parade route in their Little League uniforms would be a poignant reminder of the American way of life our veterans have fought to preserve and for which out heroes gave their lives.

Thank you also for sending me the list of Cohasset men who gave their lives for our country. I am very familiar with the list and knew several our Vietnam War heroes. Although I was a child at the time, I remember well the days when news hit town that one of our boys had fallen. On each occasion, I remember that it seemed as though the whole town cried together. I also remember well the evening Gerard Keating came to my house and swore me into the selective service. I could not imagine how he felt administering the oath only a few years after his son had died in Vietnam.

Although I hope this letter has satisfactorily explained the scheduling of this game, I suspect that you and other veterans will continue to believe that it would be better not to play any baseball games on Memorial Day mornings. I believe that when considering an issue such as this, the views of our veterans must be respected above all other factors. I will, therefore, commit to you that in the future, no Cohasset Little League games will be scheduled for the morning of Memorial Day.

Thank you for bringing the views of our veterans to my attention. Thank you also for all the work that you do for our town, your support of our veterans and your support of the Cohasset Little League.

Mark G. DeGiacomo,
President of the Cohasset Youth
Baseball & Softball Association

COHASSET CARES

Where to obtain PAYT bags

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Remember, on Sunday, July 1, Pay-As-You-Throw goes into effect at the RTF. Waste which cannot be recycled must be paid for using either blue 30-gal. bags with white TOWN OF COHASSET label at $1 each or similarly-colored and labeled 15-gal. bags for 50 cents each.

When we purchase our $50 all-facilities sticker at the Town Hall this month, we may purchase PAYT bags at the same time, in packs of 10, this month only.

Otherwise, starting June 4, the PAYT bags will be for sale at the DPW, RTF, and the following local stores:

- COHASSET FOOD MART
- COHASSET HARDWARE
- FIORI EXXON
- JOSEPH'S HARDWARE

For the rest of this month we must ready ourselves by concentrating on exactly what can be recycled and what cannot.

For the rest of this month of June we must ready ourselves by concentrating on exactly what can be recycled and what cannot be and not waiting until July 1 to start the process. Luckily, only a few items cannot be recycled — styrofoam, chip bags, celluloid, food plastics — and a complete, handy chart of recyclables and an explanation of the whole Pay-As-You-Throw system is available at the RTF now. Please try to remember to pick up your leaflet at the RTF this month! Best wishes and see you next time. Remember, we're all in this together!

Starting July 1st a guard will be checking stickers at the RTF. No one without a current all-facilities sticker will be allowed to use the facility.

When you purchase your $50 all-facilities sticker [and bags] at the Town Hall, please pick up a copy of the leaflet explaining PAYT. The leaflet contains a handy chart suitable for framing [on the fridge].

Library building fund tops $1 million!

By Patience G. Towle and Sheila S. Evans
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

— COMMENTARY —

Two very large gifts to the Cohasset Library Building Fund have jumped its total to more than $1 million, bringing the Fund within reach of its goal. Donald E. Staszko and his wife Dr. Barbara L. O'Pray have very generously committed $100,000 to name the handsome Reading Room of the new library.

Mr. Staszko has lived in Cohasset since he was a teenager and has said that he would like to "give back" to the town all that it has meant to him and his family. The Reading Room will be located in the former auditorium of the old Osgood School and will have a high, vaulted ceiling that will showcase its six Palladium windows. The Room will house the library's reference collection, study tables with outlets for laptop computers, as well as twelve computers with connections to the internet for public use.

An anonymous commitment of $90,000 to the Fund will name the Library's new Meeting Room and the adjacent Community Room. These wonderful donors responded to the recent town-wide mailing, creating a surprise boost to the Building Fund campaign. The Meeting Room will be available by signup and will seat 60 persons. It will have state-of-the-art audiovisual equipment for programs of any kind. The Meeting Room can also be used without seating, or with tables and chairs, permitting a variety of different uses. Its walls will be used for art displays. The Community Room is adjacent to the Meeting Room and is designed to be able to be used in conjunction with activities in the Meeting Room. It will have modest kitchen facilities that can provide refreshments for events in the two rooms. The Community Room will also be used on a daily basis by library patrons as a pleasant place to sit to talk to friends they may see at the library, or to refresh themselves with something from the vending machines. The Meeting Room, Community Room and toilet facilities will be able to be used even if the library is not open to the public.

These wonderful donors responded to the recent town-wide mailing, creating a surprise boost to the Building Fund campaign.

Gifts of $1,000 or more will be permanently displayed on the Donor Wall of the library. Names will be listed in broad "giving categories" by size of gift. All gifts will be listed in a final Campaign Report. The Library Building Fund plans to publish a list of new donors to the Building Fund on a regular basis. If you did not receive a Library Building Fund appeal or have any other questions, please call Patience Towle at (781) 383-1954.

Trustees Patience Towle and Sheila Evans are also president and secretary, respectively, of the Library Building Fund.

Valuing land for 2002 revaluation

ASSESSMENTS

ELSA MILLER

First, thank you for tuning into our cable night. We had some really good questions. A few of them I would like to expand upon. One question that always seems to come up is about the land values. "I have a 20,000 square foot lot and my neighbor has 40,000 square foot lot, why isn't my assessment half the value of my neighbor's?

Prior to zoning, lot sizes varied depending on when and where the property was developed. For example, the "Hill" has primarily 10,000 to 18,000 square foot lots and the Stockbridge area is mostly 5,000 to 7,000 square foot lots. Other areas in the Atlantic Ave and Jerusalem Road vicinity may have lots that are over an acre.

Land values, for assessing purposes, are primarily based on the fact that the lot or parcel can support a house.

When zoning came in, residential areas were delineated and minimum lot size was specified. Hence lots developed after zoning, are typically larger than the pre-existing lots in the neighborhood. So today, there are lots with a house on them that may be 10,000 square feet next to a lot that is 35,000 square feet. Each of the lots is a building lot. One is a grand-fathered lot, having existed prior to zoning changes, and one meets current regulation. In either case, both lots can support only one home. Land values, for assessing purposes, are primarily based on the fact that the lot or parcel can support a house. The excess land becomes the land over the necessary size to meet current zoning. It adds an insignificant amount of value to the primary building lot. Therefore, there is not a wide disparity between land value assessments.

Elsa Miller is chairman of the Board of Assessors.

HEALTH NOTES

Changes in town nursing service

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

After a long relationship with the Social Service League of Cohasset which has been of great benefit to the Town, the Board of Health has requested that the Public Health Nurse become a Town employee.

There are several reasons for this change. First, there is a financial saving to the Town, but, there will also be an opportunity for an expanded spectrum of services better integrated with Board of Health programs, available to the town.

Accordingly, on July 2, 2001, upon expiration of the contract with the Social Service League, Judy Fitzsimmons, the Public Health Nurse will move to the Town Hall. Her office will be next to the Building Inspector's office (the former mail room) on the first floor. Judy's office hours will be Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8:30 to 11:00 a.m., and the second Thursday in the month, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Senior Center of the Community Center; and on the Fourth Thursday, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Senior Housing facility at 60 Elm St.

The Board of Health will maintain a list of services which will be available from the Town Nurse, and we are now preparing a calendar of health related events which may be expected over the next year. These will consist of such activities as Flue Shots and flue shots, health screenings, educational health programs, and joint programs with other Town agencies.

We cannot overemphasize the contribution of the Social Service League to the Town's health program. The league provides volunteers for many of the town's health related activities. When the blood bank comes to town, volunteers are provided by the League; when flu shots are given, the League is there; the Meals on Wheels Program is operated by the League, and there are countless other acts of caring support provided by this group which the Town is fortunate to have.

Pesticides and schools

Last week at the regular Board of Health meeting Dr. Edward Malvey, Superintendent of Schools for Cohasset met with a representative of the DEP's Pesticides Bureau to discuss the application of pesticides and other issues related to toxics in the schools. The discussions will result in a plan by the school to utilize Integrated Pest Management in the schools, and work with the Department of Public Works to ensure that the provisions of the pesticides laws are enforced. The school system is undertaking a major building program this summer which will include asbestos removal, and other procedures which may create a hazardous environment. Frequent notices will be made concerning these activities, and we will try to keep you informed.

Bikes, skates & helmets

Apparently, it has become the in thing not to wear helmets when biking and roller-blading. Statistics about these things are never as close to home as seeing a kid going to the emergency room with a head injury. It wasn't long ago that the Pond Street hill claimed a roller-blader and a skateboarder in accidents, both without helmets. The roller-blader was transported to the South Shore Hospital with extensive injuries, and the emergency response team gave first aid to the skate boarder, who lost considerable skin. Statistics support the fact that helmets save lives. Use helmets, they were purchased out of love and concern.

Stephen N. Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

Fondness for the (hic) Bush family

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't like to admit it, being a Jimmy Burke, bread-and-butter Democrat myself, but I'm developing a crush on the Bush family.

Oh, it's not political. I still think oilmen are profiteers. I still think much of the money we spend for defense is wasted. I'd hate to see any more Antonino Scalias and Clarence Thomases on the Supreme Court. I think the government should stay out of my bedroom, although nothing very exciting happens there anymore.

My love affair with the Bush family is strictly personal.

It began around 20 years ago, when George H. W. was running against Ronnie Reagan and his "voodoo economics," for the Republican nomination.

I was interviewing H.W.'s wife, Barbara, who was on the campaign trail for him, and I asked her one of those stupid questions that reporters tend to ask the wives of politicians when they run out of ideas, like what does George think of the future of the Fore River shipyard?

"I know you're having problems with your shipyard," she said, "and I know that I'm not really up on some issues as I should be. But I'm a terribly good housewife."

Think of how Hillary or Eleanor would have handled that one.

My affection for the Bushes went up a notch when, as president, H.W. was heard to say: "I do not like broccoli and I haven't liked it since I was a little kid and my mother made me eat it. And I'm president of the United States and I'm not going to eat anymore broccoli."

I'm partial to broccoli myself but if H.W. was talking about okra he would have had my complete sympathy.

That's why I wasn't too alarmed the other day when H. W.'s twin granddaughters, Jenna and Barbara, were busted for possessing some and trying to possess more alcohol than Texas law allows, the number being none since the twins are only 19 years old.

It was Barbara's first offense but Jenna's second and, according to a law signed by their father, George W., when he was governor, a third offense calls for six months in the slam.

Both girls are college students, Jenna at Texas and Barbara at Yale, and in the spirit of college kids everywhere, carried the usual college student equipment — fake IDs. The bar happened to be Chuy's in Austin but if they were students at BC it could have been Mary Anns or at BU it could have been The Dugout.

I never had a fake ID when I was in college since I spent my teen years working for my uncle and trying to convince skeptical bartenders from Jacksonville, Fla., to Morehead City, N.C. to San Diego that I was at least 21.

In other words, Jenna and Barbara's excellent adventure made another generation of Bushes one of us.

And leave it to Barbara (the elder) to have the last word.

Recalling that her son, George W. (the President), had been fined $150 and lost his license 25 years ago for driving under the influence in Maine, she rolled her eyes and cracked to a Junior League dinner in Indianapolis:

"Now he's getting back some of his own."

Rocks and ledges are part of Cohasset's natural character

LOCAL VIEW

RICH SILVIA

I want to congratulate Jim Shipsky for his insightful article in the Mariner regarding the destruction of Cohasset's rocks and ledges.

My great grandfather, Manual Silvia, devoted his life to blasting ledge for the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and various contractors in Cohasset and neighboring towns. He was an amateur geologist who was infatuated with the beauty, majesty, and story-telling ability of these most elderly links to earth's record. I have been told that he had a deep reverence for all that went into the ever-evolving life of our stone coinhabitants.

My grandfather, Alfred Silvia, was raised to share these same values. Alfred was the first permanent firefighter in Cohasset and a longtime volunteer to the Humane Society's surf boat rescue crew, which used to launch their boats into Cohasset's pounding surf during Nor'easters, in an effort to save people who were shipwrecked on our rocky coast.

While attending elementary school in Cohasset, in the 1940's and 50's, my classmates and I were often fortunate enough to be taken on field trips to various geological points of interest around town. Elders would explain the significance of various rocks and ledges and relate how Quonahassit natives had lived here, in a symbiotic relationship, with their environment for thousands of years before the Europeans arrived. These original inhabitants of our land, whose local population was in the thousands before the Europeans brought them the deadly smallpox virus, understood that we are a part of "Mother Earth. As such we will eventually be returned to Her, and that She should be respected and revered for all with which She has blessed us.

In this age of narcissism, conspicuous consumption, greed, and disconnection, is it any wonder that those who "get what they want" will bulldoze through, at any cost, proposals which lack any respect for those human and natural treasures which offer the least vocal opposition?

Jim's thoughts, laid out openly to the community, have caused me to pause and think, like a fog horn on Minot's Ledge, sounding a deep mournful warning: "Pay attention. . . think about where you are going!"

In 1614 Capt. John Smith was so favorably impressed with the striking nature and character of Quonahasset's rocky coast that he later wrote about it when he had returned home to England: ". . . tracts of large long ledges of diverse sorts,. . . so strangely divided with tinctured veins of divers colours. . . so resemblith the coast of Devonshire. . . ." * * A Description of New England, Capt. John Smith, London 1616.

As evidenced by the enthusiastic spirit of all of the townsfolk who cheered during the ground-breaking ceremony at Cohasset High School, there is still a strong sense of community here. I believe that Cohasset as a community has high expectations for the future. We cherish our threatened natural resources, and fully expect our community leaders and planners to take whatever steps are "reasonably" necessary to protect those resources. It is important to protect what remains of Cohasset's ledge whenever possible. Progress is not our enemy. It's the callous and all too often cavalier attitude toward our precious natural resources for which we must be ever vigilant.

All over town precious and beautiful ledge is being wastefully blasted out of existence because it is in someone's way! Beauty is often in the eye of the beholder. Please take a few minutes to view the grounds at the Light Keepers House on Government Island. There you will be treated to the elegant presentation of ledge, gardens and community space so beautifully designed and laid out that it may help to awaken and inspire you. At the same time try to imagine what it would have been like had all of the ledge been blasted away for the sake of a few more parking spaces!

I urge the Selectmen, Planning Board and others to immediately make room on their agenda for discussions regarding the creation of a bylaw designed to provide for the "reasonable" protection of something as basic to Cohasset's character as our granite ledge?

Rich Silvia lives at 445 Beechwood St.

Thanks to all for Family fun event

TO THE EDITOR:

The committee of the Family Fun Concert held recently at the Sullivan Gym at CMHS would like to send a huge thank you to all of you who supported this event.

The Deer Hill fifth-grade students who worked so hard in ticket sales, poster making, set-up and clean up, along with the wonderful families who also helped — our hats are off to you! To all the staff, custodians and town help, thank you for all the hours, sweat and manpower you gave. To the staff in the Deer Hill office, the teachers for putting up with the constant reminders, thank you! A huge, special thanks goes out to Deer Hill Principal Paul Callahan, who was with us every step of the way, morning, noon and night! This event was initially the brainchild of one and then, was put into play by many.

Every year, the sixth grade goes to Camp Bournedale in late September on a wonderful learning adventure. The cost for this program is the responsibility of parents and is offset by fundraising programs through the school. One of our objectives was to start a family fundraiser in which we all were able to come together, enjoy family and friends and show everyone how wonderful it really can be when "town spirit" is brought together in this kind of event. Guess what, it worked!

More than 800 people were at this concert and Radio Disney, WATD radio and the feature presentation, "Ball in the House" were there to make it the success that it was. The best part for us all was seeing parents, friends and most of all the kids enjoy this great event. We sincerely hope that it is the first of many family events to come and that all of you will continue to spread the word when it is time and come show us the town-wide pride and involvement that makes these things so worthwhile! As the saying goes, "It takes a village...."

The Family Fun Committee.

Rusty Skippers say 'thank you'

TO THE EDITOR:

In your recent editorial cheering the return of the CMHS band to the Memorial Day Parade (three cheers for that!), you referred to our band as "the beloved Rusty Skippers". On behalf of the band, I thank you for your continued enthusiastic support of our musical endeavors. Also, many thanks publicly to Steve Biagini, Director of Instrumental Music at Deer Hill School, for his ongoing efforts on our behalf. Without Steve's time and expertise, we would not be so musical; in fact, we probably would not exist! We are so fortunate to have him as our Director.

The weekend of the Arts Festival marks our sixth anniversary. I wonder if the Reverend Ed Atkinson could have imagined this when he suggested a town-wide band for the 1995 Harborfest. We will be playing for the Arts Festival on Saturday the 16th at 11 a.m. As always, we welcome new members to join the Rusty Skippers, and would look forward to meeting them on the 16th.

Senior housing group fights Town Meeting vote

Worries about impact of zoning by-law change

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Senior Housing Committee sent a letter to state Attorney General Thomas Reilly urging him to take a close look at a Town Meeting vote that eliminated use variances from the town's zoning bylaws.

The committee fears the article – or item of business that was before town meeting – could stop attempts to develop badly needed housing for senior citizens in town.

Article 30 on the Town Meeting warrant originally was aimed at prohibiting use variances for private sanitary landfills and other waste facilities in the Light Industry zoning district. However, an amendment made on the floor by Robert Sturdy of the town Planning Board changed the article to prohibit use variances from all districts.

Senior Housing Committee Chairman Jim Lagrotteria says not only were people not made aware of the full implication of the article, but the amendment exceeded the original intent of the article.

"There was a lot of heavy blinking that day," said Lagrotteria of the eight-hour-long Town Meeting. "There was a lot of zoning articles, and nobody paid any attention to it. It was proposed by the Planning Board, and everybody said, 'Oh, OK.'"

Lagrotteria said it was two days later he realized the implications the amendment could have on the movement for senior housing in Cohasset.

"It went from prohibiting landfills from a certain district in town to prohibiting anything in any district other than what it was designed for," he said. "Let's say you have a 14-room house, and you have an elderly mother you want to create an apartment for. You wouldn't even have the right to go before the zoning board and ask for a variance."

Lagrotteria said it would also prevent developers, who own commercial land, from building senior housing. "They don't even have the right to file an application," he said.

Town counsel Paul DeRensis asked the committee to rescind its letter to Reilly but the board voted not to.

The senior housing committee asked selectmen to also send a letter to Reilly asking him to review the article. The board said it couldn't assume Town Counsel or Town Meeting made a mistake and asked DeRensis for an opinion.

DeRensis said in a letter to selectmen last week that the amendment was legal and did not exceed the original intent of the article. But he did not comment on whether the Town Meeting vote would prevent use variances in all districts and therefore, stop efforts to develop senior housing.

Lagrotteria said the change wouldn't affect the two parcels of town-owned land the senior housing committee is looking at for sites for senior housing — a 14-acre lot off Pleasant Street and a 10-acre parcel off Route 3A next to Red Fox Lane because they are residentially zoned.

The state attorney general's office reviews all zoning and bylaw-related articles passed at Town Meetings, and rules on their validity before they become law in that town.

A decision from Reilly's office will be made sometime this summer.

Massport sets the record straight

By Thomas J. Kinton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

— COMMENTARY —

The residents of the South Shore deserve to hear the facts about New England's premier airport and not the rash rhetoric of a small band of activists intent on distorting the record for their own purposes. Logan International Airport is a public infrastructure asset situated near the millions of leisure and business travelers that come from the Greater Boston area. These people depend on Logan for their vacations, family reunions, business deals, and picking up their sons and daughters during Winter Break. Logan provides more than 27 million passengers access to their destinations and the folks at Massport are working hard to make that experience better, more efficient, and more friendly.

Over the past year, under the leadership of Executive Director Virginia Buckingham, Massport has been nationally recognized for imposing tough customer service standards on the airlines, proposing a smart demand management policy in case Logan ever becomes overscheduled (like LaGuardia is today), pushing for the regionalization of air travel and promoting alternatives to Logan, and leading the charge on runway construction here and across the country.

Massport has a proud record of initiatives to further enhance the passenger experience at Logan, but we are also dealing with the number one complaint: delays. A new runway at Logan will fix a deficiency in the airport's runway layout and cut delays by one-third. This 5,000 feet of concrete will virtually eliminate the delays over which Massport has control and bump Logan off the list of top ten most delayed airports. In addition, by improving the efficiency of Logan, the runway will improve air quality, as aircraft will spend less time idling on taxiways and circling overhead. The most recent study estimates that a new runway and taxiway at Logan will remove 500 to 700 tons of pollution a year from the air. One thing the runway will not do is increase the airport's overall capacity. Last month a FAA study confirmed this, while it recommended a new runway as a key solution to chronic delays at Logan.

In terms of increased capacity, Massport is looking to the region's other airports to handle the bulk of the growth in air travel. The success of regionalization has been startling, over the past two years passenger growth at Logan has been held under two percent and we have seen 30,000 fewer flights than we did in 1998. A new runway will give air traffic controllers another tool to distribute flights more equitably. So while flights on one runway may increase, others will decrease. Overall the number of flights over Hingham and the South Shore would not change as a result of building the new landing strip and residents should not experience any noticeable difference in noise. In fact, noise is expected to decrease as the airlines continue to introduce quieter planes at Logan. Traditionally, Logan has been a leader in having amongst the quietest aircraft fleets in the country.

While some opponents have employed scare tactics warning of plummeting property values and a diminished quality of life on the South Shore, the facts just don't support it. For example, property values in the highest impacted communities, those abutting Logan, have increased by 48 percent since 1990 while passenger growth increased by 18 percent during the same period. As we continue the public process and discuss the proposed runway at Logan, it is important to focus on the facts and recognize that we all benefit if we approach this issue honestly.

Thomas J. Kinton is Director of Aviation at Massport.

Sympathy appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Osgood School staff is most grateful for the many kind, caring and generous expressions of sympathy. Clearly, the sudden loss of our colleague, Barbara McCabe came as an unexpected shock. The outpouring of support comforted us as we turned our concern and attention to the children of Osgood School.

We wish to extend our thanks to the parents, the friends, the Deer Hill staff and the CTA who reached out to us during the difficult and say days following the news of Barbara's death. A special note of thanks to Mary Ernst and Arthur Roebuck who came to our assistance on very short notice in preparing food for the reception following the Mass and burial.

A fund has been established for Barbara's three daughters. Contributions may be made to The McCabe Children's Trust fund, c/o Rockland Trust, Columbia Rd., Hanover 02339.

Again, our sincere thanks for the efforts on our behalf.

A truck dumps a load of dirt at the gravel pit off North Main Street. The town may develop playing fields at the site.

Town eyes gravel pit for fields

Meeting if money is needed to complete the project.

The committee was formed in response to years of concerns and complaints regarding the use of the pits by area residents.

From 1999 through 2000, contractors working on the town's sewer installation project used the pits as a staging area to store excavated earth from the project. Before that, the pits were used as a storage area for the town's public works department, and was the original source for the town's gravel.

In the meantime, however, dump trucks have been delivering tons of dirt every day this week as part of the onset of the school construction project. In order to build the new athletic complex behind the middle/high school, contractors have to haul off 25,000 cubic yards of earth. To save money, the town opted to have the fill trucked into the gravel pits instead of the more expensive option of transporting it to a site out of town. Another 1,000 cubic yards will be given to the upcoming Woodside Cemetery expansion project.

Haddad said the result should be an area in the gravel pit measuring nearly 200 yards by 200 yards being raised between six and 10 feet. Since starting Monday, the trucks have made an average of 10 trips an hour from the Pond Street construction site, up Route 3A, to North Main Street, and already hauled more than 7,500 yards.

He expects it to take up to a month to transfer all 25,000 cubic yards.

Haddad said there have been complaints about noise and dust from neighbors of both the school and North Main Street, and has ordered street sweepers out to clean up the streets.

He told selectmen Tuesday that the contractors have done everything asked of them and asked the neighbors to be patient.

Historic Hingham homes are on tour

The 77th Annual Tour of Historic Hingham Homes and Buildings will take place on Wednesday, June 20, from 1 to 8:30 p.m.

The Captain Benjamin Loring House is a double house, with the earliest half built about 1688 in the colonial style and the other half built about 1785 in the Federal style. Original details enable visitors to compare the two interiors. The Reuben Thomas House is a charming 1838 Cape with later additions, while the updated 1848 Greek Revival home of Captain Nathan Eldridge compliments the other homes in its historic streetscape.

The Lincoln House Annex was originally part of a fashionable summer boarding house, but was moved next door in the 1870's. A dramatic Colonial Revival porch and entrance were added in the 1890's. The Lawrence Enos House is the newest home, designed in 1931 by noted architect Charles Everett in the Georgian Revival style.

Tickets are $15 in advance at Bowl and Board in Hingham Square and the Hingham Public Library, Collins Road. On tour day tickets are $18 and will be sold only at the Old Ordinary, 21 Lincoln Street after 10 a.m.

To order tickets by mail, send a SASE and your check to the Hingham Historical Society, P.O. Box 434, Hingham, MA 02043. Mark the envelope "House Tour". For further information call 781-749-1851 or 781-749-0664.

Cohasset High School to graduate class of achievers

MCAS scores rank them in the top four or five high schools in the commonwealth."

The senior class ranked first in the state on the 1998 MCAS test, when they were 10th graders.

He also said the class had distinguished themselves in the arts, and athletically. The boys soccer team reached the south sectional semi-finals this past fall, and the boys track team won the first South Shore League championship in a number of years this spring.

"Even though Cohasset is the smallest school in the league, they've been very, very competitive in all sports,' Jones said.

Jones commended a number of students who earned classroom credits outside of the high school building doing independent studies on their personal interests.

"This class was highly motivated, comfortable with adults, poised, able to set goals for themselves and pursue those goals," he said. "And they have taken on some responsibilities that indicate a level of maturity unusual for high school students."

He mentioned the recent 50th anniversary celebration, where not only did the seniors show up, but led the rest of the school out to Alumni Field for the groundbreaking ceremony.

"Here they are at the end of the school year, when they could have blown off the event not even come," Jones said. "But they demonstrated their commitment to the school and sense of responsibility and desire to maintain leadership to the very end of their senior year."

Jones said it has been gratifying watching the seniors "grow and become young adults, become learners and develop their own individual talents.

"Our students seem to approach learning with a passion," he continued. "Some distinguish themselves scholastically, some through the arts, and some public service. But all seem to be passionately involved in what they're doing."

Class president Justin Langham said part of the class' strength came from its differences. "We were able to come together in small school, where everyone knows each other, and at the same time outside of school, people hung out in different groups," he said. "We're tight, but diverse."

Their overall excellence, Jones said, led the senior class to have a "remarkable success rate" getting into the colleges of their choice. Once again, 95 percent of the graduating class has been accepted to a four-year college.

The Class of 2001 will also be the final class to graduate from the current middle/high school building. Already tons of dirt are being removed from behind the high school in preparation for the multi-million dollar renovation and expansion of the school building. Even though the project won't be finished for two years, the school will look drastically different next year, and Jones said this year's seniors have appreciated that fact.

He made point to mention student council president Ben Bixby, who gave a brief speech at the groundbreaking ceremony two weeks ago.

"I was so impressed at how much Ben appreciated the significance of that moment and how articulated his sense of our tradition and the class' place in that tradition."

Bixby said the class appreciates not having to "live through the renovations."

The ceremony will also honor three retiring teachers, Ron Emmons, George Fortin, and Dennis Walsh, who Jones said had a combined 90 years of teaching experience between them.

The ceremony will be held rain or shine under the tent at the South Shore Music Circus; all are welcome.

Public health nurse moves to Town Hall

cial standpoint, there was never an opportunity to do that because of the benefit issue," he said. There's currently a position at Town Hall that is unfilled, so the benefit package for Fitzsimmons is already paid for in a sense, Godzik said. The Board of Health secretary will pick up the administrative duties. The health board has also budgeted about 200 hours for a part-time nurse, who will help out when needed and fill in when Fitzsimmons is on vacation.

Godzik said the move would allow Fitzsimmons to work more closely with the Board of Health and give her more exposure.

"More people come into Town Hall," he said. Parking at St. Stephen's, which sits atop a hill, can be problematic and the street leading up to the church is currently torn up for sewer work, he said.

Fitzsimmons' office will be in the soon-to-be transformed mailroom next to the building commissioner's office on the first floor. Her door will face the vestibule and front door of Town Hall where there's considerable foot traffic.

"People will stop in to ask questions, have health screenings done or whatever," Godzik said. "It's a better way of doing things for the people of the town."

Fitzsimmons said the move is bittersweet.

"St. Stephen's was a lovely, lovely place to work and the people there couldn't be nicer. We've had a wonderful association with the Social Service League over the years," she said. "But all the public health nurses I know in towns across the state work for the town directly."

"This provides an opportunity for the Board of Health to really look at the issue of a public health nurse."

—Stephen Bobo, Board of Health

She said the prospect of working at Town Hall is "kind of exciting" because of all the people that pass through.

Fitzsimmons said the Social Service League started out as the town's own visiting nurse association, a practice that continued until the 1980s when federal legislation made a full-town administrator to deal with Medicaid and Medicare a necessity.

"The League was too small to handle it but the town wanted to continue the services of a town nurse, so they drew up the contract," she said.

The duties of the public health nurse include being responsible for all vaccines that come through. Massachusetts offers free vaccine to immunize children against certain communicable diseases; so local pediatricians will pick up the vaccines from the public health nurse. The nurse also conducts some home visits, health screenings and assessments, flu clinics and educational programs.

Fitzsimmons said no matter where the location, she loves what she does.

"I thoroughly enjoy it, it's a wonderful job," she said.

In a letter to Godzik, Motoko Deane, president of the Social Service League, said the league has offered continued support for annual health fairs, flu clinics and other programs. Deane said the league, as it conducts its strategic planning process, is waiting for direction from the Board of Health as to what its expectations are for help from the organization since nursing will not longer be a defined focus for the league.

Deane said in a telephone interview that the league has been proud to provide nursing service to the town and will remain at St. Stephen's.

"We will continue to provide counseling and other social services. We wish Judy well and will be there to help when needed," she said.

For more about the public health nurse's move to Town Hall, including hours her office will be open, see Health Notes on page 7.

Pete Maitland

The Cohasset High junior made his best throw of the year at Tuesday's State Track and Field Championships, a toss of 178-6, which earned him fifth place in the statewide field and an invite to the New England Track and Field Championships this Saturday at Winnacunnet High School in New Hampshire.

Cohasset javelin thrower advances to New England's

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Al LaFontain figured that Pete Maitland could finish anywhere between third and 15th at Tuesday's extension of the Massachusetts Track and Field championships at Holy Cross University.

So the fourth year Cohasset High head track coach pulled out all the stops in trying to gain an edge for his talented javelin thrower. When the field events of the track and field championships were postponed from Saturday at Worcester State to Tuesday at Holy Cross, he did a little research, and discovered that the Holy Cross field events were conducted on turf rather than grass.

Armed with this knowledge, the coach equipped his gifted junior with a pair of track shoes that were more conducive to turf performance.

Maitland went out and made his best throw of the year, a toss of 178-6 to take fifth and move on to the New England Track and Field Championships this Saturday at Winnacunnet High School in New Hampshire.

"I don't know if the shoes really made that big a difference," said LaFontain with a chuckle. "Pete has been throwing progressively better lately, so it's tough to say."

On his last throw, Mailtalnd uncorked a throw that topped 180 feet, which would have been a career best, but he was flagged for stepping over the line, a call the junior apparently questioned.

Maitland makes the first trackster LaFontain has taken to the New England Championships in his four years at Cohasset High.

"It's all a bonus from here,' this real excitign for Pete and me too. This will be a great expereince for him, and something he can really build on next year."

The coach assumed there was no way Maitland would finish ahead of either Whitman Hanson's Brian Cassidy (200-11) and Norwood's Brian Wilson (185-'7)—who, sure enough, went 1-2 in the competition. However, he figured it was a pretty even playing field after that, and he was proven right, as there was a difference of only 10 feet between the third and 15th place tosses.

Cohasset's Pete Maitland was a multi-event performer for the Skippers this season, but the javelin was by far his best, as he proved with his fifth place finish at the Massachusetts Track and Field Championships on Tuesday.

After two wins, tennis team draws top seed in semi-finals on Thursday

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

With two consecutive wins over Fairhaven and Canton to open the State Tournament, the Cohasset girls tennis team has proved it is for real this year.

After an 11-1 season gave them a bye in the preliminary round, the Lady Skippers played Fairhaven in the opening round, thumping them 5-0.

Sophomore Lindsay Grossman ended her match quickly, building an early lead and never letting up with a solid 6-0, 6-1 victory.

Freshman Holly Graham, not used to the spot of second singles, blew Fairhaven's senior captain Liz Delano away, 6-1, 6-1.

Senior captain Aryanna Afshar showed veteran experience with a 6-1, 6-2 shellacking of visiting junior Colleen Dawicki.

First doubles of junior captain Kelly Stone and freshman Courtney Caron overcame some early difficulties to take down a pair of seniors, 6-4, 6-3.

Freshmen Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans continued their domination of second doubles with a

Bill Grimm
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset girls varsity lacrosse team had to travel all the way to Sandwich on Monday for the first ever state tournament game in the history of the program.

Unfortunately, the long return trip north on route 3 wasn't a happy one, as the seventh seeded Sandwich squad came away with a 16-6 victory over the 12th seeded Lady Skippers.

The game was evenly matched during the early going as the Cohasset defense, led by Julie Lordan and goalie Gia Petrakis (12 saves for the game), kept the Sandwich attack at bay.

The host Blue Knights got on the board first, but sophomore first home Sera Genovese responded quickly with an unassisted goal after a beautiful face dodge to tie the score.

Sandwich got its passing and ball control game going midway through the first half, scoring seven unanswered goals to take a commanding 8-1 lead.

Forward thinking for baseball team

Skippers hope to wash away 6-14 season next year

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

It was a rough season for the Cohasset baseball Skippers, but they should have some good things to look forward to in the coming years.

Although the team finished the year with a record of 6-14, ending the season with a five game losing streak, the team showed its mettle by never giving up, even when post-season play became an impossibility.

"They scrapped every game they played," said third year manager Robert Knurek.

Next year's team will be led by a very capable class of 2002, including several who performed very well as everyday players.

One of the best all-around players for the Skippers this year was junior Tim Straughan, who led the team in RBIs, and with a .426 batting average.

Injury sidelines Krupczak at All-States

With college track on the horizon, Cohasset speedster bows out of final high school race

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

In the end, Brian Krupczak decided that running the 200-meter race in Saturday's All-State Track and Field championship simply wasn't worth the risk.

Krupczak, who graduates from Cohasset High on Saturday, would have received a high seed after winning the Class D meet the previous weekend, but did not want to chance further tearing the tendon that almost knocked him out of that Class meet.

"It was definitely a tough decision," explained Krupczak, who will run track in the fall at Washington and Lee University, where he would like to study pre-law or politics. "A part of me said this is probably your last chance in high school to run and you should let it all hang out, but then I looked at the eight seasons of track I've still got ahead of me, and decided it wasn't worth it. I made the right decision."

He added that the rainy conditions on the Worcester State College track, as well as the fact that he'd attended Cohasset High's prom the night before, helped make the deci-

Boys rout Ashland

Laxers advance to state quarterfinals with record breaking 18-5 win

The tournament scoring records that took Cohasset boys' lacrosse 10 years to set lasted less than a week, as the Skippers exploded for 11 second-half goals and demolished Ashland 18-5 in an Div. 2 EMass tournament second-round match-up.

The Tri-Valley League visitors had lost to Cohasset by a more respectable 10-7 margin on May 23, but on Monday night they could only beat the Skippers on number of minutes spent in the penalty box.

With five Ashland penalties in the game's final three minutes alone, the referees halted the action with nearly a minute to play, in effect awarding Cohasset a technical knock-out.

"That's something you rarely see," said Head Coach Kevin Orcutt. "But they'd been using their sticks recklessly for much of the game, and it was definitely getting out of hand at the end."

On the positive side, Cohasset clicked both offensively and defensively. Moving the ball well, and finding open men on the crease, the Cohasset attack – despite losing sophomore Curt Kahn to two brutal slashes in the second and third quarters – surgically dissected Ashland's slower and less skilled defenders.

Junior Jason Moore broke Eric Libby's single-game point total record with five goals and three assists, while classmate Paul Previte registered five goals and a pair of assists. Moore and Previte now share the record for most goals in a tournament game. Libby, for his part, had another fine contribution, picking up two goals and two assists.

In all, eight Skippers found the back of the net, including sophomore Matt Davis (two goals), soph Tom Anderson (a goal and two assists), senior Ronan Buick (a goal and an assist), junior Sean Chase (a goal and an assist), and soph Robert Hickey (one goal).

Freshman midfielder Mark Davis picked up the first point of his career, assisting on Chase's goal. And senior co-captain Geoff McWilliams grabbed his second assist of the year, on a coast-to-coast clearing run, passing to Moore in the midst of a three-minute, six-goal blitz that put the game away in the middle of the third quarter.

Youth Lacrosse has another strong weekend

By Chuck Jaffe
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In the final weekend of regularly scheduled games for the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, Cohasset's youth program continued a strong season, winning three games and losing two close ones.

The action started on Friday, when the 14-and-Under (14-U) team played a tough, physical Marshfield squad. A lackadaisical start doomed Cohasset for the night, with Marshfield controlling nearly every face-off and dominating ground balls en route to a 7-1 halftime lead. Cohasset's lone goal was scored by Jake Previte.

Cohasset came out with much more intensity in the second half and was able to control the ball for most of the third and fourth quarters, but could not do better than play the Marshfield team even. Aidan Buick and Mike Martone combined for the two Cohasset goals in the second half, with Buick feeding Martone for a quick shot and score, and Martone passing to Buick for a nice left-handed stuff.

Cohasset had several good shots turned away by the Marshfield goalie in the fourth quarter and the game ended at 10-3 Marshfield.

The next games for the program were on Sunday, when the rest of the youth program returned to action for the first time since before Memorial Day.

In Bourne, the Cohasset 10-and-Under team was slow out of the gate and fell behind 2-0 at the end of the 1st quarter. The squad played much better in the second quarter with John Kearney scoring Cohasset's first goal on an assist from Geoff Evans. Eamon Davis scored the first of his three goals on a nice assist from Jack Murphy, but Bourne led 5-2 at the half.

Cohasset had a sluggish third quarter, with the team's only score coming from Eamon Davis unassisted. Bourne added two goals to lead 7-3 at the end the the 3rd quarter. The fourth quarter was all Cohasset, but the boys netted only goals from Davis and Jake Wheelwright and finished on the short end of a 7-5 final. Logan Chase had a quality performance in the goal, and Derek St. Peter had a strong defensive performance.

The Cohasset Blue 12-and Under team followed the 10-U team onto the field at Bourne and quickly took control of the game. Eric MacCarthy intercepted a clearing pass and scored his first goal of the season to give Cohasset a 1-0 lead. Parker Berg fed Michael Bunstein seconds later for a 2-0 lead.

After a Bourne goal, Peter Ernst netted two goals to give Cohasset a 4-1 lead heading into the first break. Berg fed Bunstein to open the second period before Bourne scored twice to make it 5-3. Matt Burgess then scored on a man-up feed from Nick Zappolo, Bunstein completed his hat trick and Dan Trendowicz closed out the first half at 8-3.

The second half was unusual. Berg scored an early goal, and the physical nature of the game picked up. Unfortunately, an injury to a Cohasset player brought an early end to the third period.

The teams regrouped to play the final period and Cohasset scored two quick goals — from Trendowicz and Mark Flibotte — before letting Bourne take control. Five goals later, Bourne was feeling pretty charged up, but Cohasset gained control of the ball and Teddy Galligan made a great one-on-one drive from behind the net, coming around to score his first goal of the season to calm things down. Bourne scored one more goal, but ran out of time.

Sam Parker made six first-half saves in the net for Cohasset, several of them highlight-reel material. Jared Dick stood up to the second-half onslaught, making nine saves under the intense Bourne pressure. The win raised Cohasset Blue's record to 7-3.

While the Blue team was in Bourne, Cohasset White was in Hanover, staying unbeaten with a blow-out win over a defenseless Hanover squad.

The start was sluggish, with Hanover taking 1-0, 2-1 and 3-2 leads before Cohasset kicked it into gear and rocketed out to a 10-3 halftime lead before coasting to a 13-6 win.

Chris Mills and Michael Grimm both scored five points, with Mills netting four goals and Grimm three. Austen Lanzillotti added two goals, and Jared Kinch, Peter Oswald, Chris Rose and Hunter Sease scored single goals. Kinch had two assists, and Oswald one.

Justin Hollis made nine saves, including several spectacular ones to close the door in the second half.

The 14-U team followed the White team in Hanover and ended its regular season on a high note by defeating Hanover 8-6 with a very strong all around effort. Cohasset controlled play for most of the game with midfielders Chris Barber, Mike Pecca, Jake Previte, Billy Carbone, Zack Etkind, and Colin Regan scooping up nearly every ground ball and moving it quickly to the attack.

The scoring started with John Grimm passing to Mike Martone, who found Aidan Buick in front of the cage for the finish. Hanover came back and scored two goals quickly to take their only lead of the game. Buick then found Pecca cutting in from his midfield position, hit him in stride with the pass, and Pecca bounced it home to tie the score. Cohasset took a 4-2 lead into halftime with two more great feeds from Buick who found Evan Sacks coming hard to the cage for a score, and then combined with Pecca for his second goal of the game.

In the third quarter, the teams traded single goals with the lone Cohasset score coming on a great play by Jonathan Littauer, who scooped up a ball in traffic in front of the Hanover goal and fired it in.

Cohasset took what seemed to be a comfortable 6-4 lead in the fourth quarter on a goal by Previte, until Hanover came storming back with two goals to tie the game. After the Hanover surge, Trevor Brady regained the lead for Cohasset with a strong shot from out in front.

Buick then finished his outstanding day with a quick right handed blast into the top left corner of the cage, ending any hopes of a Hanover comeback.

The Cohasset close defense played an excellent game and gave up only one goal to the Hanover attackmen. Defenseman Matt Baroudi, Kirby Buckowski, Joey Durkin, and Mike Barnes all made exceptional plays and worked well as a unit with goalie Chris Simms.

Cohasset White had a Monday evening game scheduled against Hingham, with the two 12-U teas set to face-off against each other in the Blue-White game on Friday, June 8. All age groups will play in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League Jamboree at Fort Devens on June 10 to close out their season.

Downed by Harwich

By James Olson
CORRESPONDENT

After an 8-4 record put them in the state tourney for the first time in several years, the boys of the Cohasset High tennis team put in an impressive showing, but were defeated in the preliminary round by Harwich.

Harwich took this match 4-1, but all of the individual contests were remarkably close.

Senior Erik Shea maintained his undefeated record at second singles this year by notching the Skippers' only win of the day. He ousted senior captain Mike Steiner in a three set nailbiter—6-1, 5-7, 7-6—capped off with an 8-6 tiebreaker victory.

"[Steiner] got everything back," said first year coach Pam Wilson of the toughness of his game. "Erik just had to outlast him, and he did."

With the win, Shea became the only Cohasset athlete of the year with five individual post-season victories, after three with the soccer team and one as a basketball player this past winter.

Senior co-captain Chris Golden, one of three All-Stars on the team, came away with a loss to Harwich's senior captain Brian Kett, a disruptive hitter with a monster serve.

"[Chris] played a very tough player," said Wilson, referrign specifically to Kett's ability to return nearly everything within his reach. "It was hard to get a rhythm against him."

Golden finished his six year varsity career, in which he played every position on the team except second doubles.

At third singles, two completely contrasting playing styles met head-to-head for a very competitive match. Junior Joe Niessink was working his normal power game, recording five aces. His opponent, freshman Craig Druschetta, overcame the power with soft consistency, eventually taking the third set in a tiebreaker.

At first doubles, senior captain Jeff Scribner and sophomore David Ingber lost as a duo for only the second time this season to Harwich's senior-sophomore pair of "Twin Towers", Jeremy Cootz and Justin Turco.

Both stood at 6-foot-'3, which all but eliminated the Cohasset duo's normally effective lob game, as they took the match, 6-4, 6-4.

"Consistency is the key to developing skills," explained Wilson, who broke a chain of coaches that constantly scrambled line-ups, never allowing a partnership to form with their doubles teams. "First doubles really developed and learned the game of doubles."

Scribner also finished a six year varsity career with this match, after by far his best year. He and his partner were selected to the All-Star team with an 11-2 record. This record included the only win of the season over Norwell's first doubles team of Justin Meddaugh and Rory O'Conner.

At second doubles, brothers Casey and Jesse Brewer teamed up for the first time of the year, playing very well together, but getting tagged with a loss, 6-3, 6-2.

Regardless of the unfavorable outcome, Wilson was very pleased with the performance put in by her team against the very solid Cape team.

"It was great to see Cohasset tennis get a name for itself for the boys," smiled Wilson.

The team can also take some solace in knowing that the Rough Riders were absolutely destroyed in the first round Monday by Bourne.

Harwich will be entering the South Shore League next year, and the two teams should have very interesting matches as they will both be hit very hard by graduation.

Buick and Stephen Davis) cleared as well as they have all year," said Coach Orcutt. "(Goalie) Kyle Weber can take credit for that too, because he quarterbacked the defense and made all the right calls."

Weber finished with nine saves before giving way to freshman Nick Murphy, who collected one save without giving up a goal.

Cohasset took the lead a minute into the game on an unassisted goal by Previte, but Ashland tied it three minutes later on a shot by midfielder David Bresnick. The Skippers responded on a Anderson-to-Moore connection, and after Ashland tied the contest once more a the six-minute mark, Matt Davis took a feed from Moore and gave Cohasset the lead for good.

"We're playing well now; the best we have all year," said Coach Orcutt. "Of course, when your next opponent is the defending state champion, you'd better be on top of your game."

Beside the individual records, Cohasset set team tournament records for most goals in a game (18) and margin of victory (13). With the win, Cohasset advances to the third round in state lacrosse tournament play for the first time in its ten-year history as a varsity program.

The Skippers were scheduled to travel to Milton, seeded second in the tourney, on Wednesday, with the face-off tentatively set for 5 p.m. Milton played Ashland early in the season, beating them 12-3.

home another unassisted goal but Sandwich led at halftime 9-2.

Sandwich controlled the draws and possession of the ball throughout the game. On virtually every Cohasset possession, Sandwich players double-teamed the ball and were very aggressive in their stick checks.

"Sandwich is a superior team," conceded Cohasset coach Cathy Gaudiano. "They have excellent stick skills and constantly look for open teammates, passing the ball quickly into the offensive zone. They are very tough on defense, particularly through the midfield."

Cohasset started the second half strong. Maura McKenney scored after off of a pass from Kristin Sheerin and Genovese completed her hat trick with an assist from Katherine Coyne. Sheerin added an unassisted goal on a dodge from behind the cage but then Sandwich took control again with six goals, mostly on fast breaks.

Cohasset finished its scoring with one of its prettiest goals of the season- a pass from Sheerin to a streaking McKenney, who put the shot into the upper corner.

Coach Gaudiano saw a lot of positives in her team's effort: "We are a young team and improved with every game. We played Sandwich tough in the second half and learned what we need to do to succeed at this level. This team loses only one senior. Our girls will be back and more experienced at state tournament time next year. That should translate into future success."

Cohasset finished its season with a record of 9-6-1. The girls will hold their break-up dinner at Atlantica on Thursday night, June 14th.

COHASSET BOARD OF HEALTH
FLOOR DRAIN REGULATION SUMMARY

The purpose of the regulation is to preserve and protect the Town's water resources from discharges of pollutants via floor drains and minimize economic losses associated with such discharges.

Unless the Massachusetts DEP has issued a permit prior to the effective date of the regulation, no floor drain, with or without pretreatment, may discharge to the ground, a leaching structure or septic system in any industrial or commercial facility.

Existing facilities must disconnect and plug all inlets and outlets of floor drains discharging to those areas noted above. Remove any sludge associated with the drain and dispose of it properly. Alter the drain so it is either connected to a holding tank, a municipal sewer or is permanently sealed. Any water/oil separator remaining in use shall be monitored, cleaned and hauled away. Records of hauling must be submitted to the Board of Health. Comply with other state regulations,

For existing facilities, compliance shall be accomplished within 120 days of the effective date of the regulation and all discharges shall be discontinued by sealing the floor drain.

A new facility must comply with this regulation. Conformance shall be required prior to issuance of construction or occupancy permits. Failure to comply will result in the levy of a fine with each day's failure constituting a separate violation.

Cohasset senior captain Aryanna Afshar showed veteran experience with a 6-1, 6-2 shellacking of Fairhaven's Colleen Dawicki on Monday.

6-0, 6-2 victory.

Fairhaven, entering this contest with an 11-7 record in the South Coast League, was seeded 13th in the South Sectional.

In the second round, Cohasset drew the number five seed Canton, sneaking by with a 3-2 win to advance to the South Sectional Semi-finals.

Grossman was matched up with freshman Marie Sokolovsky, and the Cohasset sophomore stepped up her game as the match wore on, winning 6-3, 6-0. Sokolovsky's only loss of the year was to the ace of Sharon's top seeded team. She's also the winner of this reporter's "Anna Kournikova Lookalike Contest."

Graham drew a hard-hitting junior at second singles in Erica Ancrum, coming away with a 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 win. Graham had a nice variety of deep and short shots to keep her opponent honest.

The freshman tandem again dominated a pair of upper classmen, with a resounding 6-2, 6-3 win.

Afshar ended up with a very close three set loss, that included an intense tiebreaker with nearly all of the large crowd watching.

Stone and Caron also found themselves on the losing end, and will look to redeem themselves this Thursday in Bourne.

Bourne is the top ranked team in the tournament, as they are undefeated on the year, with a regionally ranked number one.

Forward thinking for baseball

On the other side of the plate, Straughn was one of the top pitchers for the squad, compiling 27 strikeouts in 28 innings, with a 2.56 ERA. While Straughn came away with a 2-2 record, both of his losses can be traced back to spotty fielding that failed to support the hurler.

"He is just a great all-around player," asserted Knurek.

Straughn's pitching was essential to the club after losing their ace, Nick Bolster, to an eye injury. A junior, Bolster will most likely assume his role again next year as the top starter on the team, with a fastball that has been clocked in the mid-80's.

Not only that, Bolster's hitting in the three spot in the batting order has and will keep opposing pitchers from batting around the dangerous Straughn, something they were able to do this year, as number three hitters batted a combined .110 on the season.

Junior Robin Murphy will also be a large part of the 2002 season, as he has played rock solid defense all year in left field. As a senior, he will already have three seasons of varsity experience under his belt.

"There is enough talent in there to compete," said Knurek.

This year's senior class had its share of success, with tremendous leadership coming from captains Doug O'Brien and TJ Bilodeau.

"I couldn't have asked for better captains than TJ and Doug," lauded Knurek. "They are fantastic representatives of Cohasset baseball."

As expected, O'Brien was selected to the All-Star team for the second consecutive year, compiling a .350 average, including a team high seven extra base hits and 10 steals. O'Brien was also one of the Skippers' top defensive players in centerfield this season.

Bilodeau, a second year captain, recorded 27 strikeouts as a pitcher this year, and also proved effective at the plate with a .333 average and 12 RBIs.

Defensively, Bilodeau proved to be the ultimate team player, playing third base, shortstop, second base, and pitcher, and Knurek feels confident he also could have been a catcher, outfielder or first baseman if needed by the team.

Senior pitcher Tim Grassey led the team with 30 strikeouts on the mound, also recording a 2.91 ERA for the season.

Senior outfielder Andrei Skorupa batted .262 with a few extra base hits.

"The big thing is that the seniors carried us through the hard times," reported Knurek. "The underclassmen have to make the step to get back into tournament."

Two of this year's underclassmen, sophomore second baseman Mike Snowdale and freshman third baseman Mike Dooley, both earned themselves starting jobs on the club, and are expected to perform well next year in the infield and as pitchers.

Injury sidelines Krupczak at All-States

sion a little easier.

One consideration that almost had Krupczak throwing caution to the wind on Saturday was the fact that he failed to qualify for the final heat of eight in the 200 last year at the All-States by 1-100th of a second, officially placing him ninth in the elite statewide field.

Cohasset track coach Al LaFontain figures a healthy Krupczak would have been a near lock to qualify for the final race this past Saturday, as well as finish in the top six, which would have secured him a berth for the New England Track and Field Championships. However, he concurred completely with the decision of his senior star.

"It was absolutely the right decision," asserted the fourth year head coach. "Aside from the added injury risk, and considering the fact that he was only at about 85 percent anyway, he did the right thing."

Krupczak suffered the injury in the Skippers final meet of the regular season on May 17 in Rockland.

The soon to be graduate showed a great deal of gutsiness in running the 200 at the Class meet on May 26. LaFontain figures his star was at "approximately 85 percent" when he crossed the finish line first in the championship heat with a time of 23:02—just 26-100ths of a second ahead of Bellingham's Mike Bissen—to successfully defend his Class crown.

"That was as gutsy a performance as I've ever seen on a track," LaFontain raved afterwards. "Brian is the epitome of a committed athlete."

Krupczak was able to run with Cohasset's 4x100 relay team that captured fourth at the All-State meet. He joined with Ian Kidder, Steve Laney and Jason Brown to post a very solid 45.48 time, good for 18th in the 22 team field.

Krupczak considered taking a pass on this event as well, but with one of the other four regulars already out of action—sophomore brother Jared Krupczak—Brian decided he had to take one for the team.

"This (relay) was about three other people who were really counting on me," said Brian. "I wouldn't have felt right sitting this out. Fortunately, I didn't re-injure anything."

Correction

It was mistakenly reported last week that Tim Baird, with his sixth place finish in the mile (4:38.24) at the Class D Meet, and freshman Gillian Weber, with her sixth place finish in the 800, were eligible to compete at the All-State meet. In fact, only the top four runners advance to the All-States.

Women's choices are boundless, NDA grads told

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

STAFF PHOTO/ALAN CHAPMAN
Cohasset NDA seniors Kristen Devine, Taylor Strecker and Emily Coyne wait to enter the auditorium for their commencement on Sunday.

Floor-length white dresses, long-stemmed red roses and gold medallion necklaces.

Those looking for a customary Notre Dame Academy graduation weren't disappointed Sunday as 125 young women received their diplomas from the Catholic girls school in Hingham.

But the future that is stretched out before the graduates, who come from 27 area towns, could run the gamut from traditional roles as wives and mothers to careers in every conceivable field.

Guest speaker Mary Ganley Montanari, NDA Class of 1971, said the unique all-female environment provided the perfect stage for the students' self-esteem and maturity to blossom.

"You were enlightened as to the important role you, as women, play in today's society," said Montanari, a Norwell resident and principal of an investment company in Hingham.

Proud fathers, who were armed with camcorders, jockeyed for position to catch their daughters' special moment on film in the overflowing auditorium. Mothers, grandparents, siblings and friends were also on hand to support their graduates.

Montanari reminded the members of the Class of 2001 that their commencement marked a new beginning.

"Many of you are heading off to college, yet some will choose full-time employment, while others are drawn to marriage and family.

"Whichever path you choose along this journey of life, you will share a common bond with each and every graduate of NDA," she said. Montanari noted the 5,500 NDA alumnae include teachers, scientists athletes, doctors, lawyers, actresses, company presidents and judges to name a few. But they also include mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers, who selflessly maintained loving homes, she said.

The NDA Class of 2001 was awarded more than $7 million in scholarships and grants from colleges, and community and corporate sponsors. The school, founded by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur in 1953, was chartered by the state in 1865 and moved from Roxbury to Hingham in 1965.

Salutatorian Andrea Leahy told her classmates not to listen to those who try to limit their dreams.

"When Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott launched the women's suffrage movement, suffrage for women seemed like a dream – something they hoped for but had not yet come to pass.

"But by 1920, thanks for the efforts of millions of dreamers, the Nineteenth Amendment was passed. The shared dream of those women still reverberates today."

Valedictorian Erin Field told the graduates not to let obstacles get in their way.

"It may seem like we are about to climb Mt. Everest, and the task appears nearly impossible. Where do we start? We begin at the bottom, one step at a time...," she said.

All the graduates wore matching, long-white dresses and gold medallion necklaces that symbolize the tie to both the school and one another shared by all NDA alumnae. Along with their diplomas the young women were also each presented with a long-stemmed, red rose.

Cohasset graduates include: Kristen Devine, Taylor Strecker and Emily Coyne..

Bug blamed for single car crash

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

A pesky bug is blamed for a car accident Tuesday night that took out a utility pole at the intersection of North Main Street and Jerusalem Road.

Cohasset police say Kate Linehan, 16, of Cole Road in Hingham, was heading north on North Main Street shortly after 8 p.m., when she lost control of her white, 2000 Range Rover after she was distracted by a bug that had flown in the window.

Linehan veered off the road and smashed into the utility pole, breaking it off a foot from the ground.

Cohasset officer Shellee Peters, who was first on the scene, and said Linehan was "shaken up" and complained of a sore wrist, but was otherwise fine. She was transported to South Shore Hospital as a precaution.

The Range Rover was heavily damaged, but police say Linehan was wearing her seatbelt and the vehicle's air bag did deploy.

The severed pole was leaning on the hood of the vehicle when utility crews arrived to fix the damage. Wires were hanging less than five feet above the ground across North Main Street, causing police to close the street for a time Tuesday night.

Police said no homes lost power, though parts of the town did experience a power surge. Lights briefly flickered in Town Hall during the Selectmen's Meeting. Crews were out Wednesday transferring lines onto the new pole.

Police said Linehan was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

POLICE BRIEFS

Scituate alert leads to youth arrest

A BOLO (Be on the Lookout) broadcast from Scituate police at 1:30 a.m. Sunday for a Volkswagen Fox connected to a breaking and entering of a motor vehicle that had just occurred in Scituate led to the arrest of four teenagers, Cohasset police said.

About 40 minutes after the broadcast, Officer William Quigley saw a car matching the description and plate number, which were reported by Scituate, at the 24-hour Mobil Mart at Sohier Street and Route 3A. Quigley called for back up and officers from the Scituate Police Department also arrived.

Investigation at the scene revealed an open bottle of rum in the front passenger compartment. Later during inventory, police found an open 30-pack of Budweiser in the trunk with only four cans remaining.

Cohasset police charged Jeffrey Meacham, 18, of 168 Vernon Road in Scituate; Robert J. Teufel, 18, of Norwood; and Adam Zukauskas, 19, of 27 Sylvester Road in Scituate with minors transporting alcohol.

Cohasset police said Scituate police put Michael C. Tondorf, 18, of 26 Aberdeen Drive in Scituate, in custody for allegedly breaking and entering a motor vehicle and transported him to Scituate for booking.

The Scituate police prosecutor said Tondorf was arraigned on the charge of B&E of a motor vehicle at Hingham District Court with a further court date set for June 29. Tondorf will also be summoned to appear in Quincy District Court for minor in possession of alcohol. The charges facing Tondorf involve two courthouses because Cohasset and Scituate are in different counties.

Fundraiser underway

The Cohasset Police Association telephone fund-raiser is now underway. Contributions to the Cohasset Police Association provide scholarships, assist civic and municipal groups, and help pay for police equipment not covered in the budget. Police said all donations are greatly appreciated. Anyone with questions should call, the police at 781-383-1055.

Officer John Conte attends conference

Cohasset Police Sgt. John Conte was among more than 55 police officers from 16 Norfolk County communities to attend the recent Underage Drinking and Juvenile Issues conference sponsored by Norfolk District Attorney William R. Keating. The event, which included evening sessions on May 21 and May 24, included on an update on recent changes in the laws from the District Attorney's Office and discussion among officers about successful strategies for addressing underage drinking and other juvenile issues.

IT'S HAPPENING

Teen program

In addition to producing The Little Mermaid, the Devaney sisters will also produce an original work called "A Night at the Markle" to be performed by young adults aged between 13 and 18. Because of the renovations at Cohasset High School, rehearsals and performances will take place at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. This six-week program will begin Tuesday, June 26, at 7 p.m. Designed for young adults between the ages of 13 and 18, this program will meet on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. Tentative performance dates are as follows: Friday, Aug. 3, and Saturday, Aug. 4.

Registration will begin on Monday, June 11. Limited enrollment. Early registration is advised. For more information, call the Recreation Department at (781) 383-4109. Directed and produced by Elizabeth Devaney, "A Night at the Markle" will be her second original work, and first straight play. Last summer, she wrote and produced the musical comedy, Cinderella Smith.

Attention shoppers!

No astute shopper will want to miss the new assortment of children's clothing donated by an exclusive northeast children's shop at the Cohasset Consignment Shop. Items include boys three piece navy suit by Gordon, girls pearl grey satin trim dress by Jiliani as well as clothes by Perry Ellis, Barbara Perlin, Helena, Annie, Wes and Willy, and Zimmie's.

For Father's Day gifts, there are wooden wine racks, new grill sets as well as Ralph Lauren shirts and sweaters, Land's End button down oxfords, blue blazers by Brooks Brothers and designer ties.

Women will find a great assortment of after five dresses for summer as well as famous Vera Bradley duffle bags.

Manager Andi Merrill of Scituate noted that regular hours Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday noon to 4 p.m. For consigning hours Monday through Friday are 10 to 11:30 a.m.

Merrill added that the shop is staffed with volunteers and proceeds support the myriad programs sponsored by the Social Service League that serves the Towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell.

To volunteer or seek information, call 781-383-0687.

Hagerty property work to begin

Eight years after the town purchased the property, work on transforming the former site of the Cohasset Colonial Furniture Company into a water-front parking lot and public boat ramp will start Monday.

Russ Bonetti, chairman of the Hagerty Property Committee, told Selectmen Tuesday that the start was delayed a week because the project manager was still working on another project.

"I don't mind that because at least we know that means he won't start three other projects and leave us hanging," Bonetti said.

Beginning Monday, workers will remove the concrete slab on the property, re-grade the parking lot, construct a new seawall, and build a new dock and pier and wooden walkway over to Government Island.

During the week, the parking lot will be closed for trucks turning around to launch boats. However, Cohasset Harbor Marina owner Paul Trendowicz gave permission to use his parking lot as a turn around. The Hagerty lot will be available on weekends.

Bonetti said a trailer with the name "Harold" on the tires has been sitting in the lot for weeks. If it isn't moved by the time works starts Monday, it will be disposed of.

Drama workshop

The Devaney sisters will return once again to produce Disney's The Little Mermaid. Directed and produced by Elizabeth Devaney, The Little Mermaid will be the 13th annual production of the Children's Drama Workshop (CDW). Past smash hits include: Cinderella Smith (2000), The Lion King (1999), and Anastasia (1998). Because of the renovations at Cohasset High School, CDW rehearsals and performances will take place at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. This sic-week program will begin Tuesday, June 26, at 1 p.m. Designed for children between the ages of 5 and 12, the Children's Drama Workshop meets on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. There will be several dress rehearsals from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. during the final two weeks of the program. Tentative performance dates are as follows: Wednesday, Aug. 1, Thursday, Aug. 2, and Friday, Aug. 3.

Registration will begin on Monday, June 11. Limited enrollment. Early registration is advised. For more information, call the Recreation Department at (781) 383-4109.

LIBRARY CORNER

Retirement party

The Friends of the Library, the Library Trustees and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library staff invites the community and friends of Ms. Susan Watrous to a celebration in her honor. Ms. Watrous, a librarian at the Paul Pratt Library for 29 years, retires at the beginning of June, 2001.

A party for Ms. Watrous will be held on Friday, June 15, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the home of Linda Wakeman, President of the Friends of the Library, at 255 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset.

Suzanne Terry, Children's Librarian at Paul Pratt Memorial Library for 15 years, will also be honored at this time. Ms. Terry has taken a new position as the first Children's Librarian at the Boston Athenaeum.

Come bid a fond farewell on June 15, to two of the Library's finest.

Contest winner

Caravan for Commuters recently sponsored a writing and art contest through 137 libraries in Massachusetts. Forty-three students were selected as contest winners. Claire McCarthy, age 10, from Cohasset was the winning entry for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

An awards ceremony and reception will take place on Tuesday, June 5, at the State Transportation Building in Boston.

The public is invited to see the art and writing exhibit on display in the Atrium of the State Transportation Building from June 4 through June 22. The hours of the exhibit are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Congratulations Claire!

Farmer's Market

The Cohasset Farmer's Market is preparing for its Season 2001 opening day on June 7. The cowbell will open the market at 2:30 p.m. bringing fresh produce, herbs, cuttings, music and activities.

New vendors, musicians, artists and sponsors are welcome to sign up now.

Call 781-383-1200 if you have a contribution. Come on the 7th and bring your market baskets!

From the Music Circus to the Wang

Cohasset native lands 'Ragtime' role

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Peter Reardon may have left the South Shore 24 years ago —for Syracuse University and a career in show business — but Cohasset is still his hometown and also the place he made his professional debut.

"I was two years old when I appeared in a touring production of 'The King and I' at the South Shore Music Circus," says Reardon.

Reardon's portrayal of a Siamese toddler earned him a rave review from the Dean of Boston Theater Critics.

"Elliot Norton wrote that the production would have been much better if the King had had as much charm as his youngest child," Reardon recalls. "The actor who was playing the King wasn't too fond of me after that."

Norton has long since retired, but Reardon faces a new slate of local theater critics this week when he appears in the national tour of the Tony Award-winning musical "Ragtime" at Boston's Wang Theatre.

Based on the best-selling novel by E.L. Doctorow, "Ragtime" is a cavalcade of American life at the turn of the 20th century. The story is a panoramic portrait of three families: one upper middle class, white Anglo-Saxon Protestant, one socialist immigrant Jewish and one Harlem black. As the families embark on personal voyages of self-discovery, they become involved with one another as well as with real-life historical characters including Henry Ford, Emma Goldman, Harry Houdini and Booker T. Washington.

During the 1997-98 theater season, "Ragtime" won a host of awards for its Toronto, Los Angeles and Broadway productions including four Tony Awards. The musical features a book by Terrence McNally and an original score by Lynn Ahrens and Stephen Flaherty. In early 1999, the show's first national tour enjoyed a highly successful 10-week run at Boston's Colonial Theatre.

Based on the best-selling novel by E.L. Doctorow, "Ragtime" is a cavalcade of American life at the turn of the 20th century. The story is a panoramic portrait of three families: one upper middle class, white Anglo-Saxon Protestant, one socialist immigrant Jewish and one Harlem black.

Reardon plays a Firehouse Captain whose encounters with the educated, articulate and honorable African-American ragtime pianist Coalhouse Walker ultimately result in tragedy. Reardon's character is commonly referred to as the evil Willie Conklin, although the actor isn't sure that he agrees with the adjective.

"Willie's not evil really, he is just ignorant. He has never seen a man like Coalhouse Walker. Coalhouse is completely outside of Willie's frame of reference," Reardon explains.

While his character is important to him, where "Ragtime" is concerned, Reardon believes the play is the thing.

"I wanted to be a part of this show from the moment I first saw it on Broadway. The show is just so unbelievably touching, while also being very funny. It is appealing on so many levels."

The Cohasset High graduate has appeared on Broadway in "Passions," "Meet Me in St. Louis," and "La Cage Aux Folles." His television credits include "Sex and the City" and a recurring role on the now-defunct NBC daytime drama "Another World."

With three previous national tours behind him, Reardon candidly admits that life on the road can be mundane. He believes, however, that his current assignment makes that all worthwhile.

"I would have done 'Ragtime' anytime, anywhere," he says.

("Ragtime" will be at The Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, June 5-10. For tickets and information, call 800/447-7400 or visit the box office.)

Ragtime opened June 5 and will run through June 10 at Boston's Wang Theatre.

Appearing as Houdini

Stonehill grad gets to play long-time hero

Houdini is more than just a historical figure for Stoughton native Eric Olson. He is also a personal hero to the actor.

The Stonehill College graduate will play the escape artist and magician Harry Houdini in the Boston production of "Ragtime," opening this week at the Wang Theatre

"As a child, I had the same sort of fascination with Houdini that a lot of little boys do," Olson points out.

In 1997, the performer became reacquainted with his boyhood idol when he understudied the title role in the musical "Houdini" at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut.

"I did all kinds of research for that role. I read everything I could get my hands on about Houdini. I also watched all of his films that I could find on video."

Houdini died in 1926, but remains a cultural icon even today. This doesn't surprise Olson.

"Harry Houdini had perfect timing in his work and in just about everything else, too," Olson says. "He came along at just the right time in America. The world was changing because of the industrial revolution and he captured the public's fascination. He was also a tremendous publicist and self-promoter, right up there with P.T. Barnum. Even Madonna pales in comparison."

It was through his interest in all things Houdini that Olson first became aware of "Ragtime."

"I went to see the show, because I wanted to see the Houdini depiction. I had no idea then that I'd one day play the role. Although I knew immediately that I wanted to play it. I have been with this tour for two years now and I'm still in love with the show. My part may not be the largest, but it is definitely the one for me."

Olson also found the woman for him while doing "Ragtime" when he met and fell in love with Suzanne Parr, who serve's as the childrens' tutor on the tour. Suzanne and Eric will be married in June 2002 in Waltham. In the meantime, however, Olson plans to relocate from New York to Los Angeles when "Ragtime" closes its tour in Boston this month.

"I'd play Houdini again in a minute," says Olson. "He is just that interesting. For now, however, Suzanne and I are moving to the West Coast. I want to pursue work in films and television so we can make our home in one place."

Stonehill hosts 11th annual Irish Festival

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Irish eyes will be smiling this weekend when the Irish Cultural Centre of Massachusetts and Stonehill College puts on the 11th annual Irish Festival. The three-day event, featuring music and dance, food, crafts and more than 100 vendors of all things Irish. gets underway June 8 at the Stonehill College campus in Easton.

Festival chairman Seamus Mulligan said it "is a great family event that draws people from all over North America. It's affordable, easy to get to, and gives people a real taste of greater Boston's rich Irish cultural heritage."

"There's a good mix of activities to suit everyone's taste," added Maureen Connolly, owner of the Aisling (art) Gallery in Hingham. Connolly said her establishment has participated in the event for the past 10 years. Connolly won't be able to make the 11th annual festival, but there will still be more Celtic wares there than you can shake a shillelagh at.

"This festival is very authentic," Mulligan said. "We even import some of our talent." Mulligan explained Irish bands are actually flown in for the festival. Some of the headlining bands this year include DeDannan, The Prodigals, Seven Nations, Delores Keane, and The Fenians. There will be live music at all three days of the event.

There will also be several Irish authors on hand, Mulligan said doing readings from their respective literary works including Colm Tolbin, Tom Kelly, former Boston mayor Ray Flynn, Noel Cullen, and Thomas O'Connor.

"People love going for all the activities but also for the ambience of the setting," said festival publicist Michael Quinlin. "All the people who go are very friendly and interested in celebrating one common experience—Irish culture."

DeDannan is one of several Irish bands headlining during this weekend's 11th Annual Irish Festival at Stonehill College.

Quinlin said the festival is family friendly and parents don't not need to worry about kids having enough to do. The children's tent at the festival will be initiating activities like face-painting, foot races, geography lessons, music instruction, arts and crafts and sing-alongs, Quinlin said.

"It keeps growing every year," Mulligan said. The South Shore's large Irish population gives the festival a boost. Mulligan estimates about 40 percent of those living in the region have Irish roots and many of them make their way back to the festival year after year for a taste of the homeland.

This year, Mulligan said he is expecting more than 30,000 visitors to attend the weekend-long festival.

The first festival got its start in 1990 on the evening the Gulf War began, Mulligan said. He explained at that time, he was a member of the festival's board of directors consisting of a number of people from the Irish Cultural Centre in Canton. While it was launched out of love for the Irish culture, the festival was founded as a fundraiser for the non-profit centre.

In its first year, the festival drew about 10,000 visitors from throughout New England and even New York state. A decade later the festival's reach has become truly international.

Festival planners are hoping to raise $300,000 to use toward a new theater/museum on the grounds of the Irish Cultural Centre, Mulligan said.

But fundraising aside, Mulligan promises a great time for all visitors.

"It's well worth the admission," he said.

For more information on the Irish festival at Stonehill College call (888) GO IRISH or log onto the website at www.irishculture.org. Tickets cost $12 per day or $30 for a weekend pass. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Cultivating the Alluring Irises

Green thumbs up

Part 1

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

With the coming of the month of June, the endless hours spent planting, fertilizing, weeding and mulching, come to fruition as our landscapes approach their peak appearance. Moderate temperatures and plentiful moisture thicken our lawns and fill our gardens with luxuriant flowers and foliage. Sweet perfumes fill the air as birds sing and a profusion of butterflies float from flower to flower each time the sunshine returns. It is truly a glorious time of year.

A well-designed perennial border should provide a progression of blooms from spring through fall, but even the most creatively laid out gardens tend to have highs and laws as periods of exuberant bloom alternate with intervals of sporadic blossoms. By the second week of June, our perennial borders attain their ultimate splendor as flamboyant peonies, the tissue paper blooms of oriental poppies, mounds. of perennial geraniums, captivating Canterbury bells (campanula), bleeding hearts, salvias, columbines, veronicas, dainty coral bells, delicate dianthus, fragrant roses and clematis paint the landscape with cheerful abandon. Perhaps the most showy of all are the queens of the June garden, the elegant irises, which splash rainbow colors throughout the border, creating a spectacular display as our gardens bid a fond farewell to springtime.

The diverse members of the Iris family have been a part of legend, myth and religion since ancient times. To the ancient Greeks, irises were the flowers of princes and priests, the personification of the goddess Isis, and consequently, these magnificent flowers were often planted on the tombs of women.

Iris species grow throughout the northern temperate zone and across the entire globe. Members of the Iris family can be split into two major groups: those which grow from bulbs and those which arise from rhizomes. Those which are generated from rhizomes can be further subdivided into the bearded, beardless,, and crested irises. Hybridization has led to innumerable cultivars in a wide range of colors and by growing different types, a gardener can enjoy their beauty from April to late July.

Few hardy perennials exhibit the singular beauty of a perfectly formed bearded iris blossom. Resembling giant orchids, these spectacular, sun-loving plants are available in a broad array of colors and patterns, distinguished from other members of this family by the fuzzy beard which appears on the three lower, downward petals referred to as falls. The three upper petal segments are known as the standards. Broad, blue-green, sword-like leaves emerge as fans from a thick, fleshy rhizome.

The bearded iris season begins in early May when the dwarf bearded irises burst into bloom in conjunction with daffodils, tulips and ground phlox. Only 4 to 15 inches tall, they boast a profusion of smaller flowers in multiple colors and patterns often exhibiting distinctive, contrasting blotches or thumb prints on the falls. The rapidly expanding clumps are covered with blooms for several weeks followed close behind by the first of the intermediate bearded irises which bloom into late May and early June on 15 to 28 inch stems. The tall bearded irises come into their glory during June with an incredible range of colorful blossoms on stems up to four feet tall. Early, mid-season and late varieties offer a long season of bloom in every color imaginable: glistening whites, velvety purples, appealing apricots, sunny yellows, luscious pinks and heavenly blues. Only the color of true red is not represented. Multi-colored flowers, bitones, bicolors and plicatas, which have a stippling or pattern of stitching around the petals, produce dramatic displays.

Bearded iris perform optimally in full sun and very well-drained soils; the fleshy rhizome may be prone to rotting or heaving out of the ground in areas of poor winter drainage. The addition of lime to our typically acid soils is recommended as these hardy perennials prefer a neutral to only slightly acidic soil pH. The upper portion of the rhizome should be exposed to sunlight when planting and mulches should not be allowed to cover the rhizome. Provide plentiful moisture during the active growing season. Low nitrogen fertilizers are suggested.

Be sure to monitor bearded iris for its most serious pest, iris borer, which invades the foliage during May and June and chews its way downward into the rhizome becoming a truly disgusting, large, flesh colored caterpillar. Pinpoint holes and jagged edges on the newly emerging foliage are tell-tale signs of invasion. Remove the intruder by squishing it within the foliage early in the season or extricating it from the rhizome before it pupates in the soil. Chemicals can be applied as a control; Cygon, a toxic systemic pesticide, tends to be the most effective. A thorough cleanup of dead foliage and debris around iris clumps in the fall and spring will reduce the incidence of this nuisance.

Overgrown clumps of bearded iris should lie divided every two to five years depending on their vigor and is generally best performed from late July through the month of August to enable plants to became reestablished before freeze-thaw cycles arrive in autumn. Replant a minimum of three to five rhizomes for a magnificent display in subsequent seasons.

How to grill vegetables

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

This year has seen a profusion of grilling cookbooks, not just because outdoor grilling is fun and easy, but because the grill has graduated from simple-minded steaks and burgers to hot-smoked salmon, authentic pork barbecue, and even grilled fruit. Amidst this backyard renaissance, the missing piece is grilled vegetables, simple accompaniments which are transformed in flavor and texture in just minutes over hot coals.

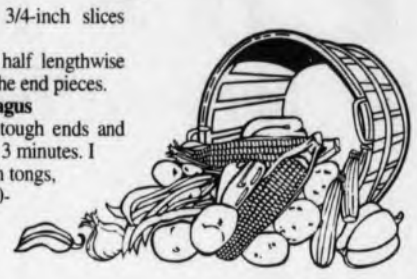
There are two problems: most folks burn their veggies (leaving the center portion tough and uncooked) and others find that they fall apart during cooking, slipping down onto the coals. I chose four likely candidates - onions, fennel, asparagus, and radicchio - and started with the best preparation methods for each, cutting them into pieces which would hold their shape and cook through properly.

Onion

Most recipes call for slicing the onions into thick rings but flipping the rings is cumbersome.

One solution is to insert toothpicks into each side of the ring; another is to use long metal skewers. Both methods work well enough but are a bit fussy so I decided to grill the onions in wedges. Since the wedges needed to be relatively small so that the onion would cook through to the center, jumbo specimens were out and orange-size onions cut into eighths were perfect. Cooking time was 5 minutes per cut side.

White and yellow onions were tasty but the winner was the red onion since it was both more flavorful and better looking.



Fennel

Like the onion, I wanted to cut the fennel bulb into wedges and smaller bulbs (about the size of my fist) cut into quarters were quite successful. I also discovered that the sweet flavor of fennel lends itself nicely to this cooking method. Fennel wedges take about 6 minutes per side. At that point, the fennel is cooked through but still firm. Beware that some fennel bulbs are huge, the size of small cabbages. In the event that smaller bulbs are not available, use the center core only and cut 3/4-inch slices through the base.

Now cut them in half lengthwise and grill. Don't use the end pieces.

Asparagus

I snapped off the tough ends and grilled the spears for 3 minutes. I then rolled them with tongs, trying for a 180-degree rotation, although precision at this point was not essential. After three minutes more the very tips were colored and the spears were intensely green with black patches. They were tender, delicious, and still had a nice bite to them. Cooking time will vary slightly depending on the thickness of the spears.

Radicchio

This is not my favorite vegetable since it has been the darling of second-rate chefs for years. (It is the modern equivalent of curly parsley - it looks good but usually tastes awful.) However, grilled radicchio is worth eating since it mellows the bitterness and improves the texture. I found that baseball-size head work best - modest wedges are best for proper cooking. I also found that the heads cannot be cut any smaller than fourths without falling apart during grilling. Beware that, if cooked too much, radicchio wilts readily into a blob so a careful eye is required. For best results, about 4 minutes per flat side did the trick. I like to serve them with a vinaigrette.

The Fire and The Oil

The most important factor is the heat of the fire. Too hot and the vegetables burn; too low and they never develop enough flavor. After testing a variety of fires, I found that medium-hot was best (see recipe for instructions on gauging heat level).

All of the vegetables must be coated with oil before grilling. Minced shallots or garlic add flavor, but the risk of burning these flavorings is high; if burnt, they will ruin the flavor of the vegetables. All that is necessary is a simple brushing of extra-virgin olive oil followed by generous amounts of salt and pepper.

One final thought. Many backyard cooks run out of hot coals, especially when they start out grilling vegetables and then move on to other things. I suggest starting with 6 quarts of hot coals (use a half-gallon milk jug with the top cut off to measure (a half-gallon is 2 quarts) and then adding unlit coals every so often. I have also found that grilled vegetables are perfectly fine served warm or even at room temperature rather than hot.

Four Grilled Vegetables

Try grilling smaller portions of all four of these vegetables or a combination. Serve the vegetables on a large platter alongside a garlic vinaigrette.

3 medium red onions, peeled and cut through the root end into 8 wedges each, or

3 medium fennel bulbs (about the size of a fist), stalks removed and cut through the base into quarters or

1 fi pounds asparagus, tough ends snapped off or

3 small heads of radicchio, bruised leaves removed and cut through the root end into quarters

Extra-virgin olive oil for brushing

Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Ignite grill. Brush vegetables with olive oil and sprinkle with generous amounts of salt and pepper. When fire is medium-hot (you can hold your hand 5 inches over the fire for only 3 to 4 seconds), place the prepared vegetables on the grill and cook, 5 to 6 minutes for the onion and fennel, 3 to 4 minutes for the asparagus and radicchio, or until striped with dark grill marks. (Place onion, fennel, and radicchio cut-side down.)

Using a metal spatula or tongs, turn the vegetables and cook for an equal length of time on second side or until well marked and just tender (except the radicchio, which should remain firm in the center). Transfer to a platter and serve hot, warm, or at room temperature.

Serves 4 to 6 as a side dish.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JUNE 7

At 12:41 a.m. the Sagittarius moon opposes retrograde Mercury and becomes inactive. The moon enters Capricorn at 1:23 a.m., aligns with Venus at 2:57 a.m. and becomes inactive. This Capricorn moon will travel 'void of course' until Saturday afternoon. That means that it does not form a major alignment to a planet for the next 2 1/2 days. Because Capricorn is an ambitious, business-oriented sign, you can be productive. However, plan to finish matters that have been left hanging, clean out and reorganize. Take quiet time out for yourself this evening; for prayer, meditation, contemplation.

FRIDAY, JUNE 8

No major planetary activity occurs today. The moon continues its travel in Capricorn, but it is inactive. This is a great day to catch up, finish old business, tie up loose ends. Hard work will pay off. New starts are off limits. Follow through on promises you have made to others; fulfill commitments. Plan a quiet evening. Meditate for inner peace.

SATURDAY, JUNE 9

This may be a slow-starting morning. Allow extra time to get where you are going. The Capricorn moon continues inactive travel until 12:20 p.m., when it enters Aquarius. Influences turn around completely at this time, and the afternoon/evening rate high for social activities of all kinds. Gather with friends and let the good times roll.

SUNDAY, JUNE 10

Influences today and tomorrow bring mild and sunny astrological weather in this stormy month. An Aquarius moon may point you in directions you do not normally travel. Take a vacation from routine and responsibilities; play, party, unwind.

MONDAY, JUNE 11

This is a wonderful day for vacationing. If you are working, avoid rigid time schedules. Things may not go as planned. Today's influences are favorable for collaborating with others to achieve common goals. Keep an open mind; be more experimental and willing to try new ideas. You can find new solutions to old problems. The Aquarius moon forms contacts to five planets and becomes inactive at 8:39 p.m.

TUESDAY, JUNE 12

The next couple of days may be hectic. Take it slow and easy. Pay extra attention to details. The moon enters Pisces at 12:53 a.m. A polarity of retrograde Mars and Jupiter takes center stage, urging you to use extra caution when driving or operating machinery. Don't take chances or do anything risky. The best way to channel today's influences is to stay busy with creative projects. You can find fresh inspiration and express yourself in new ways.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13

Today's planetary influences are similar to yesterday's. The moon continues to travel in Pisces, forming potentially stressful alignments to Pluto, Mars and the sun. In addition, the sun opposes Mars. Slow down. Don't take on more than you can handle. People may be irritable, argumentative. A positive attitude is your ace in the hole. Pray, meditate, contemplate. Strive for greater spiritual vision.

Police widen youth counterfeiting investigation

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Police have interviewed up to a dozen more local teenagers about a money counterfeiting ring, following the arrest of two Cohasset youths last week, and say the dollar amount of counterfeit bills circulating in the area could total several thousand.

"The amount seems to get larger by the day," Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan said Tuesday.

Police are also seeking summonses for a third Cohasset teenager and a Pembroke teen, who are both juveniles, for their alleged involvement. The Cohasset youth is believed to be involved with passing counterfeit bills and the Pembroke youth is wanted in connection with their manufacture. Their names are not being released because they are under 17.

"We had interviews scheduled with more young people and we're not sure where that is going to lead," Sgt. Robert Jackson said. "We may be looking for more people, the allegations are out there."

Patrick Carbone, 17, of Church Street, was arrested Friday afternoon while walking on Beechwood Street after allegedly asking another teenager skateboarding outside of Shaw's Supermarket to go inside and exchange some fake bills for real money. Police say Carbone had two fake $20 bills on him, as well as four real $10 bills.

Shaw's was the third store in two months to report receiving fake money.

According to police, Carbone told them he had received the phony money from a freshman he knew at Cohasset High School. The fresh-

Library project funding delayed

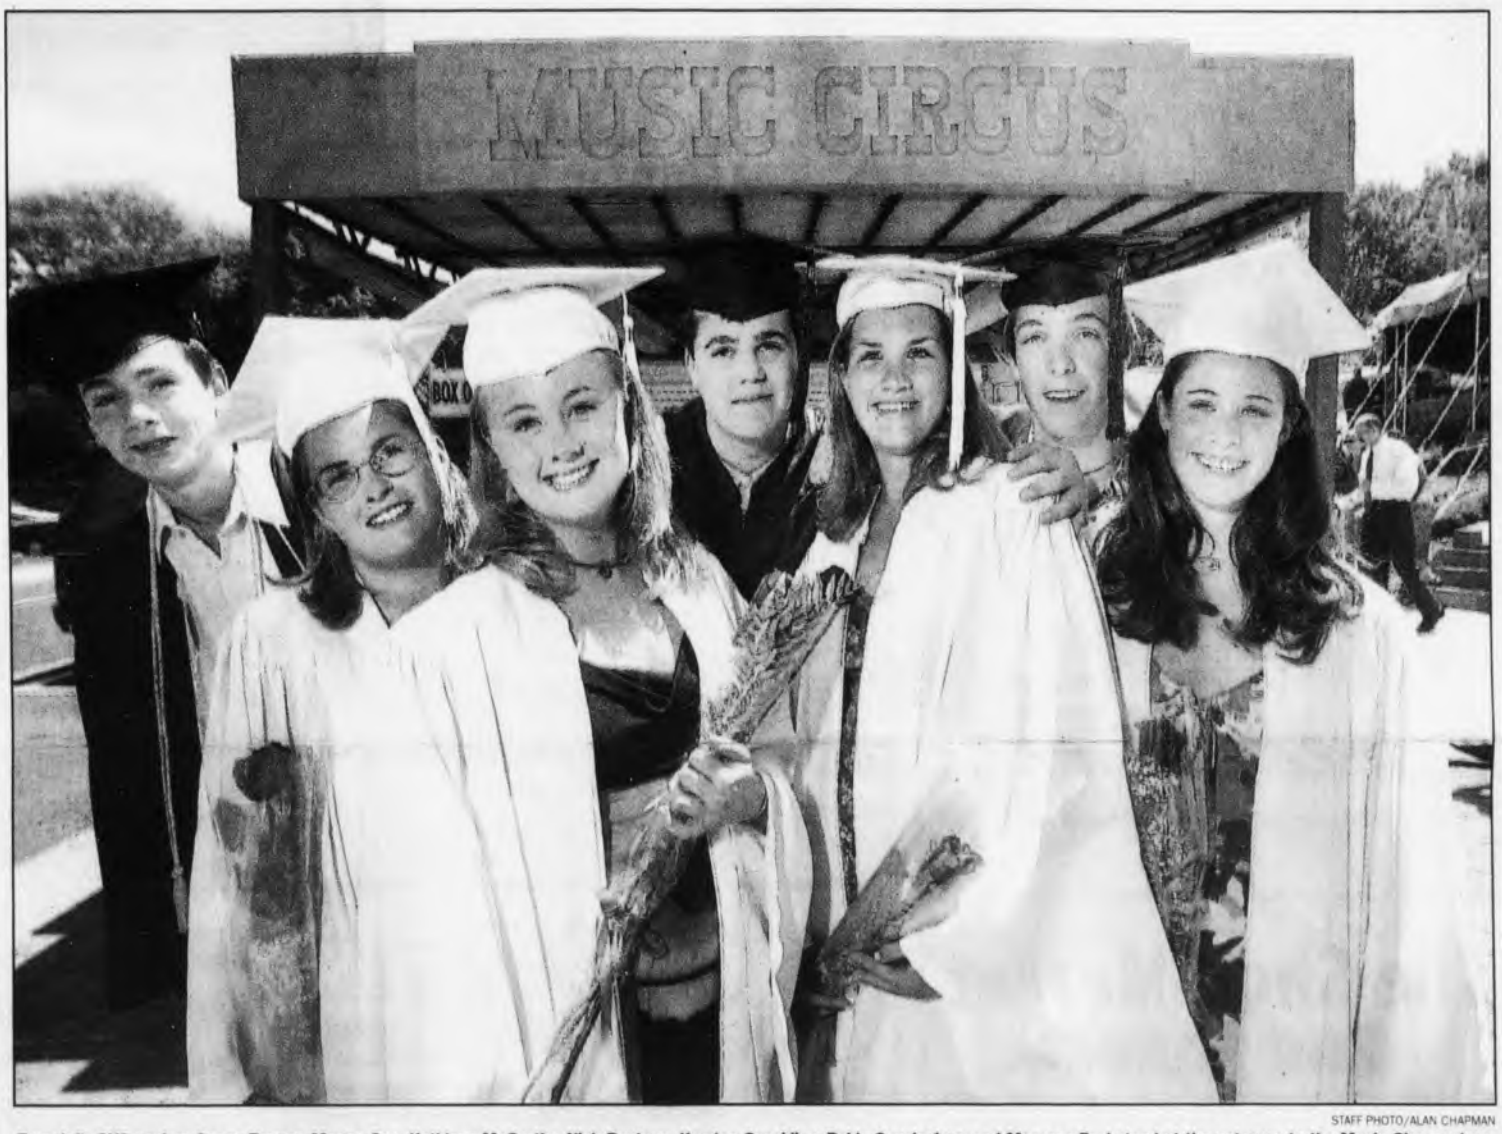
By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The library construction project got a bit of bad news this week when it was not one of the ten projects to be awarded a Massachusetts Library Construction Grant.

The good news is that the project is first on the waiting list. However, state funding to move the Paul Pratt Memorial Library from its South Main Street location to the former Osgood School, could still be up to six months away.

"One hundred percent of the projects wait listed have been funded."
— Patience Towle, library trustee

Although she was "flabbergasted" the project was not chosen in the grant round, library trustee Patience Towle said she is confident the project will get its $1.529 million grant sooner than later.



"We are very optimistic," she said. "One hundred percent of the projects wait listed have been funded."

Essentially, the town has been awarded the grant; it's just that the legislature hasn't appropriated the money to board of library commissioners for Cohasset.

"I really do think, without being able to speak for the legislature, that the money is coming shortly," said Towle.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said he will push for

Class of 2001 told to be resilient

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School Class of 2001 was encouraged to go out and find their "magnum opus" during commencement exercises this past Saturday at the South Shore Music Circus.

Those Latin words from class salutatorian Chris Golden, plucked from the pages of the well-known children's book "Charlotte's Web," urged the 72 graduates to strive to accomplish a great work in their post-Cohasset lives.

"Now that I'm graduating, I look back at how much I've learned from something seemingly so simple," Golden said of the book about the friendship between a pig and a spider. "I've learned friendship and devotion, to pursue my dreams, and to seek out my magnum opus and to achieve it."

Much is expected from this high-achievement graduating class, as was explained in the ceremony's speeches. Cohasset High School Principal Dr. Michael Jones said the class had made his first year at the school "a delight and a pleasure," and remarked on the "passion" the class attacked their goals with.

The 36 girls in white and 36 boys in blue entered the Music Circus tent to the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" played by the Cohasset Middle/High School Band. The seniors crossed over the

200-unit development on horizon for Route 3A site

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Town officials are bracing for the possibility of a 200-plus unit housing development at the former Norfolk Conveyer site off Route 3A.

According to Town Planner Elizabeth Harrington, Avalon Bay Communities, a Quincy-based development company, has proposed constructing up to 250 high-end apartments on the 60-acre property. The company recently finished a similar development on the former Hall Estate in Hull, and is currently developing a piece of land on Route 53 in Weymouth, behind BJ's Wholesale Club.

The company has not yet filed any plans with the town, but did meet with Town Manager Mark Haddad, and other town officials Wednesday to go over what Harrington described as a "very preliminary" proposal.

"It's a very preliminary site plan just for discussion purposes, there really isn't any detail," she said. "It's just a very basic plan showing the placement of the buildings."

Because the Norfolk Conveyor site is in the business technology zoning district, the development would have to be constructed using a comprehensive permit.

Harrington, who splits her time between Cohasset and Hull, described the Hull apartment units as one and two bedroom apartments, priced at between $1,800 and $2,000 a month, and marketed towards young professionals and older couples looking to downsize.

Because the Norfolk Conveyor site is in the business technology zoning district, the development would have to be constructed using a comprehensive permit.

A comprehensive permit, an offshoot of the "Anti-Snob Zoning Act" of 1969, streamlines the permitting process, allowing a developer to sidestep appearances before most local boards, and seek one all-encompassing permit from the zoning board of appeals. In order to qualify for a comprehensive permit, the project must dedicate 25 percent of its housing units as affordable housing. In exchange, local boards have limited ability to stop a project.

Harrington was positive about her experiences with Avalon Properties in Hull.

"They have been very responsive to the town's needs, and have been

Pellet pistols worry police

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Cohasset police are warning area youths that feel cool owning and showing off realistic looking pellet guns, that they could be playing with danger.

Twice in two weeks Cohasset police responded to calls from worried town residents reporting teens brandishing guns, including one near Cohasset Middle/High School. The guns ended up being pellet guns, powered by carbon dioxide cartridges, but still capable of firing a lethal projectile.

"Our concern is that some law enforcement official won't know what is real and what isn't, and that

Meeting schedule

The following is a list of town meetings posted as of Monday, June 13. All meetings will be held at Cohasset Town Hall, unless noted.

- Advisory Committee, June 21, 7:30 p.m.
- Cohasset Conservation Commission, June 14, 7:30 p.m.; June 21, 7:30 p.m.
- Senior Housing Committee, June 20, 9 a.m.
- Planning Board, June 20, 8 p.m.
- Board of Selectmen, June 19, 7:30 p.m.
- Zoning Board of Appeals, June 18, 7:30 p.m.

The School Building Committee meets every Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Selectmen's Office.

Get your beach and RTF stickers

The Board of Selectmen has extended the expiration date of the beach and RTF permits until June 30. Beach and RTF permits will be on sale starting June 4, during normal business hours at the Town Hall and at the DPW garage for the next fiscal year.

Starting July 1, the Pay-As-You-throw Program will start. An "all facilities" sticker will be $50 and an additional second sticker for $20. This sticker will allow access to the RTF, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

Residents who do not utilize the RTF can purchase a beach sticker for $7 and the cost for a senior over 60 is $3. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at various locations throughout the town.

You may purchase your sticker through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford can be reached by e-mail at mford@cnc.com or by telephone at 781-741-2933. Reporter Rick Collins can be reached at ricollins@cnc.com or by telephone at 781-741-2935. The Cohasset Mariner's fax number is 781-741-2931.

Time for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m., Tuesdays.

Water restrictions for North Cohasset

Based upon the extremely dry period in late April and may and the continued high water demands, the Massachusetts-American Water Company, which serves 600 customers in North Cohasset, is advising its customers in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset to continue to use water wisely and efficiently during this upcoming summer season and is implementing mandatory odd-even outside watering restrictions. Outside water use is now limited to between 5 and 9 a.m. and 6 to 10 p.m. on an odd/even schedule consistent with street address number.

Eileen Commane, Operations Manager for the Company said "Recent rainfall has helped curb demand but the 30 plus days of little or no rainfall in late April and May has caused water demands to remain higher than normal. As such, it is especially important that customers use water as efficiently as possible and manage outside water use consistent with the mandatory odd/even schedule.

Cohasset artist's work is a real 'gem'

Dickson drawing wins prize at festival

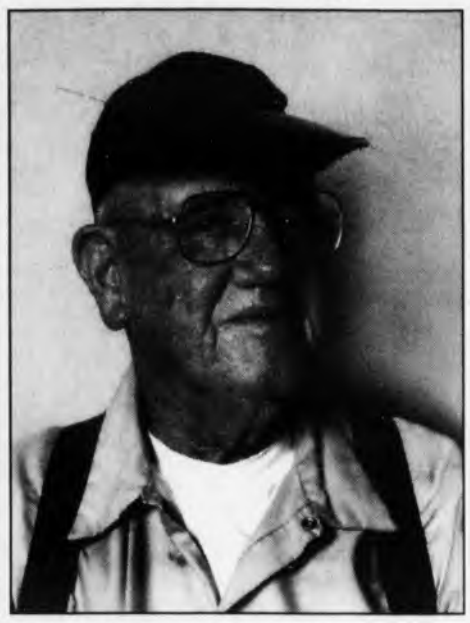
By Timothy Llewellyn
CORRESPONDENT

Christine Millar has an optimistic attitude when it comes to art.

"Forgive yourself that you aren't Rembrandt, but acknowledge that there is something that you can do. Then do it," she said.

This philosophy has certainly been working for the local artist. A Cohasset resident for the past eight years, Millar recently won second prize for Drawing and Pastels in the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common Juried Exhibition. Her work will be on display from June 15-17 in the Main Exhibition tent on the common.

A dog lover, Cliff Dickson and Christine Millar first crossed paths at the Cohasset Kennel.



This year's prize winning entry is a portrait of Cohasset local Cliff Dickson. The portrait is the second in Millar's "Gems of Cohasset" series, which are portraits of people who have been living and working in Cohasset for years, and have become an integral part of the community. The first portrait in the series was of Cohasset "old timer" Fred Blossom. Millar describes them as "people who have been very helpful in making us feel welcome in the area." Her series is a tribute to these local legends.

"[It's] a mark of my appreciation for them just existing," Millar said.

And Dickson certainly fits the bill of local legend. Having worked in the town since returning from the Second World War, Dickson has become a Cohasset staple. He spent his life working for the local Fire Department and the Cohasset Yacht Club. Dickson represents quintessential small town New England. "Cliff's as much Cohasset Yacht Club as the Cohasset Yacht Club is," said friend Peter Wood.

Christine Millar's drawing of Cliff Dickson.

Known as a "cherished character" in town, for years Dickson was seen around town with his late golden retriever "Widgeon" and his light blue pick-up truck. These days "Lisa," an adopted former show dog, never leaves his side.

A dog lover, Dickson and Millar first crossed paths at the Cohasset Kennel, because despite her success, drawing is not a full time job for Millar. In fact, Millar already has more than a full time job. She and her husband, Dr. J. Dermot Millar, opened the kennel when they moved to Cohasset from Australia eight years ago. She describes the kennel as a "very seven day-a-week job" that allows her little spare time.

Millar says she is forced to fit her drawing into the scarce downtime that she has.

"Doing art is almost a meditation, almost a stress release for me... sometimes if you can't get away in body, you have to get away in your mind," she says.

Looking at Millar's work you might expect her to talk about her years of professional art training. Millar uses a deliberate process of layering, rubbing and shading to accurately represent areas of light and shade for a near "photo-realistic" effect. But Millar has only been drawing for two years. In fact, the extent of her artistic education is limited to two Basic Drawing classes at Cohasset's South Shore Art Center. But in the past two years Millar has also won First Prize in the Duxbury Juried show, she was one of about 30 percent accepted in last year's Cohasset Juried show, and last year she also won an Award of Excellence for her still-life drawings of carnations.

But Millar doesn't see her rapid mastery of the graphite pencil as unusual.

"I think everybody can do it, you just have to decide that it is important enough to spend the time." Millar said.

Millar's entry into art education started with an interest in quilting. She hoped that a little formal art training would help her with pattern layout and design. Although quilting has fallen to the wayside, the classes introduced her to the world of graphite pencil drawing, and to the work of the Western pencil artist Robert Shufelt. "Shoofly's" cowboy drawings caught Millar's attention, and her artistic interest. "He started me out thinking, 'I want to do that,'" she recalled.

So what's next for Christine Millar? "Well, I'd like to retire to a 40-hour-a-week job... that would be nice," she said.

The festival is open and free to the public through 6 p.m., Sunday June 17 until 6 p.m.. Donations are welcome and support the art center's programs. For more information on the festival see the Living section in today's paper or, call (781) 383-2787. For a complete schedule, visit the art center's web site at www.ssac.org.

Town to produce new master plan

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The town Growth & Development Committee has officially begun the process of creating a new master plan for Cohasset, and will soon be coming to a neighborhood near you.

Growth & Development Committee Chairman Rick Swanborg described the master plan as a "long term vision and goals for the town."

The last master plan the town created was the "Benjamin Report" in 1961. The new plan will look at the town in terms of town facilities, police and fire departments, open space recreation master plans, economic development, housing needs and demographics.

The last master plan the town created was the "Benjamin Report" in 1961.

"It covers just about everything," he said.

Over the course of the summer, the committee will hold neighborhood meetings to start collecting ideas on what Cohasset residents want to see from the town in the future. The committee will take this information, create a town-wide survey, and then analyze the results with the community.

"Ultimately the beginning of the process is to work with the stakeholders of the town, and get their priorities and their vision," said Swanborg. "We have to find out what they like and don't like, and suggestions for changes."

The final document, which Swanborg hopes will be completed by December, 2002, will take into consideration suggestions, thoughts and ideas, from all town boards, neighborhoods, and regional planning agencies, and be a blueprint for the future of the town.

"Based on the visions and goals and other types of information, we'd recommend changes to the town ranging anywhere from zoning to traffic patterns," he said.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore told Swanborg at a meeting last week that the most crucial part of a master plan is making sure the data the committee bases the plan on, is correct.

"We want to be very careful, we don't want to come up with a defective plan," Moore said, warning against people with agendas. "We don't care how it comes out, as long as it's done accurately."

Planning Board member Robert Sturdy said a plan mapping the future can't be done until the committee looks at the present.

"We really need to know where we are," he said, pointing out conflicts between the town's assessors maps and topographical maps.

Sturdy said the town should ultimately know where every drain, leaching field, and septic system is on every property, as well as all failed and successful perc tests.

New board member Peter Pratt said a master plan would be a way for the town to keep control over its destiny, rather than having it dictated to them through things such as comprehensive permits.

So far the committee has a $30,000 planning grant from the state, and hopes to be able to complete the plan without much of a handout from Town Meeting.

"What we're trying to do as a committee is to not spend any of the town's money unless we really need to," said Swanborg. "We're going to spend the state money first and then roll up our sleeves and do as much as we can ourselves."

He estimates it will take "some limited funds" to finish the plan, but how much is not clear this early in the process.

Swanborg said the Growth & Development Committee will further explain the process, and its goals and objectives in upcoming columns in the Mariner.

Joe and Florence Stanford welcome grandchild #22

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

This bundle of joy is Grace Marie Stanford. Grace arrived May 17 and the 22nd grandchild of Florence and Joe Stanford.

GRADUATION REFLECTIONS

Hello Cohasset. I wanted to start this column by first of all, sending a huge congratulations to the graduates of 2001 from CMHS and to all the graduates that we have in our town from schools and colleges all over. The hard work and dedication that you put in has shown and now, the rest of your life begins in whatever way you choose to take it.

As I watch, see and hear all the excitement and plans of many graduates, I have been thinking how great change is in so many ways. Graduation from schools really does mark a change in ones life and change is a great thing. We are watching change in our daily lives here in Cohasset in so many areas, the town look, the tremendous updates on our schools, the many changes in the sewer systems, the look ahead to a new library along with so many other projects and changes in our personal lives. Sometimes change is hard to accept, whether it be a change in your child's life with the next grade or the move on to a new apartment or college dorm, or whether that change is in the way of a new road, new school or new sidewalks.

We will all have fears, complaints and issues each step of the way but when you then stop and look forward to the end result, most change is positive. I know that I often have to look forward at that end result and then, put my gripes and worries aside as change is really a good thing and we are all lucky in so many ways to be able to enjoy that change. When you get that call of your child, now a young adult saying, "wow, I got my first real job" or you drive down that new road wherever it may be or you can stand at one of our schools and be so proud of the changes that are being made, stop and say to yourself, "look at where we are now!" It is a pretty good feeling!

BIRTHDAY WISHES

A special happy birthday goes out to Daniel Piepenbrink who is turning 11 on June 15. Have a great day Daniel, we love you! Also celebrating a birthday in our family was my husband, Bob, and my Mom, Joann Egan. Happy birthday to all!

CURRY GRAD

We have news from many schools about some wonderful graduates. Let's start with Curry College in Milton which held its commencement ceremony on May 20. Michael Peraino of Cohasset graduated and I know his family is very proud. Congratulations Michael!

NEW DOCTOR

The University of Massachusetts Medical School also held ceremonies and Carole Jean Smith received her degree. Fantastic, Carole.

TOP HONORS

We move now into Rhode Island from the Roger Williams University where Megan Anne Pratt graduated with a bachelor of arts, magna cum laude, from the Feinstein College of Arts and Sciences. That is great news Megan, let us know what your next move is.

DEAN'S LIST

Jessica Niessink of Cohasset, is a student at Fairfield University majoring in Nursing. Jessica, the daughter of Jan and Deborah Niessink, was named to the dean's list. Jessica had to attain a GPA of at least 3.5 out of 4.0 to achieve this honor. She is planning a career in neonatal medicine. Great work Jessica!

NEW ARRIVALS

Speaking of change, two families have had a big change in their families recently.

Patty and Brian Connors of Cohasset had a new baby boy, Seth Christian Connors, born on May 14, 2001 weighing in at 9 lbs., 3 oz. and was 22 ins. long. Seth joins his three big brothers, Ryan and Justin, both 10, and Zachary, who is 3. Seth's grandparents are Walter and Lorraine Missett and Ed and Nancy Connors. Congratulations to all of you, we know that this little guy will be hugged, snuggled and played with all the time with this great family!

Grace Marie Stanford was born also in May. Her birthday is May 17, 2001 and she is the new daughter of Paul and Jennifer Stanford of Plymouth. Grace weighed 6 lbs., 14 oz. and joins her big sister, Madeline, who is 2.. Her grandparents are Anne and Michael Woodbury of Queensbury, N.Y. and Joe and Florence Stanford of Cohasset. This makes grandchild number 22 for Joe and Florence!!!! Congratulations to all of you on this wonderful new addition!

SWIM, DIVING TRYOUTS

The Cohasset Swim Center is holding swim and dive team try-outs on Monday, June 18 for the following age groups only: boys, 17 and under, 14 and under, 10 and under and 8 and under; girls, 17 and under and 8 and under only. The time for this is from 4-6 p.m. and is held at the Swim Center. Dive team try-outs will be held from 6:30-7:30 p.m. on June 18 also.

DONATIONS APPRECIATED

The Cohasset PSO would like to extend a huge "thank you" to all families who recently made pledges for the Annual Phone-A-Thon for the Cohasset Schools. This money is the seed money for the PSO activities and programs for the upcoming 2001-2001 school year. Please make sure to get your pledge envelopes back in and now that your donation is put to wonderful use. Thank you also to the many PSO and other volunteers who helped to make this a great success!

SAILING CLUB EVENT

The Cohasset Sailing Club welcomes its members and their guests to the opening sailing season, "Summer Breeze" gathering and enjoy "makes you feel fine" music provided by the Grateful Dads. The event will be held on Saturday, June 30 from 7-10 p.m. at the Sailing Club. We are asking those of you who plan on attending to bring a food dish for all to share. Members with last names beginning with the letters, A-L, please bring an appetizer. Those with the last names beginning with letters M-Z should bring a dessert. All attendees are responsible for their own beverages and do not forget to leave the kiddies at home! Please call Lucia at 383-2792 or Susan at 383-0765 with any questions. Please come and enjoy the first of many, "Summer Breezes."

MIDDLEBURY SCHOLAR

Ted Noon served as Class Marshal for the Middlebury College Class of 2001. The Derby and Milton academy graduate is the son of Nick and Connie Noon of North Main Street. At Middlebury, Ted is a College Scholar and member of the Student Cabinet.

GROUNDBREAKING

The Deer Hill School is having a ground-breaking ceremony on Monday, June 18 at 9:30 a.m.. This ceremony will include the students and staff from the school and will have some guest speakers as well as some familiar faces from the past. Please plan on coming and attending this wonderful and exciting event to welcome and see the starts of the work at the Deer Hill School.

To all those dads out there Happy Fathers Day!

That is all for this week. Please send in all the news, events and other note-worthy information to me in one of the following ways.

Self-proclaimed late bloomer makes his mark on art scene

Returns to roots, is featured at festival

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

He was the son of a well-known local architect and grandson of a world-famous architect — yet he had to resort to sketching under the covers in bed at night to see if he was any good while growing up.

"When I grew up, Dad and Grandad were so famous, I was so intimidated as a kid to think I could have anything to do with art," said John Maginnis, a Cohasset native who will be a featured artist in this week's Festival on the Common, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center. "There was enormous pressure, not from the family, but everyone else."

Maginnis' grandfather was Charles Maginnis — the only American architect to win three gold medals from the American Institution of Architects — something not even Frank Lloyd Wright accomplished. He designed many of the buildings seen on the campuses of Notre Dame University and Boston College, as well as the National Basilica in Washington, D.C.

His son, Charles Maginnis Jr., was mainly an ecclesiastical architect, who designed Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, Carney Hospital in Dorchester, and a number of churches. He was also a Cohasset resident, one of the first to build a modern-style house along Little Harbor at 39 Nichols Road.

"He built this very modern home amongst a traditional neighborhood," John Maginnis recalled. "He got a lot of comments."

Charles Maginnis Jr. was played a key role in the creation of the South Shore Music Circus. He served as president of the music circus' governing body, the South Shore Playhouse Associates, from 1951 to 1952. "That [the Music Circus] did succeed was due more to his work than to that of any other individual," the group wrote of Maginnis in May of 1954. Unfortunately, it was written as a tribute to Maginnis, who died that February.

"We were always curious as a family what he could have done had he not died at 43," John Maginnis said. It was in 1957, the 17-year old John Maginnis left Cohasset and his days playing around the harbor or on Sandy Beach, and headed to California with his family.

"My grandfather had died in 1955, my dad in 1954, and my mother's parents were elderly and lived in California and we moved out there," he recalled.

He graduated from Palo Alto High School and after attending Michigan Tech University, began a career as an engineer.

Then in 1976, he created his first painting.

"I had a friend that had been on the 1960 gold-medal winning U.S. Olympic hockey team and I read something about them needing to raise money for the 1976 team," he said. "So my first painting was of his gold medal in his red, white and blue hockey gloves."

It wasn't until 1980, when he was 40, that Maginnis dropped his engineering tools and picked up a paintbrush full-time.

"By 1980, everyone was gone," he said. "I always thought I could do it, so I went ahead and did it."

But Maginnis said he didn't get into art just to pursue a recreational hobby.

"I went into it to make a living. I immediately believed I could compete on a professional living," he said. After moving to Sedona, Ariz., a well known Southwest artist colony, and doing some initial "comparison shopping" Maginnis said he knew he'd be successful once he got going.

"A friend of mine with the Cowboy Artists of America told me, I have got to be painting all the time, and then I have to sell the work, or I'd be going back to work as an engineer," Maginnis recalled. "He said, 'Give the public what it wants, not what you want them to have.'"

Maginnis followed his friend's advice and bucked the traditional artist path on his way to developing a sort of cult following as a Southwestern artist specializing in landscapes and portraits and sculptures of Native Americans.

"I've been making a darn good living doing commissioned paintings, and haven't been interested in playing the art game," he said. "I don't do the cocktail circuit, I don't do the galleries, I don't publish a list of celebrity collectors."

Instead, he said, he has developed a strong following of about 50 collectors, which he just keeps going "around and around to."

This past winter we went down to Little Rock, Ark., to do a commissioned piece and got so many requests he stayed the entire winter painting all over the area.

He said he gets satisfaction from knowing that people like the work he has done for them.

"I take pride in it...I get as much satisfaction pleasing someone with a painting they really wanted and is meaningful to them, as I do with my own stuff," Maginnis said.

He also donates lithographs of his work to charities and is in the process of completing a series of "social statements" about the demise of Native Americans.

It was a few years back when the idea to come back to the area first got placed in his head.

"My mom died a couple of years ago and had a memorial service at Boston College. While visiting my old stomping grounds I ran into the then-director of the arts center, who knew all about my father and grandfather, and he said I should introduce my art here," Maginnis remembered.

He came out this spring, with his work all packed up in a U-Haul, submitted three pieces to the arts center for entry into the juried show at the Festival on the Common, and agreed to participate in the center's visiting artists workshop as an instructor.

Last week Maginnis, who is now living in the area with his sister, received word that the festival accepted his painting "Lost in the Garden of Golf" for judging.

"I lost my golf ball and came across this thicket of wild flowers and said 'Wow', and painted it," he said.

Maginnis's class, which will run from July 27-29, is titled "Passionate Pastel," and will be an intensive tutorial on creating mood and emotion through vivid colors and light.

"We're very excited about it, the workshop will be wonderful," said Monica McKenney, director of Development and Public Relations at the arts center said. "It's a fairly intensive workshop designed to excite the artist within."

Maginnis, who describes himself as a "traditional realist," said his primary concern is "bringing out the artists emotionally and spiritually, with a lot of 'Yes, I can' high-confidence stuff."

"It's very simple to do good work, it's not as easy to do great work," said Maginnis, who has moved from landscapes of the open west, to seascapes off Atlantic Avenue. "I try to make it real simple and easy."

John Maginnis, shown here, has deep roots in Cohasset.

His brief time back on the South Shore, and bumping into people he knows from years back, has made Maginnis think about replanting roots in the area – although it has been a bit of a culture shock.

"Out west we just get so used to space, we have so much room," he said. "Bumper to bumper traffic is unheard of except in Denver or Phoenix."

Although Maginnis is happy where his career is, he does sometimes feel he's being watched by his father and grandfather who want to know when he's going to "get with it, and do some monumental images."

"I'm not interested in becoming famous, that's not where I'm at right now. But I do have one wish in my life," he said. "I want to do just one magnificent painting so that no matter who's looking at it, no matter what there art bent is, that they looked at the image and became enthralled and stimulated by the piece.

"That would be fun."

John Maginnis's "Passionate Pastel" will be held from Friday, July 27, through Sunday, July 29 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the South Shore Arts Center on Ripley Road. For more information, contact the arts center at 781-383-2787. Maginnis himself can be reached at 617-513-5647.

Visiting Artist Workshops 2001

The South Shore Art Center is becoming a summer destination for artists, art students and cultural enthusiasts. The center's summer initiative, Visiting Artist Workshops 2001 includes master classes in the visual arts. Eleven master art instructors are offering an innovative array of workshop topics including photo etching on metal, landscape painting in oils, color woodcut printing, pastel painting, watercolor landscape, encaustic painting, book arts, photography, and impressionist still life painting

The instructors include: Karen Christians, Jared Clackner, Stuart Baron, Annie Silverman, John Brooks Maginnis, Heidi Whitman, Tracy Spadafora, William Ternes, Peter Madden, Frank Gohlke, and Margaret McWethy. They are all practicing artists as well as instructors at some of the most highly regarded art schools in the area including Boston University, Harvard, the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, the Massachusetts College of Art, the DeCordova Museum, and the Worcester Art Museum.

All participating instructors' work will be on exhibition in the Bancroft Gallery. Summer Encounters: Visiting Artists Exhibition will open Friday, Aug. 10 from 6-8 p.m. The reception is free to all and will provide the public an opportunity to meet the instructors and view some of their work.

The exhibition will be on display until Sept. 9. For more information or to register for any of the visiting artist workshops call 781/383-ARTS or visit www.ssac.org.

Opening a new property tax debate

Thanks to the surpluses born of a strong economy, taxes are coming down. A bill signed this week by President Bush reduced federal income tax rates. A referendum Massachusetts voters adopted last fall cut state income tax rates.

But property tax rates are another story. In the last decade, the average property tax bill on a single family home in Cohasset grew 62 percent from $3,367 in 1990 to $5,410 in 2000. During that time, the property tax bill for a family in Hingham grew from $2821 to $4,447, an increase of 63 percent, and in Scituate from $2,111 to $3,234 or 65 percent.

That's the context in which we should consider House Speaker Thomas Finneran's recent comments on the state sales tax. Finneran suggested raising the sales tax may be a way to bring down property taxes and proposed a commission be named to develop alternatives that would shift the load more evenly onto all taxpayers.

The problems with the property tax are many. Property taxes are based on home values, which often don't reflect the owner's ability to pay. They are especially tough on senior citizens and others on fixed income. And property taxes encourage poor land use policies. Because property tax receipts don't cover the cost of educating children, local officials discourage new housing — pushing home prices up —while encouraging sprawling commercial development.

These concerns are given short shrift by state leaders who like to think of the income and sales taxes as their business and local property taxes as someone else's concern. They say increased state school aid has kept property taxes down, which is true only in some places. The Chapter 70 education aid formula is inequitable and unresponsive to enrollment growth.

State political leaders like to pretend Proposition 2 1/2, the 1980 referendum limiting property tax increases, solved the property tax problem. But even limited annual tax hikes can pile up over 20 years. A serious review of Proposition 2 1/2's strengths and shortcomings is long overdue.

There are problems with the sales tax as well. It's regressive, taking a larger percentage of the income of the poor than the wealthy. It also fluctuates with the economy, and we wouldn't want to have to cut back on local school programs with every dip in consumer spending.

But Finneran should be applauded for being willing to open a discussion most elected officials at the state level have avoided out of deference to the forces behind Proposition 2 1/2. We need to look not only at how high we set the rates for individual taxes but at the mix of taxes that pay for education and other public services. If Finneran or his commission can come up with a way to take some of the burden of school budgets off the local property tax, all Massachusetts taxpayers could benefit.

Rusty Skippers say 'thank you'

TO THE EDITOR:

In your recent editorial cheering the return of the CMHS band to the Memorial Day Parade (three cheers for that!), you referred to our band as "the beloved Rusty Skippers". On behalf of the band, I thank you for your continued enthusiastic support of our musical endeavors. Also, many thanks publicly to Steve Biagini, Director of Instrumental Music at Deer Hill School, for his ongoing efforts on our behalf. Without Steve's time and expertise, we would not be so musical; in fact, we probably would not exist! We are so fortunate to have him as our Director.

The weekend of the Arts Festival marks our sixth anniversary. I wonder if the Reverend Ed Atkinson could have imagined this when he suggested a town-wide band for the 1995 Harborfest. We will be playing for the Arts Festival on Saturday the 16th at 11 a.m. As always, we welcome new members to join the Rusty Skippers, and would look forward to meeting them on the 16th.

It is our pleasure to play for the town and we do appreciate your support.

Disputes Massport

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to respond to Thomas Kinton's "Massport sets the record straight" letter.

First of all, nothing said could be further from the truth as setting the record straight. The South Shore Jet Pollution Council is only reporting to the public from Massport's own EIS report submitted for public review. The issues discussed are real problems, the noise in some areas of town is already unacceptable, and there is no way that the South Shore will not experience additional noise if the runway is built.

This is America, you can believe who you want. As I am awakened every night at 2 a.m. as the Fed. Ex. cargo plane roars over my house, I want to believe Massport so much, but something tells me not to, as according to Massport, these are "over the water" nighttime operations and I should not even be bothered by them. I want to believe Massport but every current runway configuration sends planes over our area. I want to believe Massport even though they actually have two current runway configurations, used every day, which send arrivals and departures over our area at the same time at different altitudes. I want to believe Massport but have documented up to four planes passing over our area at the same time, all different directions, some of the planes appear high, some low, but all giving off very loud noise, all at the same time. Massport has never addressed this issue, although they have received almost daily complaints. I want to believe Massport, but the South Shore is the only area now that never receives a break in the air traffic unless there are no flights at Massport. How often is that? As for property values not being affected, again you can believe who you want. Massport states that the areas most affected by the noise, those closest to the runways, have seen property values increase by 40 percent in the last ten years. I think the Greater Boston area has probably seen that in the last two years? Even the people in Winthrop, with beautiful coastal neighborhoods and homes, knows that Massport is not telling it straight and their properties should be worth far more than what Massport states. According to Massport, our property values will not even be affected. I know I would defiantly buy a million dollar home under a flight path and not think twice about it. Wow, and this home comes with a 24-hour flight path too! I would like to be first in line to outbid the highest bidder for that quality amenity!

If Massport wants us to have any faith in their new proposal, they need to address our real concerns now, and be truthful about what is happening now and what is proposed. We would welcome an open debate on the issue anytime with Massport and the FAA.

Runway expansion — a second opinion

LOGAN VIEW

MARY ANN FRYE

Massport Aviation Director Thomas Kinton appeared down here in the South Shore papers last week. I believe it was because the South Shore Jet Pollution Council (SSJPC) is really onto something about Massport's Environmental Impact Statement for runway 14/32 (EIS). In the aviation delay crisis Massport is like a surgeon which only profits if the solution to the problem involves knives. If delay reduction by peak period pricing is implemented, the major surgery of runway expansion —which would graft new appendages of pollution and noise onto Greater Boston — looks pricey and dangerous in contrast. In medicine, any sane person who understands the options makes the cleaner and non-invasive choice.

But in aviation projects, it is nearly unheard of to get a second opinion. Massachusetts Environmental Secretary Robert Durand is charged with deciphering the charts and tables in the EIS, but he does not have the in-house aviation staff to give a second opinion. Even the FAA doesn't. Consulting specialists in aviation all work for the airlines and the airports. They don't have any other client. Massport must have been confident that no one could take the EIS apart and

Special talent brings home gold medal

Cohasset athlete competes at world winter games

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Racing down a snowy mountain in Alaska at break-neck speed on skis didn't scare her.

What gave Jessica MacDonald — a Special Olympic athlete — pause was the size of the crowd.

"There were so many people watching," recalls Jessica about the opening ceremonies of the World Games. "It was really scary."

But facing challenges is something that Jessica, 27, hasn't shied away from. The race down the mountain netted her a gold medal in the downhill event Special Olympic World Winter Games this past winter. In the giant slalom, she took home the bronze.

Jessica, who only took up skiing eight years ago, won two gold medals in the 2000 Massachusetts State Games, a feat that qualified her for the 2001 world games.

While all her hard work and talent paid off, one of the sweetest rewards occurred Monday when her peers at the Scituate Special Olympics honored her with the Jackie Flynn Athlete of the Year Award.

"I'm really proud in what I have accomplished," Jessica said, while displaying the trophy at the awards banquet St. Anthony's Parish Hall. Jessica was one of about 40 athletes honored that evening.

The 50-member strong Scituate Special Olympics includes athletes from area towns. They range in age from eight to over 40. Jessica, a Cohasset resident, attended the Osgood and Deer Hill schools and then went to Scituate High where she was part of the "magnet program" there for special kids. The Scituate Special Olympics got its start 32 years ago and is part of the South Suburban Special Olympics. It is an outgrowth of the SHS program for many of the athletes.

"We continue to include our athletes when they are no longer in school," says Taffy Nothnagle of Cohasset, who coordinates the Scituate Special Olympics.

Sunday's banquet included a meal — provided by the Kierce family of Cohasset — dance, raffle and awards. Jackets were awarded to the new athletes.

Jessica, who works at the before- and after-school program at Osgood and Deer Hill schools, also competes in Special Olympics track & field events in the 3,000-meter walk, 100-meter run and 4-by-100 relay.

She also bowls and plays basketball but says softball is her favorite sport and plays in the Quincy Women's League.

Nothnagle says Jessica was the perfect choice for the top athlete award this year.

"The decision is made by a committee for the athlete with the most notable achievement," she says.

Nothnagle, who is the coordinator of the life skills program for special needs students at SHS, explains that Jessica also helps out with coaching and selling raffle tickets for the program.

"She is terrific, very capable," Nothnagle says.

Two other major awards were presented Monday. Jay Nothnagle of Cohasset won the Sean Powell Captain's Trophy and Mark Hodgkins of Scituate won the Rosemary Kierce Spirit Award.

As for Jessica, she's trying to find room for her new trophy.

"There's a spot on the mantel," she says, where the captain's trophy — that she won last year — was displayed. The captain's trophy is a perpetual one that is returned for the next recipient.

Jessica's parents, Joe and Agnes MacDonald, and her sisters, Sarah and Madlyn, also went to Anchorage to support Jessica's efforts at the world games.

"We are all very proud of her accomplishments," Agnes said.

The Special Olympics, founded more than 30 years ago by Eunice Kennedy Shriver, is for the benefit of persons with mental retardation.

State doughnut?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A group of second graders from Somerville with too much time on their hands have proposed that the state adopt Boston cream as the official doughnut of the state of Massachusetts because they liked the idea "that there was chocolate on top and cream in the middle."

This probably explains why studies show that about one-third of our youngsters are overweight, but I digress . .

The last time the state chose an official doodad, it was the Toll House chocolate chip cookie.

The Legislature, which also has too much time on its hands, has been considering the canonization of the Boston cream doughnut along with state budgets, health care, education and the Big Dig for the last four years. Right now, the Senate has passed it; the House is debating it.

You can tell things aren't going well for our lawmakers on Beacon Hill when they pause in the course of their deliberations to make something-or-other the official thingamabob of the Commonwealth.

I'm looking forward to the day when they make Whitey Bulger the state's official fugitive and the FBI's Boston Bureau the official criminal organization. Don't laugh. You know what happens during those late night sessions in the legislators' annual headlong rush to adjournment.

The last time the Legislature chose an official doodad for the state it was the Toll House chocolate chip cookie, which was named the official state cookie at the behest of some school kids from Whitman and Somerset who had too much time on their hands. The fig Newton finished a weak second.

This was just after the salons (so-called) got through crowning the Boston cream pie as the state's official dessert as nominated by students at Norton High School and Johnny Appleseed as the official folk hero to join with the official heroine, Deborah Sampson, the Revolution's female soldier.

At last count, we have accumulated more than 30 official things, as ordained by the Legislature.

There are no less than four pieces of official state music, including an official song, "All Hail to Massachusetts" (by Arthur Marsh); an official folk song, "Massachusetts" (by Arlo Guthrie); an official patriotic song, Massachusetts, because of you our land is free" (by Bernie Davidson); and an official ceremonial march, "Road to Boston" (author unknown).

There's an official fish (the cod, of course), an official insect (the ladybug), an official bird (the chickadee, although Larry drew a lot of vocal support from Celtics fans), an official game bird (the wild turkey), even an official fossil (the dinosaur tracks) but no official animal, unless they snuck one in without my knowing.

We have an official muffin (corn), an official bean (baked navy) and an official beverage (cranberry juice) but no official "adult beverage," as Bill Weld used to call the amber fluid that Ron Kaufman and others used to put away during conferences at his Cambridge home.

I nominate as the official alcoholic beverage of the Commonwealth the Cape Codder (vodka and cranberry juice). I hope the legislators get on it right away. I hope their deliberations are lengthy. They can do less harm that way.

HEALTH NOTES

Public advisory on West Nile Virus

By Joseph R. Godzik, VMD
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In 2000 the West Nile Virus (WNV) made its presence known in Cohasset. While no cases in humans were reported, seven cases in birds were diagnosed. All were crows. Positive birds were reported from Lamberts Lane, Jerusalem Road, Linden Drive, Pleasant Street, Sohier Street and Sandy Beach Lane. Most people are familiar with Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) another so-called arborvirus infection because it has been here in New England for many years. WNV infects many more people than EEE but is a much milder disease with mortality is less than 10 percent. EEE is much deadlier.

This year, the Mass Department of Public Health (MDPH) will operate a toll–free information line 1-866-MASS-WNV (627-7968) which is operational. This line will be used to report any dead birds. Do not call the Board of Health to report a dead bird. Once a dead bird has been reported to the MDPH at the above number, they will inform the caller if the bird should be tested. If the MDPH says the bird is to be tested, call the Board of Health office Monday through Friday and someone will instruct you where to bring the bird. Sometimes pickups of the bird can be arranged. Bird surveillance, that is, testing dead birds for WNV, as well as mosquito testing are the two most important methods for reducing disease in humans. So when you find a dead bird, especially a crow, call the MDPH information line above.

One of the activities that will be going on to reduce transmission of mosquito borne disease is reducing the places where mosquitoes breed, larger scale projects will be carried out by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control District. However, individuals can help in source reduction by getting rid of standing water. Mosquito's breed in any puddle or standing water that lasts more than four days. Here are some simple things you can do to reduce breeding places:

- Dispose of or regularly empty any container that can hold water. This includes trashcans.
- Keep swimming pools clear and properly chlorinated; remove standing water from pool covers.
- Drill holes in recycling containers that are left outside so water can drain out.
- Clean clogged roof gutters; remove leaves and debris that may prevent drainage of rainwater
- Turn over plastic wading pools and wheel barrels when not in use.
- Do not allow water to stagnate in birdbaths; aerate ornamental pools or stock them with fish.
- Use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property

Since there is no vaccine or treatment for WNV, here are some tips to protect yourself from being bitten by a mosquito:

- Avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, if possible, as this is the time of greatest mosquito activity.
- When outdoors when mosquitos are active, wear a long sleeved shirt and long pants. Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (N-N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) and follow the directions on the label. DEET can be poisonous if overused, NEVER use DEET on infants. Don't use repellents with concentrations about 10-15% on children or above 30-35% on adults. Cream, lotion or stick formulas are best for use on the skin. Avoid those containing alcohol because these may be absorbed through the skin.
- Take special care to cover arms and legs of children playing outdoors. When bringing a baby outdoors, cover the stroller or playpen with mosquito netting.
- Fix screens in your house that have holes and make sure they are tightly attached to your doors and windows.

Doing the things which were described can produce great benefits for you and Cohasset in controlling West Nile Virus and Eastern Equine Encephalitis.

Dr. Joseph Godzik is the town's health agent.

Cohasset's Lawrence Barrett and Gen. George Armstrong Custer

REFLECTIONS

DAVID WADSWORTH

A prominent member of Cohasset's "Actor's Row" having summer residence at the harbor during latter years of the 19th century was the tragedian Lawrence Barrett; whose large Victorian home on Margin Street later was to be lived in by financier Clarence Walker Barron. Barrett was an associate of fellow actor Edwin Booth and both were well known on the N.Y. stage. Less well known was Barrett's military record during the Civil War, when he served as an officer in the 28th Mass. regiment, one of the Commonwealth's two "ethnic" Irish regiments. Having the rank of Captain, Barrett commanded Company B of the 28th at the battle of Secessionsville, James Island, SC, on June 21, 1862.

Shortly afterwards, on about July 28, he resigned his commission and returned home, apparently to attend to serious family matters. Barrett had served with the 28th Mass. from Dec. 13, 1861 as Captain. Perhaps because of that particular service, Barrett later came to know, and become friendly with, Colonel George Armstrong Custer, who, in 1861 had served as an aide to General George McClellan. Later Custer would become a well known cavalry officer commanding the U.S. 7th Cavalry. It is said that, at a later time, Barrett, because of this friendship with George Custer, was offered an opportunity to join the 7th Cavalry, but declined the offer. On June 25 and 26, 1876, George A. Custer and the 7th Cavalry would fight, and lose, the most famous battle fought by the U.S. Army and the Plains Indians: the Battle of the Little Big Horn. The combined forces of the Plains tribes, under the great Sioux Chief Sitting Bull, decisively defeated Custer's command. General Custer and more than 200 officers and men of the 7th Cavalry died in battle.

It may well be fortunate for Lawrence Barrett and for the theater world that he declined the opportunity to join Custer's 7th Cavalry, for Barrett lived well past the date of the Little Big Horn battle, dying in New York on March 20, 1891 at age 52. Obituary articles note that a special funeral train brought his remains to Boston, and another, the "Woodlawn" of the New Haven Railroad brought them to Cohasset, where his funeral was held at St. Anthony's Church and was attended by notables of the theater world and by numerous local residents. Lawrence Barrett is buried in Cohasset's Central Cemetery, near other members of "Actor's Row" and their families. The author Sandy Barnard, of the General George Custer Battlefield Museum recently visited Cohasset, to study the Society's archives while researching General Custer's friendship with Lawrence Barrett, and may soon publish a detailed article on this subject in the Museum's magazine.

argue for the kinder fix.

Enter the Citizen Advisory Committee (CAC) representing several dozen Boston area towns, which finally pressured Massport to give a fraction of its consulting budget for an independent review. Result: a report that revealed Massport had used very stale data about fleet mix. The EIS made it look like 14/32 would serve a substantial turboprop (non-jet) fleet. Widely available current fleet mix data shows that regional jets for which 14/32 is too short are quickly replacing turboprops, and the major claimed need for 14/32 is dead.

In parallel, the South Shore towns (lost under a red soup of low altitude jet runs on the EIS maps) put in a massive volunteer effort — and hired a team of internationally accomplished experts in emissions pollution, noise, delays, peak period pricing, real estate valuation, and environmental law, to give a principled, professional and comprehensive second opinion on the EIS and find out what 14/32 would really do to us. The 300-plus page study comes out at the end of this week. Secretary Durand and the FAA have it in hand now. Highlights: Delays will not decrease. Peak period pricing at little cost does a much better job reducing delays than an expensive runway. Noise and emissions are grossly underestimated. No airspace design was even done. The figures do not add up.

With admirable energy and expert precision, the SSJPC team led by Bill Golden have weighed whether the claims Massport made are supported by the data they present and whether the data is real. Will Sec. Durand and the FAA set Massport straight? Stay tuned.

Library project funding delayed

more funding as soon as debate finishes on the general budget.

"I'll fight for it, and I know, [state Sen. Robert] Hedlund will fight for it," he said. Bradley also said he will support a couple of bills before the legislature that would allocate $75 million for library renovation projects across the state.

The Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners awarded $16.7 million in grant money to library projects in Acushnet, Blackstone, Chicopee, Chilmark, Gardner, Leverett, Palmer, Provincetown, Rowley and Sunderland.

Towle said the board divided the projects into groups based on town population and chose the best of each group. Because of Cohasset's number one position on the wait-list, she takes that to mean the Cohasset project did "no worse than second in our group."

The Cohasset project will be funded once either the legislature passes a supplementary budget allocating more money for library grants, or one of the libraries in the top ten doesn't receive permission to accept the grant and build a library from that town's governing body by December.

Towle met with the board yesterday, and was told a supplementary budget won't be passed until the general state budget is completed, and that could take another couple of months.

In the meantime, Towle was scheduled to meet Wednesday with Town Manager Mark Haddad and town Finance Director Michael Buckley to go over the project's options, and then report back to a meeting of the library's trustees last night.

She said one of the options was not waiting for the money to be in hand, and asking Town Meeting for "an advance."

Towle is concerned that by delaying the project, its cost could rise.

The grant funding will help the library renovate the dilapidated former Osgood School into a new 15,000 square foot library, with a 60-seat public reading room. The full cost of the project is estimated at $3.3 million, $700,000 which is expected to come from the sale of the current Paul Pratt Memorial Library building. The remaining $1.1 million is being raised through an ongoing fundraising campaign.

200-unit development on horizon for Route 3A site

good to work with," she said.

Haddad said the town is looking at this project very carefully.

"We're always concerned with a project of this size, and the impact it will have on the community," he said. "But if we work with this particular developer and all town boards get involved, and we get something that fits the character of quality of the town, and we meet the housing needs for senior citizens and other segments, I think this will be great for the town."

Harrington said the town and developer still have to discuss issues such as traffic and sewers before a formal plan can be filed.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore wasn't able to comment on the proposal itself, but did say he was concerned with the potential loss of valuable commercial property in the town. Just seven percent of Cohasset's tax base is made up by commercial property.

"It's well suited as an industrial site, and it sort of flies in the face of even-handed development," he said. "I can point to communities that are nothing but basically bedroom communities, where it's all residential and all you can build are starter mansions.

"We have those in Cohasset, but if someone wanted to they could develop an industrial business, and I think that's important."

Moore said a similar project was proposed further north on Route 3A about 10 years ago, but never made it through the permitting process.

LIBRARY CORNER

Waiting list

Ten Massachusetts Library Construction Grants, totaling $16.7 million, were awarded by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners on June 7. Cohasset was not among them, however, it was listed as first on the waiting list of 36 Massachusetts libraries for receipt of Library Construction Grants as funding becomes available.

Being first on the waiting list means that Cohasset is certain of receiving a $1,529,552 construction grant under either of two possible scenarios: (1), as soon as the Massachusetts Legislature appropriates more money for library construction grants, which is believed to be very likely when the supplemental budget is voted this summer; or (2), any of the 10 towns that received grants on June 7 do not receive approval to accept the grant and build a library from their town governing body by December 2001.

Cohasset's Town Meeting can decide to move ahead on this long-awaited library project, knowing that Cohasset will receive the Construction Grant — it is only a question of when. The new Joseph Osgood School was constructed using short-term borrowing, while waiting to receive its Massachusetts Construction Grant.

The library trustees are currently discussing the situation with the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, as well as Cohasset's town manager and chief financial officer. A possible course of action will be to wait and see if Cohasset receives a grant this summer from the legislature's supplemental budget and if it doesn't, recommend to the fall town meeting that Cohasset begin the project immediately, knowing the Construction Grant will be received in the near future.

Patience G. Towle, the chair of the library trustees stated, "Apparently, geographic and socio-economic conciderations didn't favor Cohasset in the selection process. We know, however, that we are going to receive the grant and are very lucky to be Number One on the Waiting List."

For information, call Patience Towle at 781-383-1954.

Public input sought on World's End tonight

On Thursday, June 14, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Hingham Town Hall, members of The Trustees of Reservations' Management Planning Team for World's End will share findings from an ecological and historic resources assessment and data from a visitor survey conducted last summer. The public is encouraged to come to the forum and share thoughts on the direction that future management of the property should take, including myriad aspects of resource protection and visitor use. The Planning Team consists of 13 staff and volunteers, including ecologists, historians and members of the local community, who are charged with updating the original, 35-year-old management plan for World's End, the 251-acre open space peninsula in Hingham Harbor.

The public is encouraged to come to the forum and share thoughts on the direction that future management of the property should take

Following the forum, the Planning Team will outline a set of management objectives that supports overarching guiding principles for resource protection and visitor use. Scheduled for completion in October, 2001, the plan will help guide future resource protection and visitor services at the property.

Hingham Town Hall is on Central Street.

Strawberry Festival benefits charities

The Second Congregational Church , as part of the Cohasset Art Center's Festival on the Common, is hosting the annual Strawberry Festival with fresh strawberry shortcake and a country store with home baked goods. Dates and times are: Friday, June 15, noon to 9pm; Saturday June 16, 8am to 9pm; and Sunday June 17 noon to 6pm. At the church on Highland Avenue next to Town Hall. A snack bar on the Common will serve hot dogs, frozen specialty drinks, and beverages, chips, and other wholesome foods.

Proceeds will benefit a list of charities including Father Bills, Habitat for Humanity, Quincy Crisis Center, Salvation Army, DOVE, Morgan Memorial, and many others.

For more than 30 years, members of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset have repeatedly supported the Strawberry Festival as a means to help the needy in the greater Boston area. In addition to the largely anonymous outreach routinely carried out by the church, the congregation has supplemented its giving by donating nearly $10,000 which this event nets every year. Volunteers all over this small seaside town have worked for weeks gathering articles for sale, preparing baked goods, and finally preparing the delicacies which make the event such a success. Because of the popularity of the Arts Festival held at the same time, and the expansion of the crafts exhibits which allow people to spend a whole day in an interesting and picturesque setting, the event has grown. Last year more than 900 Strawberry shortcakes were sold. This year, over 500 quarts of fresh strawberries from farms in Rhode Island will be brought to Cohasset and prepared in a marathon cleaning and slicing session on the Thursday night before the Festival .

Summer concerts

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first concert on Cohasset Common for the 2001 season is scheduled for Tuesday evening July 10, at 7:30 p.m., on the Cohasset Common.

Performing will be the 30 piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Bring blankets or lawn chairs and insect repellant.

Concerts are paid for by the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. of Cohasset and with matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians of New York City, N.Y.

The second concert of this season will be held on Tuesday, July 24, same time, same place.

Music Circus shows for kids

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the first Music Circus registration for "Alice in Wonderland" on Tuesday, June 26 from 9 a.m. to noon, and again from 5 to 7 p.m. at the recreation office at Town Hall.

Music Circus registrations for children involved in the Playground Program are held every Tuesday at the recreation office from 9 a.m. to noon and from 5 to 7 p.m., June 26 through July 24. The only exception to this schedule will be the Tuesday, July 3 registration for "Jack in the Beanstalk," which will be held from 9 a.m. to noon only.

Music Circus registrations are held two weeks prior to the actual date of the show. Registration on June 26 for "Alice in Wonderland" is for the performance that is on Thursday, July 12. Please consult the summer fliers or the Playground Program Activity Brochure for details.

British Relief closing marks the end of an era

Catering business will continue

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

A 20-year tradition in Hingham Square has come to an end with the closing of the popular British Relief restaurant.

A sign posted outside the front door announcing the news came as a shock to many customers, who hailed not only from Hingham, but the surrounding towns of Cohasset, Quincy, Marshfield, Weymouth and Duxbury, to name a few.

The retail side of the business will remain open through June. Arthur Roebuck Catering will carry on, moving in July to an as yet unknown location, most likely in his hometown of Cohasset or neighboring Scituate.

In fact, the catering service is already booked until next June.

Roebuck's parting message to his loyal customers — written at the bottom of the sign — reveals how deeply he cares about each one of them:

"British Relief, 1980-2001 — A great run — We love you all."

Ever since the restaurant closed its doors two weeks ago, Arthur Roebuck and his wife and business partner, Vee, of Cohasset, have been inundated with calls from friends and customers who couldn't believe their ears when they heard the restaurant had closed its doors for the last time. Cards and letters have also been pouring in.

"That's quite a run for a restaurant," Arthur said. "The British Relief was also a great draw for the Square, including a large number out-of-towners."

Arthur was never too busy to spend a few minutes with customers — even if it was just a quick tap on their table as he rushed past to acknowledge their presence and let them know how much they were appreciated.

While many customers attribute much of the restaurant's popularity to Arthur's affability, there's more to its success than that, he humbly claims.

"It's not about me or the comfortable booths but the fact that people enjoyed talking to each other," said Arthur. "If someone left town and came back at a later time, there would always be someone in the British Relief they would know when they returned. Fine dining isn't just about good food, but also proper service, nice equipment and good conversation."

Still, Arthur's "graciousness" had a great deal to do with the restaurant's success, Vee said.

It pleased the Roebucks to no end when young adults in their 30s shared their recollections of earlier days spent in the British Relief with their mothers when they were five- or six-years-old.

For many, the British Relief was like a home away from home.

"Some children learned to read here. We always had a good supply of books as well as crayons," Vee said.

For the most part, though, Arthur feels like he's saying good-bye to the last of the "please and thank-you crowd" – that solid core of customers who have returned regularly year after year.

"On any given day you could see them sitting at the huge wooden table in the center of the room, just happy to be eating an egg salad sandwich, having a bowl of chowder or sipping a cup of tea," Arthur said.

There's no doubt the Roebucks will miss the lunch-time crowd and the steady stream of customers into the retail side of the business, but they're ready to go on to the next chapter.

The location will change, but the Roebuck style of service will continue in the catering business. The Hingham phone number will remain the same.

Cohasset residents, Arthur Roebuck and his wife, Vee, are closing the British Relief after 20 years. They plan to continue their catering business out of an, as yet, unknown new location.

"We'd still like to be able to drop off a casserole to a senior citizen who can't get out," Roebuck said.

A number of factors contributed to Roebuck's decision, including difficulty in maintaining high-quality help and the fact that it looks like the train will be coming to the square in the near future with the expected revival of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad.

The fact that an acquaintance of Roebuck's has plans to create a new restaurant at the same location – an effort he fully supports – was a contributing factor in making his decision. (See related story.)

The ambiance of the British Relief, with its cozy, high-backed wooden booths, hardwood floor, chalkboards listing daily specials and friendly atmosphere drew large crowds and caused long lines.

But it was always worth the wait.

Whether consuming mouth-watering hot crabmeat salad on toast covered with Vermont cheddar cheese, a "Sunshine" open-faced turkey and cranberry sauce sandwich or simpler fare — egg or tuna salad — customers always left full — and satisfied.

"It's a round-the-clock operation," Vee said.

That's especially true these days, because Arthur is doing all the cooking himself.

During the 35-year history of the company, the Roebucks have literally catered to thousands of customers. Many of those heard about the catering and retail business and restaurant by word of mouth.

There was more to the British Relief than good food, though, as delicious as it was.

The Roebucks literally poured their hearts and souls into the entire business, which was truly a family affair. The same still applies to the catering end of the operation.

"When our children were young, it wasn't unusual for their mother to pile them all in her car and show up at a wedding with the candelabra or a silver tray," Arthur said with a laugh.

At other times, the children rolled hors d'oeuvres or helped deliver Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners and all the fixings. During the holidays, it wasn't unusual for the Roebucks to bake 200-300 pies.

Arthur first became interested in catering when he worked for a catering company during his college years.

Ironically, he majored in history at Boston University. But in the end, he created a little history of his own.

Everyone from royalty to common folk

British Relief served them all

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Arthur Roebuck's catering company has a long history.

He first opened shop in Duxbury in 1964. During the mid-1960s, Roebuck and his wife, Vee, opened a cheese import and icecream-sandwich shop in Cohasset Village and continued their catering operation there.

When the Roebucks needed more space in 1972, they relocated to Hingham Square temporarily — or at least that's what they thought.

Eight years later, when the Roebucks decided to open a restaurant in part of the building, which is owned by the Giarrussos of Hingham, the name "British Relief" came to mind.

Growing up as a child during wartime, Roebuck had vivid memories of the efforts of the British Relief, an American organization with which his family's church was involved. The group performed a number of services, from rolling bandages to raising money to bring children from England to America "to keep them out of harm's way" — the same kind of hospitality offered by the British Relief restaurant, except under far different circumstances.

Over the years, customers have gifted the Roebucks with all kinds of British memorabilia, ranging from cookbooks and a genuine British War Relief Society flag to pins and decorative plates.

The British Relief restaurant is now closed, but the catering operation continues. In July, the business will move to another location, but the Roebucks aren't sure just where yet.

The variety of functions catered by Arthur Roebuck is endless — from weddings, anniversary celebrations and cocktail parties to church dinners and faculty luncheons.

Catering customers enjoy a number of favorites, from tenderloin of beef and seafood newburg to finger rolls and fruit salad, depending on the occasion.

> "I remember the Kennedy kids riding up and down in the elevator."
> — Vee Roebuck

Gallons of soup and chowder were served daily at the British Relief Restaurant, along with bread pudding and lemon meringue pie — all homemade using fresh ingredients.

Service is the Roebucks' key to success.

No customer or client is too large — or too small — to be served in the well-known Roebuck style. Word of mouth has brought in some unusual business.

In the mid-1970s, the Roebucks catered a reception for 2,000 people in honor of then-President Gerald Ford at Logan Airport and another for the Queen of England at the Navy Admiral's house in Charlestown.

During the ground-breaking of the Kennedy Library in Dorchester, the Roebucks catered a reception.

Quiche was on the menu, but Rose Kennedy preferred toast. And that's what she got.

"I remember the Kennedy kids riding up and down in the elevator," Vee recalls with a laugh.

As a parting gift to the community, the Roebucks will host the last in a series of Thursday night suppers – which spanned 12 years – June 28, from 4 to 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

"The Thursday night suppers provided a relaxing atmosphere where people could gather together and make new friends," Vee said. "Arthur is a people person, and that's what made the British Relief."

No one will miss Arthur Roebuck more than Carl and Susan Achille, who manage the Bowl & Board next door.

"We've pulled each other's legs over the years," Susan Achille said with a laugh. "Arthur has been a constant source of pranks."

For example, on one occasion when the Achilles were on vacation, Roebuck called the employees manning the Bowl & Board and told them the Achilles had been arrested "for dancing on the tables in Aruba."

Carl Achille praised Roebuck for his wonderful sense of humor and community.

"He'd give you the shirt off his back," Susan Achille said. "If someone dies or is sick, he sends casseroles to the house. At other times, he's loaned equipment without charge. He's helped people in so many ways."

Great works are ahead for CHS grads

stage, led by graduation marshal Christopher Caron, except for the senior chorus members who remained onstage to sing the national anthem.

Class President Justin Langham said the class has succeeded artistically, academically, and athletically, "and had fun doing it."

He mentioned things such as the class's number one ranking in the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment Test in 1999, state art awards garnered, productions of "Hamlet," the "King & I," and "Godspell," unprecedented success in athletics, going through three changes of principals, the implementation of block scheduling, and the creation of the middle school.

"Congratulations on our success, we've earned it," he said.

Class valedictorian Clara Sceery said it was time for the class to take the advice they had learned over the years, and now apply it.

"Many things have to be found out for ourselves," she said. "We need to live life, not spend time preparing for it."

Sceery also warned her classmates about "the dangers of being content," and to embrace change.

Superintendent Dr. Edward Malvey was not at the ceremony, as his son was getting married, but Jones told the audience that Malvey had addressed the seniors a few days before.

In his stead, school committee chairman Stephanie Noble gave her advice to the graduating class.

She singled out several members of the class she first got to know as a youth group leader at Second Congregational Church. "You introduced me into your world, and without knowing it, gave me a gentle shove in the direction that has played itself out over the last couple of years," she said. "For that I am very grateful."

Noble, an admittedly non-timid soul, explained how the idea of speaking before those gathered at the graduation ceremony made her more nervous than striking up a conversation with former Secretary of State George Schultz on an airplane.

"Conversations with world leaders seem insignificant when faced with the task of addressing these seniors who have one foot out the door, and the world at their feet" she said.

Her main wish for the graduating class was resiliency.

"I have found, and you will discover, resiliency is a very simple, but elusive trait. In fact you might not know you possess it until you need it" she said. "Like courage, resilience is what separates the men from the boys. It's what makes an extraordinary life not just an ordinary one."

Noble said "I don't know what the resilience quotient is here in the room today, but I do know that life has not handed you much that you need resilience for. So you are a class of gifted students to whom much has been given," she said. "You will soon discover a world where sometimes all of your gifts have been rendered useless. It is then that I hope you will find the gift of resilience."

The ceremony also honored three teachers who are retiring; AP English and drama teacher, and former track coach Ron Emmons, who is retiring after 34 years; French and Spanish middle school teacher George Fortin after 35 years; and AP calculus teacher and hockey and former football coach David Walsh, after 32 years in the school system.

Finally, the 72 graduates took their much-anticipated, long-awaited walks across the Music Circus stage. They collected their diplomas, moved their tassels on Langham's lead, and walked out of the tent ready for their next challenge.

Robert Hickey

The Cohasset High sophomore scored two of the Skippers final three goals in Sunday's miraculous come-from-behind win over Ipswich, including the game winner in the fourth overtime period, to advance the lacrosse team to the Div. 2 state championship game on Wednesday against arch-rival Hingham. The midfielder was equally immense on face-offs Sunday, winning seven straight at one point during the Skippers history-making fourth quarter charge.

Do you believe in Miracles?

Hickey's overtime goal puts Cohasset laxers in EMass championship versus Hingham

By Terry Kahn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The coach called it legendary.

The fans termed it unbelievable.

The Cohasset boys' lacrosse team wrote a new chapter in the history of Cohasset High School athletics, coming from six goals down with eight minutes to play to tie Ipswich in the final 32 seconds. The seventh seeded Skippers then went on to upset their third-seeded hosts in the fourth overtime of the state Div. 2 semi-final, 12-11.

Facing an 11-5 deficit four minutes into the fourth quarter, on the road, in muggy 85-degree heat, the Skippers launched a comeback that stunned everyone except the 23 members of a varsity squad that hadn't even qualified for post-season play since 1997.

Senior co-captain Ronan Buick started the assault with 7:19 left in the game. Junior attackman Paul Previte, who would lead all scorers with five goals, found the back of the net 32 seconds later after sophomore midfielder Robert Hickey won the second of what would be seven consecutive face-offs.

Buick, on a feed from junior Eric Libby, closed the gap to three with 5:15 remaining. And Previte, on another Libby feed, brought the margin to two at the 4:16 mark.

A turnover gave the ball to Ipswich, but the senior defense of Geoff McWilliams, Justin Langham and Greg Figureido – victimized by the quick Ipswich attack for three quarters – held their ground, forced their own turnover, and got the ball to senior co-captain Lane Forrer. Forrer found Hickey alone 15 yards out in front of the cage, and the soph rifled a bounce shot by goalie Nick Eaton with 49 seconds left in the contest to close to within a single goal.

Then Hickey won yet another faceoff from Ipswich's Steve Monteiro, and dumped the ball to Previte, who drove by defender Nate Nickerson for the equalizer with 32 seconds left.

"The comeback was something our staff believed possible, but it was up to the kids to turn into reality," said Cohasset head coach Kevin Orcutt. "We couldn't afford a single breakdown over those last minutes, and we hadn't been able to accomplish that earlier in the season, especially in the Falmouth and Hingham games. Today, we showed how far we've come as individuals and as a team."

The overtimes became exercises in survival as both squads squandered opportunities. Cohasset dominated the first five-minute period, but put five shots right into Eaton's stick. In both the second and third overtimes, Ipswich's

Cohasset's 'super soph' Lindsay Grossman improved her two year varsity record to 29-1 with another outstanding season.

Girls fall in semis to Bourne

But loss shouldn't overshadow yet another great year from tennis team

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

If I may understate it as much as is humanly possible, this was just another year for the proud Cohasset girls tennis program.

Having made the state tournament in each of the last 10 years, Skipper fans have come to expect the type of excellence that was displayed by this year's Sectional Semi-final team.

This year, the Lady Skippers finished 13-2, with two tournament wins and a share of the South Shore League crown for the seventh consecutive season. Unfortunately, this season came to an end last Thursday down in Bourne, as the Cohasset girls fell to the top seeded Canalwomen, 4-1 in the Div. 2 South semifinals.

Leading the way for the Skippers all year was All-Star Lindsay Grossman at first singles. The super soph went 14-1 on the season at the top position, her only loss coming to number one seeded Bourne's ace in the semi-finals. Grossman topped every South Shore opponent she faced. Her hard shots and ability to end points quickly led to season highlighting wins over Sara Bitetti of Norwell and Marie Sokolovsky of Canton.

"She is so mentally strong that I think she can beat anyone," appraised 10th year coach Sarah Gigi Meehan, who has watched her top player reach a career record of 29-1 in match play.

For most of the season, sophomore All-Star Julie Shea had a phenomenal year at second singles, with only one loss in South Shore League play. She even defeated Scituate's fantastic number one, Jackie Oulette, in a match that Grossman missed with illness. Shea only has two career losses, one to Abington this year, and one in last year's Sectional tournament.

At third and some second singles, Holly Graham stepped onto the team as a freshman and put together an

Despite losses to graduation, boys tennis program looks to be gaining momentum

By James Olson
CORRESPONDENT

As enjoyable as it was to report on this year, as compared to years past, the 2001 boys tennis season is over. And rather than pout about the days of old, the general consensus seems that a look to a potentially successful future is much more logical, not to mention enjoyable.

The boys finished 8-4 this season, securing the first playoff berth since before the six year "Chris Golden and Jeff Scribner Era."

"It felt great to see the team come together," said Pam Wilson, the Cohasset boys rookie head coach.

True, the team will be hit hard by graduation, losing four of its top seven, but they should have enough returning players and new blood mixed in to make some noise.

As of right now, current junior Joe

Cohasset-Scituate Legion team opens season with a tie

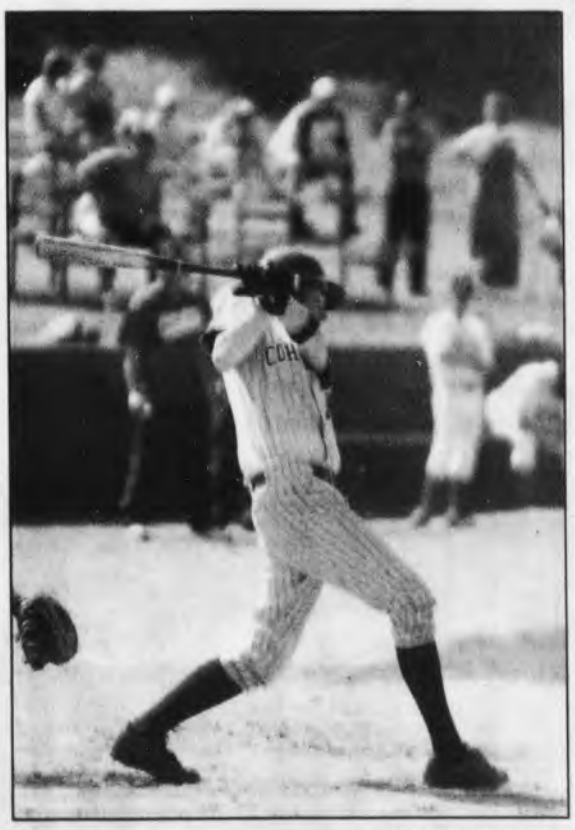
By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Turnover is a fact of life for youth sports coaches.

Scott Arnold, the sixth-year coach of the Cohasset-Scituate Post 118 Legion baseball team, certainly understands that.

He lost four players — Greg O'Keefe and Dan Mulligan of Cohasset, and Scituate's Chris Ferris and Josh Creighton — from last year's 12-8 team to age limitations. That is the natural order of things.

He also lost four key players to unnatural reasons. That he doesn't really like.



Returning starters David Butterworth (catcher) and Doug O'Brien (center field) — each fresh off All-Star seasons at Scituate and Cohasset High, respectively — determined that they didn't have time for baseball this summer. Cohasset High junior Nick Bolster, a key pitcher with the team last year, will be unable to play baseball for at least a few more months after having surgery three weeks ago to repair a detached retina.

The most painful "unnatural" loss of all, though, will be Mike Conroy, the B.C. High senior who was just picked 43rd overall in the Major League baseball draft by the Cleveland Indians. He would love to have played for the Legion team this summer. In fact, the Indians encouraged him to do so. Unfortunately, a miscommunication led him to believe Tribe management wanted him to be play in the Ohio summer league. Once he'd discovered this wasn't the case, it was too late to hook on with his old Legion squad.

"It's too bad about those four, because I really think they could have helped us do something special this year," said Arnold. "But I can't control those situations. I've got to get the players I have ready."

Fortunately, Arnold feels he has enough depth to compensate rela-

Bigger and better things expected from C.H.S. junior, along with rest of team, in 2002

Pete Maitland did not perform up to expectations in finishing 17th in the javelin at Saturday's New England Track and Field Championships.

The Cohasset High junior's best toss of 163 feet was well off his best of 178-6, recorded seven days earlier at the State Track and Field Championships to earn him fifth place overall.

However, Cohasset High coach Al LaFontain appeared strangely unperturbed by the somewhat disappointing showing.

Cohasset lacrosse team has indeed come a long way in a short time

By Terry Kahn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Nine months ago, the core of the Cohasset High lacrosse team pulled on helmets and gloves and stepped onto the carpeted floor of the Canton indoor sports center. Their 2000 season had ended in disappointment and disarray. They had no coach. They'd missed qualifying for the state tournament for the third consecutive year. And their prospects for the spring were uncertain at best.

One senior, Justin Langham, hadn't played since his sophomore year. Among the juniors, Jason Moore had chronic ankle pain and Eric Libby, a transfer from Xaverian, wasn't certain of receiving a waiver to allow him to play. Among the sophomores, transfer Tom Anderson was equally unsure of getting eligibility. Six freshmen were rising from a middle school squad that hadn't won half its games.

Among the handful of parents watching in Canton, Rose Kahn noticed a familiar face – a young man she'd spotted on the sidelines of a JV soccer game in Cohasset. She introduced herself, and learned he'd recently been asked to oversee the Canton men's lacrosse programs. He said his name was Kevin Orcutt.

"Do you have any interest in coaching lacrosse at the high school level?" she asked.

"Perhaps," he answered, "but I'd have to believe the kids were committed. I'm not interested in babysitting."

At halftime, Orcutt met with me. Yes, they had a little talent, he conceded. He'd consider the possibility.

Cohasset played Hingham on that September Sunday afternoon.

The Skippers lost by a goal.

By March 21, Orcutt, a former Merrimack College hockey and lacrosse standout and Derby Academy coach, had been hired by Ron Ford. Libby's waiver had come through, but Anderson's was still uncertain. Principal Michael Jones would have to drive to MIAA headquarters in Franklin to personally plead the sophomore's case. Langham, a midfielder his entire career, had agreed to shift to defense.

But there were no fields.

When the first day of practice began, Cohasset met on the clay and sand of the Music Circus parking lot. For a week and a half, Orcutt ran his charges through the lot's gravel and mud. A scrimmage with Westwood suggested promise, but a second versus Medfield had to be cancelled.

The Skippers would open with Scituate, a new team, many of whose players had been indoor league teammates of the younger Cohasset kids. The unknown quickly gave way to the familiar, and the Skippers routed their neighbors 22-3 behind Ronan Buick's seven goals and four assists. Norwell, who'd beaten Cohasset the year before for the first time, followed. The size of the visiting squad first surprised, then annoyed the Cohasset coaches.

"The coach brought along the JV," one Norwell player told us later. "He thought we'd be able to play everyone against you guys."

In the rain, Norwell fell 11-5. Libby had three goals and three assists.

By then, the injury toll had begun to mount. Moore was sidelined, the first of eight Skippers who would miss at least one game to either a broken hand, separated shoulder or other serious injury.

Nevertheless, the wins kept coming. Barnstable, Bourne and Sandwich. The first loss came at home, against Falmouth, as the Skippers closed within one early in the fourth quarter, but lost the momentum. Hanover, a repeat victory over Norwell behind four goals from Curt Kahn and Moore, and a rout of Walpole followed. For the first time since 1997, Cohasset would be in post-season play. But Hingham – with four Skippers in street clothes due to injuries – halted that run at 9-7. Moore was a bright spot with three goals and a pair of assists.

A Spirit Night 20-0 victory over Barnstable was next, with six Buick goals and the first league shutout in the program's history. Langham, Figureido, Geoff McWilliams, Nick Spirito and goalie Kyle Weber combined to hold the Red Raiders to only nine shots on net for the entire contest.

Top-ranked Duxbury walloped the Skippers 18-6, but a 3-3 third quarter was a bright spot. A disheartening 13-9 loss to Marshfield cost Cohasset second place in the league, and a 15-9 win over Catholic Memorial, keyed by Matt Davis' four goals, was overturned when it was learned an ineligible player had appeared in the game.

Ashland, the regular finale, had cost the Skippers an opportunity to play in the tournament a year earlier. This time, there was payback, as Cohasset overcame early sloppiness and won 10-7 behind Paul Previte's four goals and three assists and ironman efforts from Lane Forrer and Robert Hickey.

The tournament seeding was predictably insulting – Cohasset being, in the minds of the coaches' committee, no better than seventh-best in Division 2. The good news was that arch-rival Hingham, the only D2 team to knock off the Skippers, was in the other half of the draw. And coincidence – and perhaps fate – would have the final week's opponents, Catholic Memorial and Ashland, returning to face the Skippers. Cohasset showed no mercy, winning by 15-3 and 18-5, with Previte accounting for nine goals and Moore for seven. Libby set an individual tournament game scoring record against CM with five assists and fellow transfer Anderson had two goals and two assists.

Defending state champ Milton was next, as Cohasset hit the road. Taking a second quarter lead and never relinquishing it, the Skippers were carried by Previte's five goals, 11 second-half saves by Weber, and outstanding midfield play to squeeze out a 10-8 win.

Ipswich followed, a magical come-from-behind victory that nearly defies description.

And, on Wednesday, it would end where it began. With Hingham.

Nine months later, Cohasset boys' lacrosse had come full circle.

They had a coach.

They were healthy.

And they believed in themselves.

All things considered, the Skippers were pretty sure they were at least a goal better than when they'd started.

– Terry Kahn is the assistant coach with the Cohasset Lacrosse team.

Laxers hope for perfect ending to dream season

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

After Sunday's miracle win in the state semi-finals, the Cohasset boys lacrosse team is understandably feeling somewhat invincible heading into Wednesday's showdown with arch-rival Hingham for the state crown.

"Losing is not even in our minds at all right now," said captain Lane Forrer, prior to Monday's workout at Cohasset High. "The way we've come together as a team has us feeling pretty incredible right now, and the way we came back (Sunday) has just added to that."

"We refuse to lose," added sophomore Matt Davis. "It's that simple."

The showdown with Hingham, which unfortunately will be played before anyone reads this article, couldn't come under much more ideal circumstances, at least from a dramatic standpoint.

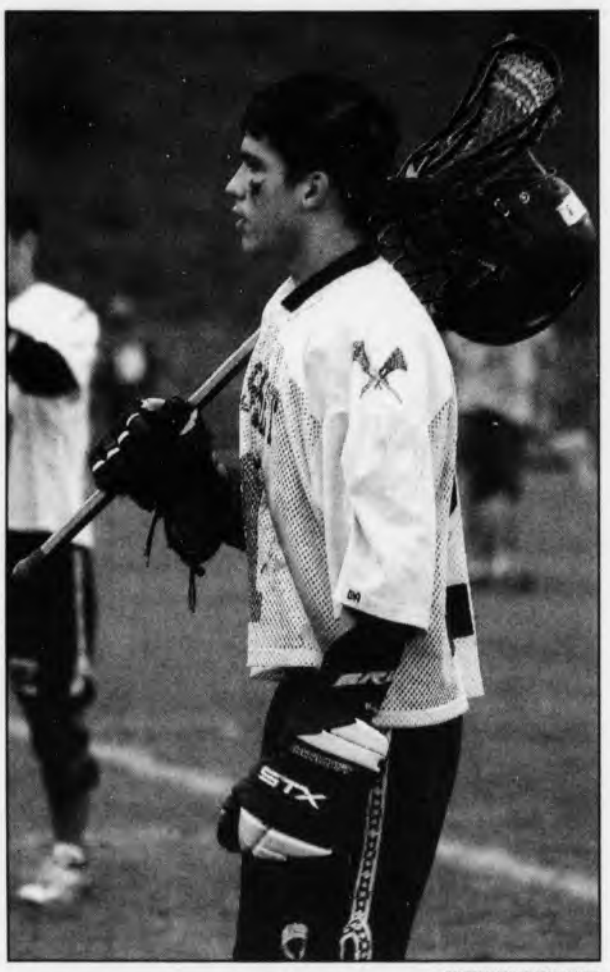
First off, the two teams don't like each other much. Secondly, they're pretty evenly matched, as attested by the meeting back on May 8 in which the Harbormen prevailed, 9-7.

With the game scheduled only a few miles away at Hingham High, Cohasset fans were expected to turn out in droves to support their Cinderella team, which entered the Div. 2 tourney as the number seven seed, going up against the top seed in the tourney.

"I really think we can beat them," said captain Ronan Buick, an All-Globe Scholastic selection who is headed to Providence College this fall on lacrosse scholarship. "We played neck-and-neck with them last time and we're a much better and much healthier team now."

Several key players were banged up in the initial go-round, including key senior defender Greg Figureido, who was out of action. Sophomore midfielder Robert Hickey, the team's irreplaceable faceoff man who scored the gamewinner in Sunday's semi-final match with Ipswich, played despite being hindered by injury.

Going into Wednesday's championship showdown, coach Kevin Orcutt noted that his team had no significant injuries. Hence, his primary concern, he said, was keeping his players emotions in check.



Orcutt sounds respectful of Hingham's abilities, and was doing his utmost to make sure his team remained so as well. In private, however, he wasn't afraid to let down his guard a little, as he too admitted to feeling pretty good about his team's chances.

"Hingham might be a little deeper than us, but we've got players who've stepped up and taken a lot more on their shoulders," said Orcutt, who also coaches hockey at Derby Academy and soccer at Quincy High School. "We're a much better and healthier team than we were the first time we faced them.

"There will be no excuses for us this time, which is way you want it: for the best team to win."

Win or lose, though, it sounds as if the coach will be happy so long as his team plays up to its potential.

"This has been like a fantasy season," said Orcutt, who has directed the Skippers to a 15-5 season now, including four straight post-season wins. "We've really come together as a team. I just want the boys to go out and play as well as they have in getting here. Even if we lose, there should be no regrets if we get that."

Paul Previtte takes a breather after scoring a team high four goals in the Skippers second round tourney win over Ashland. The Cohasset junior scored nine goals combined in the team's first two tourney wins, merciless defeats of Catholic Memorial (15-3) and Ashland (18-5).

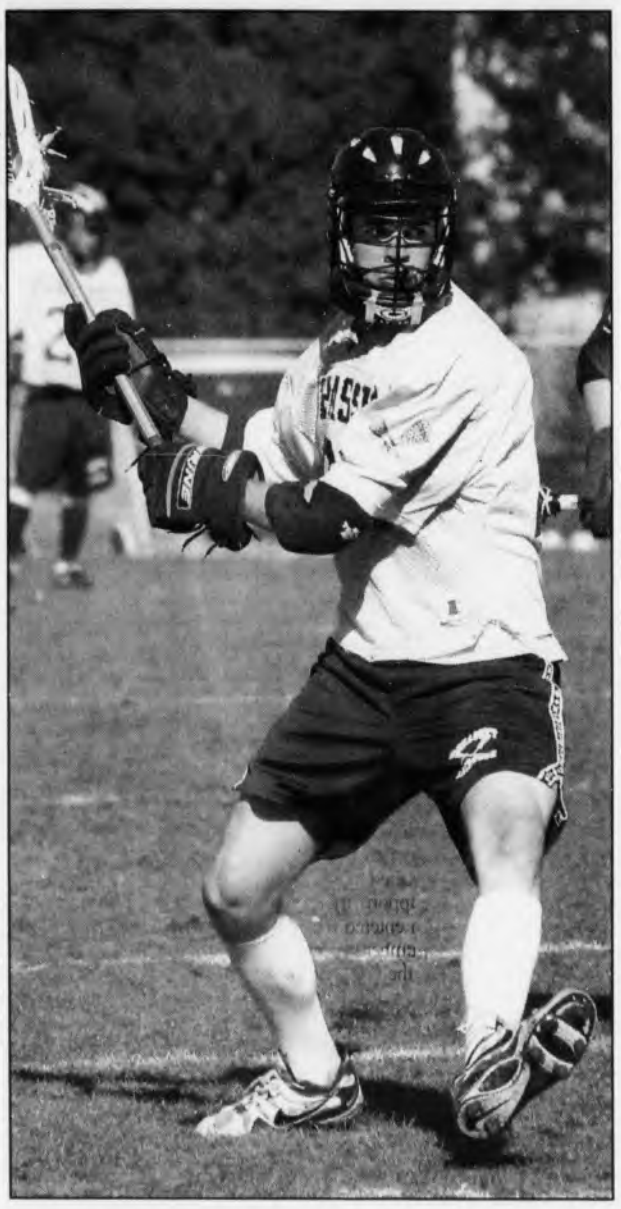
Andy Mackey and Seth Bailey had golden opportunities on goalie Kyle Weber's doorstep, only to shoot wide of the net in one instance, and bounce the ball over the goal in the second. Weber, who would finish with 14 saves, including four in the first three extra periods, also made a diving save on Monteiro in the third to save the game.

Soph attackman Curt Kahn looked to have the game won late in the third OT, but his shot bounced off the inside of the goal post. Kahn made up for that two minutes into the fourth period, though, when he drove to the goal, picked up a second and then a third defender, and passed to a wide-open Hickey who blasted a bounce shot by Eaton.



"We had a lot of heroes today, but none greater than Hickey," said Orcutt. "His goals were huge, but his faceoff work may have been even more important. If we hadn't regained control of the ball after each goal, we never would have had time to make our run. For a sophomore to be able to make that kind of impact in a game as big as this just adds to the legend of this game."

The Skippers were hurt by penalties throughout the first half, going to the box six times, and twice more in the third. But an inability to win the majority of one-on-one ground balls also allowed Ipswich to control the game's pace, and left Cohasset struggling to find its offensive game. The nadir came in the third quarter, when Ipswich outscored the Skippers 5-1, to go up 10-5.

"We just weren't sure when to slide, and when to stay with our men," said Orcutt, "and their attack was feasting off our indecision."

An adjustment, having Cohasset defenders play the attacker with the ball behind the goal more aggressively, helped turn the tide, as did the insertion of sophomore long-stick midfielder Nick Spirito into a close defense position.

With the win, Cohasset – now 15-5 – advances to its first championship game. The opponent will be number-one seed Hingham, its Pilgrim Conference rival, who Cohasset fell to 9-7 on May 8. The game was scheduled to be played at Hingham High School yesterday (Wednesday, June 13) at 5 p.m.

Ronan Buick, the Skippers captain and leading scorer the last two seasons, genuinely believed his team has a good shot at knocking off top seeded Hingham on Wednesday for the Division 2 state championship.

"We had four regulars out with injuries the last time we played them," said Orcutt, "and their coach was very disrespectful to us in the Boston Globe. We'll think a lot about his comments over the next three days. This is the final challenge, the ultimate challenge, and we say 'Bring it on.'"

Besides Previte and Hickey, other Cohasset scorers were Buick (three goals, one assist), Libby (one goal, three assists), Kahn (two assists), Moore (one goal), and Forrer (one assist).

tively well for these absences.

"We have a lot of younger guys who sat on the bench and watched last year, and I think they're ready to step in and play a big role this year," said Arnold. "They'll be helped by our veterans, who I also feel are ready to take it to the next level."

The core of the team is made up players from the 17-3 Scituate High baseball team who are no doubt yearning for more baseball after they were shocked in the first round of the state tourney by low-seeded Coyle Cassidy two weeks ago.

Junior pitcher Jesse Cole should be Post 118's staff ace, just as he was Scituate's main man on the mound this past season. The righty fireballer led the Patriot League in ERA (0.83) as well as batting this season.

"There's no doubt that Jesse is primed for a big season for us," said Arnold. "Baseball is his thing and he just keeps getting better and better."

Cole will be joined by Scituate teammates Jason Connelly, Tim Duggan, Greg Levin and Alex Knight. The first two were also Patriot League All-Stars and the numbers two and three pitchers on the squad. Arnold has them tentatively slated to reprise those roles with his squad.

When they're not pitching, Cole will play third base, Connelly shortstop and Duggan the outfield. Greg Levin will play centerfield and Knight is the likely starter at second base.

Arnold did sound a little hesitant about removing the slick-fielding Connelly from the busiest position on the diamond. Last year, the junior went the final five games of the season without an error while hitting more than .300 for the season.

"Jason is too good a pitcher not to use him, but he just makes such a huge difference for us at shortstop," said Arnold. "To be honest, I'm still not certain how I'm going to handle that."

Thayer Academy catcher Kevin Signorelli appears to Arnold to be a solid replacement behind the plate for Dave Butterworth. The sophomore had a pair of hits in Sunday's 8-8 tie with Milton, including an RBI double that gave Post 118 its first lead of the game.

"Kevin looks like he's going to give us both good offense and defense back there," said Arnold. "He's definitely been a pleasant surprise so far."

Because of a miscommunication, Mike Conroy will not be able to play for the Post 118 team this season.

Tim Straughn, who was Cohasset High's leading hitter and pitcher this season as a junior, may also see some time at both catcher and pitcher. The heat-dealing righty has been known to hit in the high 80s with his fastball. When he doesn't pitch or catch, he appears to have an inside track for one of the corner outfield spots.

Tom Fitzgerald, a lefty "junkballer" from B.C. High, will also see regular innings on the mound, and sophomore classmate Chris Carr may get a chance to show what he can do.

Unfortunately, for the Post 118 team anyway, the B.C. High kids won't be available until their team's post-season run ends. The Eagles were scheduled to play Lexington on Tuesday afternoon in the state Div. I semifinals. A win there would advance them to the State Championship game on Saturday against the winner of Wednesday's Westboro- Cathedral game.

Another B.C High standout, heavy hitting first baseman Greg Smith, has also been unavailable to Post 118, but Scituate junior Brian Wood has done a solid job in his absence.

The Cohasset-Scituate squad tied its first game of the season 8-8 to Milton on Friday. They fought back from an early 5-1 deficit thanks to a couple of big hits from Cole and a nice relief stint from Connelly. The umpires called the game before the start of the seventh inning at 7:55, with plenty of daylight still left — a decision which clearly rankled Arnold, who had his 2-3-4 hitters coming up. Umps are not supposed to allow an inning to start after 8 p.m..

"I was angry about the decision then, and I'll be furious about it if it costs us a shot at the post-season," said the normally good-natured Arnold. "We only play 20 games, so every win could be huge."

Post 118 was scheduled to host West Roxbury on Tuesday, travel to Quincy on Wednesday, and then return home for a meeting with Randolph on Friday.

Niessink will be the only senior on the squad, but undoubtedly a great one to have. A constantly improving hard-hitter, Niessink has moved away from just power, and can now mix his strength with consistency.

"Joe will be a great singles player," appraised Wilson. "He has really developed."

Niessink has grown into a strong doubles and singles player, as witnessed by his valiant post-season battle in Harwich.

The Harwich match was widely regarded as his best performance of the year, and that came on the heels of two other great performances— back-to-back 6-3, 6-1 wins over Scituate's number three stud in ht final week of the regular season.

Current sophomore David Ingber, who played in his first year of varsity this year after surgery kept him off the court all of last year, will most likely be moving away from doubles and looks forward to a difficult but rewarding singles career. Going 11-2 overall this year, and earning a spot on the South Shore League All-Star team along with his partner, Scribner, Ingber went 3-1 this year as a singles player, including two 6-0, 6-0 wins over Carver and Abington.

"Obviously, Dave will be one of our strongest singles players," said Wilson.

When asked what his personal season highlight was, without hesitation Ingber said it was giving the All-Star Norwell doubles combination of Justin Meddaugh and Rory O'Connor their only loss of the regular season.

Freshman Robbie Carpenter and Jessie Brewer will probably be working together again as a doubles team next year. Though inexperience brought them some hard times this year, as sophomores they should become a singular force to be reckoned with.

Though the four returning players do not constitute a full team, there are a decent number of former players and other-sport athletes who would be interested in helping the team back into the playoffs.

"We could have a very strong team again if we try to recruit some of those kids," reported Wilson.

To Wilson, fielding another successful team will be a matter of getting the word out that making a post-season run was not a fluke.

"Cohasset is on its way to becoming a tennis town," stated Wilson, who watched the girls' team finish their year with a 13-2 record and a high tourney seed.

"The parents are helping," she concluded. "Tennis is going to have a new interest for the boys."

Indeed.

'Old guys' lax it up

By Chuck Jaffe
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

While Cohasset's varsity team was winning a thrilling playoff game and its youngsters were having a terrific day at a lacrosse jamboree, its old boys took the field for the first annual alumni game.

Played, appropriately enough, at Alumni Field, the game featured about 20 of Cohasset High School's finest players from years past, and showcased Cohasset's tradition of producing both outstanding goaltenders and front-line scorers.

The players were divided into "Odds" and "Evens", based on the year they graduated from high school.

The Odds jumped out to a hot start and a 3-1 lead. Adam Leahy and Ted Goff each scored a goal and picked up an assist, with Chris Adams netting the third goal. Brandon Devoe had eight first-quarter saves, allowing only one Ken Leahy rocket to sneak past for the Evens.

Kevin Devito had six first-period saves for the evens.

The Odds stretched the lead, moving into the half with Goff, Adam Leahy, Ben Redfield and Bob Stansell scoring, while Devoe made another 7 saves.

Meanwhile Matt O'Connor and Ken Leahy played back-and-forth for the Even team, both scoring a goal on an assist from the other. Devito kept the Odds in the game with eight more saves before the half, including a few testers.

After a long halftime break that allowed the players to recuperate, and a two-player trade, the third-quarter got underway and the teams traded goals.

Adam Leahy scored twice more for the Evens, offset by goals from Andy Collins and Redfield— off an assist from Kevin Smith— for the Odds. Devoe and Devito picked up five saves each during the period.

Trailing 10-5 after another Chris Adams goal early in the final period, the Odds mounted a comeback. Two Jamie Buick goals and a Ken Leahy tally made the score 10-8. After Jay Whoriskey scored for the Evens, it was Ken Leahy again, before Andy Collins closed the gap to one with his second goal of the game.

Devoe and Devito traded saves down a frantic final stretch before Ted Goff scored, finishing his hat trick for the day just before the final whistle. Evens 12, Odds 10.

After the game, Matt Belson— a former Cohasset captain who this past season was captain of the Lafayette College lacrosse team— was presented with the Founders Award by the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters. The Founders Award was created to honor Cohasset players who represent outstanding achievement both at C.H.S. and the college level.

Alumni players at the game also received a T-shirt to mark their efforts of the day. The shirt included the number 17, the jersey number worn by Bourke Corcoran, a high school player killed in a car accident several years ago.

Corcoran's parents were among those watching the game.

outstanding debut. Beating a mixture of veterans and rookies all year, Graham stepped into the second singles position in Shea's absence, recording two tournament wins over senior captains from Fairhaven and Canton.

Senior captain Aryanna Afshar, who completed her illustrious six year varsity career, was a consistent winner at third singles and some first doubles. The only senior on a very young team, Afshar provided stable leadership to bring Cohasset yet another banner in Sullivan Gym.

The top doubles team for Cohasset was junior captain Kelly Stone and freshman Courtney Caron. This dynamic duo came up big with two tourney victories, including the only win for the team against Bourne. The pair should become even more of a force next year.

At second doubles, freshmen Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans earned themselves a playing spot, and ripped up nearly every team they played at the position. This is a team that also looks only to get stronger with experience.

What makes this team even more impressive is the fact that one can dig even deeper and find winning doubles teams— like sophomores Molly Flanagan and Taylor O'Brien or Nicole Needle and Kelly Holway.

All in all, this was an extraordinary season, even by the high standard set by previous seasons. But they did it last year, and nothing seems to stand in their way from doing it next year, the year after that, and the year after. . . this was just another year for the Lady Skippers.

Peter," said LaFontain of the first athlete he's taken to the New England's in his four-year tenure at C.H.S. "I'd be surprised if he didn't get back there next year, and having this experience under his belt should give him a leg up."

LaFontain figures the lack of exposure to the kind of highly charged and competitive venue that Saturday introduced was a little overwhelming for Maitland, as well as several others.

"I think Pete was a little too charged up for his own good," appraised LaFontain, "and he wasn't the only one. I think a lot of kids were a little psyched out."

With several of the top javelin throwers lost to the caps and gowns in 2001, LaFontain figures that Maitland is ready for a big step up in his own senior season.

"I don't think Pete has peaked," he said. "Hopefully, I'm right."

LaFontain was also quick to point out, though, "There's nothing wrong with being fifth best in the state and 17th best in New England. Pete had a great year. That's the most important thing to remember."

Maitland will compete in the Bay State Games this Summer for the second straight year, and will likely be joined there by Cohasset High teammates Dan Kinchla, Tim Baird, Steve Laney and perhaps more. The Cohasset boys will be looking to defend their South Shore League outdoor crown next Spring, and LaFontain believes there is a very good chance they will do just that with most of the team returning.

In addition to the aforementioned four juniors, the Skippers will also return outstanding performers Jason Brown, Liam Martin, Ian Kidder and Jared Krupczak (the brother of Cohasset senior and two-time defending state champion 200-meter man Brian Krupczak).

"Pete is just one of several guys I have who could do well at the state and even New England level next year," said the coach. "Hopefully, the experience Pete got will help everyone. He can kind of let them know what to expect."

Cohasset police widen youth counterfeiting investigation man, 16, whose name is being withheld because of his age, has also been arrested. United States Secret Service agents confiscated computer equipment, including "an expensive laser printer" from the 16-year old's home.

Carbone was charged with possession of counterfeit bills, uttering counterfeit bills, and larceny of property $250 or less. The 16-year-old Cohasset youth was charged with possessing counterfeiting equipment, manufacturing counterfeit bills, and possession of counterfeit bills. Carbone pleaded not guilty to all charges Monday in Quincy District Court. A pre-trial hearing is set for July 3. The juvenile was scheduled to be arraigned yesterday as the Mariner went to press.

The Secret Service, which is involved because it handles US Treasury issues, confiscated the Pembroke youth's computer and printer Tuesday, Jackson said. Counterfeiting is a federal offense but Jackson says Cohasset police will pursue the charges at the state level.

"The Secret Service is not pursuing charges at this time, but that is subject to change," he said.

Noonan said the Secret Service is still "actively involved" in the case, and that he does expect more charges to follow.

Police described the bills as fairly "low-quality" reproductions. A close look at the bills clearly shows a pixilated or dotted image on the heavy paper, which had been crumpled up and dirtied to look more authentic. Jackson said 20s have a watermark that is visible when held up to the light and there's also a security thread to the left of the photo of Jackson.

Police said the counterfeiting involved $5s, $10s, and $20s.

According to Det. Rick Grassie counterfeit bills were turned in from Really Great Pizza on South Main Street, and Atlantic Bagel on Route 3A. Police say Carbone admitted to passing the fake money at Atlantic Bagel.

Jackson said police recovered a counterfeit bill from Shaw's Tuesday. A white female who appeared to be in her 50s used it to buy a lottery ticket from the service desk. She appears on the video tape of the transaction but police have not been able to identify her. That matter is under investigation.

"The tragedy of this is that an innocent person may be picked up for passing one of the bills," he said.

According to police, Carbone told them he asked another teenager, who was skateboarding outside Shaw's, to go in and exchange two fake $20 bills for four $10 bills, which the teenager did. Carbone asked the teenager to do it a second time, and this time, according to police, the store cashier became suspicious, turned him away, and called police.

Officer William Quigley examined the two $20 bills at Shaw's, and found they had the same serial number. Officer Shellee Peters then notified Quigley she had detained Carbone on Beechwood Street. Shaw's is at the corner of Rte. 3A and Beechwood Street. Police said the skateboarding teen had no knowledge the money he was passing was counterfeit. He was detained briefly by Cohasset police, but will not be charged.

Jackson said police will interview "less than a dozen" young people in town about the counterfeiting matter. That doesn't necessarily mean there will be more arrests.

"I'm hoping this does not spin out of control," he said.

Noonan, the police chief, said the matter is being taken very seriously.

"I'm sure if you talk to parents, some would say it's just kids experimenting, but experimenting in violation of the counterfeiting laws is a very serious matter," he said.

Noonan businesses should check over the paper money that comes in..

"We urge all businesses to inspect their bills," he said. "If they have any questions, to their authenticity, we will come right down."

In the meantime, state and national media have descended upon the police. Dateline has called and the story has appeared on the news on all the Boston television stations.

Shops on look out for fake money

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Local business that have fallen victim to the alleged counterfeiting scheme aren't finding anything humorous about the funny money.

"I'm out $20," said Robin Bradshaw, manager of Atlantic Bagel & Coffee Co. on Route 3A.

Along with the popular bagel shop, Really Great Pizza on South Main Street and Shaw's Supermarket on Route 3A have also reported receiving counterfeit money.

"When it's busy, you don't feel the money like you do if you count it. It's handed to you and you shove it into the cash register," said Chris Peterson, owner of Really Great Pizza.

Peterson was the first business to report the counterfeit money to Cohasset police two weeks ago. He said his wife was counting the money at the end of the night, and thought three $10 bills felt weird.

"I knew it was fake as soon as I touched it," said Peterson, who was a banker before he became a baker.

Patrick Carbone, 17, and a 16-year old freshman at Cohasset High School have been arrested and charged with possessing and distributing the counterfeit bills. The 16-year old has also been charged with manufacturing the fake money. Police and United States Treasury agents are also looking into charging a third Cohasset teen, as well as a Pembroke youth. Police think the money was printed with an expensive laser printer confiscated from the 16-year old's home.

Carbone was caught Friday on Beechwood Street with some of the counterfeit money after a clerk at Shaw's became suspicious. Police say Carbone had recruited another teenager skateboarding outside Shaw's to go in and exchange two fake $20s for four real $10s.

Police also contend it was Carbone who used a fake $20 bill to buy food at Atlantic Bagel.

Bradshaw alleges Carbone took off after a store worker became suspicious of the money.

"He barely made it out the door," she said. "He left right after the transaction." Bradshaw said one of her employees recognized Carbone, and told the police.

Bradshaw, like Peterson, said she could tell the money was fake by its texture.

"It feels different," she said.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said the amount of fake money circulating in the area could be as much as several thousands of dollars.

As a result, both stores have told their employees to be more vigilant when taking money.

"We've made sure they're fully aware, and to count slower when we're busy," said Peterson.

Know your money

• How to detect counterfeit money

The public has a role in maintaining the integrity of our currency. You can help guard against the threat from counterfeiters by becoming more familiar with United States currency. Look at the money you receive. Compare a suspect note with a genuine note of the same denomination and series, paying attention to the quality of printing and paper characteristics. Look for differences, not similarities.

• Portrait

The genuine portrait appears lifelike and stands out distinctly from the background. The counterfeit portrait is usually lifeless and flat. Details merge into the background which is often too dark or mottled.

• Federal Reserve and Treasury Seals

On a genuine bill, the saw-tooth points of the Federal Reserve and Treasury seals are clear, distinct, and sharp. The counterfeit seals may have uneven, blunt, or broken saw-tooth points.

• Border

The fine lines in the border of a genuine bill are clear and unbroken. On the counterfeit, the lines in the outer margin and scrollwork may be blurred and indistinct.

• Serial Numbers

Genuine serial numbers have a distinctive style and are evenly spaced. The serial numbers are printed in the same ink color as the Treasury Seal. On a counterfeit, the serial numbers may differ in color or shade of ink from the Treasury seal. The numbers may not be uniformly spaced or aligned.

• Paper

Genuine currency paper has tiny red and blue fibers embedded throughout. Often counterfeiters try to simulate these fibers by printing tiny red and blue lines on their paper. Close inspection reveals, however, that on the counterfeit note the lines are printed on the surface, not embedded in the paper. It is illegal to reproduce the distinctive paper used in the manufacturing of United States currency.

POLICE BRIEFS

Officer leaves

Town Manager Mark Haddad said this week that Officer Paul Laugelle is no longer employed by the Cohasset Police Department.

On the advice of town counsel, Haddad declined further comment on the departure of Laugelle, a 24-year veteran, except to say that he is "no longer working for the town of Cohasset."

Drug arrest

Cohasset police arrested a 26-year old Scituate man on drug charges, after he was seen driving erratically on Route 3A Sunday, and then allegedly threw packages of cocaine out the window of his moving car.

Ronald Anderson, of Hatherly Road, was charged with possession of a Class B substance (cocaine), and a marked lane violation. He pled not guilty in Quincy District Court on Monday.

According to Officer William Quigley, Anderson was driving southbound on Route 3A shortly before 3:30 Sunday morning, when he was seen weaving across the road, then crossing over the white fog line and hitting a culvert on the shoulder of the road.

When Quigley tried to pull him over, he said Anderson reached out the driver's side window with his left hand, and threw out two packages, one of which bounced off Quigley's cruiser.

Officer James McLean, who was following Quigley, picked up the two packages which were two $1 bills containing "white rock and powder substances."

A further search of Anderson's car revealed a rolled up $20 bill with a white powder residue on the inside of it and a CD with white residue. All the white residue found is believed to be cocaine, police said.

16 arrested in May

May was a relatively busy month for the Cohasset Police Department, Police Chief Brian Noonan said. There were 16 arrests, one for unauthorized use of a Motor Vehicle, four Operating Under the Influence of Liquor, two for Warrants, two for Motor Vehicle Violations, one for Protective Custody, one for Assault & Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, one for Lewd & Lascivious behavior, one for Trespassing, one for Shoplifting, one for Possession of a Class D Substance, and finally one for Assault and Battery.

There was one Breaking & Entering to a dwelling reported during the month of May, Noonan said.

In the month of May, the police department investigated 16 motor vehicle accidents, four of which resulted in injuries. There were 235 Motor Vehicle citations issued totaling $8,410 in fines. Additionally, there were 45 parking tickets issued for $1,100 in fines.

Also in the month of May our Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 776 calls for police services, of those 117 were emergency 911 calls.

All officers completed firearms requalification and two officers received breathalyzer training this month.

someone could be gravely injured," said Police Chief Brian Noonan. "Our officers are trained to react when they see a gun pointed at them."

Police were called by Woodland Road residents on May 25 to investigate a young man with a silver and black gun tucked into the waistband of his pants. Then this past Thursday, police were notified of another teenager brandishing a black revolver on Clayspring Road. Both turned out to be pellet guns.

In both cases, police seized the pellet guns, but the penalty could have been far stiffer. Noonan said it is illegal to own a pellet gun without a Firearms Identification Card.

Noonan said he didn't know how these two pellet guns were obtained, but said they can be purchased in sporting good stores. Stores are required to see an FID card before selling the guns, he said.

But Cohasset officers are more afraid of what could happen if a youth, trying to be funny, pulled one of the guns on an officer, especially at night.

"They don't get any more realistic than this," said Officer Christy Tarantino, who confiscated the silver and black pellet gun on Woodland Avenue, yards from the middle/high school. Tarantino demonstrated how realistic the gun was by showing how well it fit in his holster. "The guns really should be a different color…I couldn't tell the difference if someone pointed this at me and it was dark out."

The silver and black pellet gun says it's a pellet gun on the side, but it's engraved in the same color as the rest of the gun, making it indistinguishable from 10 feet away.

The black pellet gun was a revolver complete with spinning chamber and black rubber grip.

When an officer gets a call on a suspicious person carrying a gun, Tarantino says he has to go into it assuming "that the firearm is real." That means Tarantino had his gun drawn when he pulled up on Woodland Avenue.

"He didn't understand why it was so serious," Tarantino said of the 18-year old. Since neither youths were arrested, police are not releasing their names.

PHOTOS/RICK COLLINS

Officer Christy Tarantino holds one of the pellet guns police have seized in the past two weeks.

Secret Service agents in town on another case told police if someone had pulled one of those pellet guns on them, they would have shot that person.

Noonan said he considered the pellet guns "as serving no practical purpose," and are used to mainly shoot windows out of buildings.

Can you tell which gun is real? (It's the one in the middle.)

BUSINESS

The Silver Spoon Cafe gets polished

When the Silver Spoon Cafe at 5 South Main St. closed for renovations back in January owners Garry and Denise Bismore had only planned to clear and paint the store. The job was just about completed by mid-February when Garry convinced Denise to gut the entire store and make big changes to the Silver Spoons seating area and concept.

A full breakfast menu is the biggest change made to the Silver Spoon.

The Silver Spoon re-opened early May 2001 with more seating and a new menu. The counter was removed and replaced with four additional marble tables, waitress service and china. A full breakfast menu is the biggest change made to the Silver Spoon. Garry and Denise felt there was a need for a full breakfast establishment in town. Omelets, buttermilk pancakes, fresh fruit, granola yogurt, smoothies and, fresh squeezed orange juice are just some of the specialties offered. Breakfast is served Monday though Saturday 8 to 11 a.m. and all day Sunday 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. An all new lunch menu is also offered Monday through Saturday 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. A special feature is that all of the sandwiches are served with Garry's famous Fire-Cracker coleslaw and sweet potato: French fries. Salads are piled high with selections such as Cobb Salad, Caesar Salad, and the Silver Spoon's own "Beverly Hills" salad. The food at the Silver Spoon is still prepared from scratch.

It's funny, our five-year goal was to change the wall color and that's the only thing that hasn't changed!

We still offer catering and private dinner parties in the cafe and we are considering bringing back the Bistro dinners on the weekends, says Denise.

NETWORKING

William S. Shelton

Company president

The Arbella Insurance Group recently announced the appointment of Cohasset resident William S. Shelton to the position of president and chief operation officer of the Arbella Service Company.

Shelton joined Arbella in 1999 as chief information officer. Prior to joining Arbella, Shelton was vice president and managing partner of the strategy practice of Micah Technology Services of Dallas, Texas.

Shelton attended Yale University and has degrees in systems analysis and design from the University of Texas and an M.B.A. from Southern Methodist University.

Shelton recently moved to Cohasset with his wife, Meg Fitzpatrick.

Women's Business names new director

Deborah Hubbard Anders has been named executive director of the South Shore Women's Business Network. In her position, Anders will be responsible for sponsorships and the overall coordination of the many SSWBN events, including its annual Business Expo and Business after hours events. She will be actively involved in the Association's ongoing membership drive, and serve as a liaison between the Board of Directors and all SSWBN events.

Anders, who has served on the SSWBN Board of Directors since 1997, has previously held managerial positions for Fun Enterprises, Inc. in Weymouth and Campus Visits, Inc. in Wellesley. She holds a B.S. in Marketing from New Hampshire College.

Citizens Bank at Stop & Shop

Citizens Bank and Stop & Shop announced that Citizens will become the new bank of the Stop & Shop Supermarket Company in 99 of its Massachusetts stores, including the Cohasset Stop & Shop at 400 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., and the Hingham Stop & Shop at Lincoln Plaza. With 76 in-store branches and 23 full-service ATMs, this new Stop & Shop agreement will bring the total number of Citizens Bank branches in Massachusetts to 220.

Last month, Citizens began replacing Sovereign Bank in 21 Stop & Shop stores in Rhode Island. Citizens will begin replacing existing bank branches now in Stop & Shop Massachusetts' stores in the fall of 2001.

As a result of the agreement, Citizens also announced it will add more than 400 jobs to its workforce in Massachusetts.

Art in progress

Festival focuses on the creative process

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

What would an arts festival be without art and the artists who create it?

At this year's Festival on the Common, the South Shore Art Center has put the focus on artists at the easel or at the wheel — artists at work.

The annual weekend-long event staged at Cohasset's Town Common gets underway Friday afternoon, and South Shore Art Center Director of Development Monica McKenney said works in progress will rule at the festival.

"This year, we're putting our focus on how art is created," McKenney added. "It's not really a different concept for us, but this year we're paying more attention to it." McKenney said typically at the festival, there are usually a few artists here and there doing on-site demonstrations.

But this year there will be a "demonstration tent" where people can view many of the art center's 150 gallery artists creating their respective works.

In addition to the demonstration tent, there will also be a juried art exhibition, a members' (of the art center) show, a young artists' exhibit, and a children's art and activity tent which will offer "hands-on" projects throughout the weekend.

McKenny said she's expecting 10,000 to turn out for the festival which features some of the best local talent in woodworking, print making, sculpture, painting and making music.

The various bands appearing at the festival will also be something to write home about. For starters, the public is invited to check out renowned folk singer and Norwell native Les Sampou at their Festival "Off" the Common, which will take place June 15 at 8 p.m. in the Bancroft Gallery of the art center. Tickets for that show are $25.

There's no charge for the talented musicians performing throughout the weekend, on the common. The eclectic musical menu features something for everyone with acts including: Watson Reid and Americana, Standing Room Only, Pick 3, the Rusty Skippers, the Broad Cove Chorale, the Morningstar Baptist Gospel Chorus, the South Shore Bay Band, and the Hingham Woodwind quintet.

Dozens of crafters will bring their wares to the festival, joining the artists showing and selling their work.

The 46th Annual Festival on the Common returns to Cohasset Village this weekend.

"The musical aspect of the festival is critical because it adds a whole other layer to the event," said festival coordinator Diane Kennedy.

There will be plenty of food available at the festival, including the legendary strawberry shortcake concocted by the people at the Congregational Church in Cohasset. Other vendors will be on-hand as well—there will be about 80 arts and crafts booths set up selling various pieces of jewelry, pottery, textiles, and hand-blown glass.

"We want people to go home with the feeling that the art center is a place where vibrant things happen all year long, not just at the Festival on the Common," said Sarah Roche, a member of the art center. Roche will be demonstrating her botanical-style paintings in the demonstration tent, but she will also be singing with the Broad Cove Chorale. Roche also helped coordinate the artists creating pieces in the demonstration tent.

"I always thought putting something like a demonstration tent together could be a huge opportunity for the art center to show what its members can do," she added.

McKenney said the festival is unique in many ways and for many it is the herald of the summer season.

"When the festival comes along, to me that always means the start of summer," she said. "It's certainly a wonderful way to kick-off the season."

Folk singer and Norwell native Les Sampou will perform a special concert "off the common" on Friday night at 8 p.m.

The festival is open and free to the public through 6 p.m., Sunday June 17 until 6 p.m.. Donations are welcome and support the art center's programs. For more information on the festival, call (781) 383-2787 or visit the art center's web site at www.ssac.org.

Illustrating the spirit

Author remembers his daughter through a new book

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Richard James Cook is still devastated by the loss of his five-year-old daughter Laura in 1990, but he has managed to channel that sense of sadness, along with his sense of spirituality, into a beautifully illustrated book "Angel of Light."

Cook, a Westwood resident, is a full-time painter, and many of his works have been exhibited at both the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset and at the North River Art Society in Marshfield. He is a member of both organizations.

Painting is the main outlet Cook used in dealing with feelings of sorrow surrounding the death of his daughter, and he said "Angel of Light" is the product of the energy he put into the various paintings he worked on since Laura passed away.

"That's what happens when you put all of your heart and soul into something," he said.

Cook said his book is a "personal journey" and he said writing it kept him connected in a spiritual way with Laura.

"People deal with loss in different ways," Cook said. "Some people get angry with God, some go into denial, and some just get very depressed. We'd already had a long journey with Laura while she was alive, and in some ways, the book was a way to continue that journey."

"Angel of Light" is filled with Cook's paintings, some of his poetry, and also Biblical verse. All the paintings in it represent Cook's efforts to connect with a spiritual world.

Westwood artist and painter Richard Cook remembers his daughter Laura through the paintings and poetry in his book "Angel of Light."

"When Laura died, I never did feel like it was the end," he said. "It was just another stage in the road."

In 1985, Laura was born in Toronto where the Cook family lived before they moved to Westwood. Soon after she was born, Laura was diagnosed with a rare heart disease, and despite getting a heart transplant, she died shortly before her fifth birthday.

Not long after her death, Cook, who is known for his portrait paintings, created a painting called Angel of Light which depicted Laura's transition to the spiritual world. The work was to be the first in a series of spiritual paintings which would soon be compiled together for a book, even though Cook did not know that at that point.

"I never intended to put together a book," he said. "When I finished that first painting, I was in awe. I felt like there was something outside of me that was involved in painting it."

Cook said as he kept creating spiritual paintings, he knew something was in store for them, but he did not know exactly what that was. But when a friend of his saw the paintings and suggested putting them into a book, he saw the light.

He got his paintings and poems together, and also read the Bible in order to extract appropriate passages from it. As he went on, Cook said putting the book together was therapeutic for him.

"It was a healthy process," he said. "It felt like putting the book together really had a healing element to it."

The book was finished earlier this year, and it was recently published in hard and soft cover. Now, Cook said he would like to start planning a South Shore-based art exhibit which could revolve around his new book.

Even though "Angel of Light" is a reflection of an instance in his life, he said many people will be able to take something away from reading and looking at the book.

"There's a lot of human elements explored in the book," he said. "And as human beings, we all draw off each other's experiences."

Cook and his wife Debbie will never forget their daughter Laura, but now, they are keeping busy raising three boys. Cook said he hopes people will read his new book and learn from the various lessons contained within it.

"I'd really like people to be able to benefit from reading it," he said. "It's an important book to me, and I know it could be important to other people."

"Angel of Light" is available at local bookstores or Amazon.com. For questions on ordering the book, call Fountain Publishing at (877) 736-8598.

Grilled scallops

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

When we turn to outdoor cooking, most of us think of burgers, steaks, and chicken. Few of us consider more interesting applications for the grill, including vegetables, shellfish, and, in this case, scallops. When done properly, grilled scallops are the perfect choice for a hot grill because their creamy texture and subtle flavor marry well with a brief introduction to fire and smoke. But if you choose either the wrong scallops or the wrong technique, the resulting seafood will be tough, rubbery, and virtually inedible.

There are three types of scallops: bay, sea, and calico. Bay scallops are quite small and cork-shaped and are usually available during winter months. They have a delicate, sweet flavor but are too small and too delicate for grilling. They are also hard to find during the summer. Calico scallops are similar to bay scallops, although smaller, but I was not able to find them locally (in New England) even though they are farmed worldwide. They are machine steamed for purposes of easy shucking (unlike hand-shucked bay or sea scallops) and are therefore easy to overcook on a hot grill.

Sea scallops are much larger than bay or calico scallops - they can run as large as 10 per pound, although specimens of this size are most often sold to restaurants rather than home cooks. Retail sea scallops available in my local market were 1 to 1 1/2 inches in diameter and about 3/4 inch thick. Their flavor is more assertive than that of bay scallops. They evidence a pleasant balance of sweet and briny and their texture is firm but not tough. I found the larger size and more assertive flavor perfect for grilling.

When buying sea scallops, it is best to purchase specimens that have not been processed. Processed scallops are soaked in a phosphate and water brine, a solution that prolongs shelf life. This treatment seems to suck out the natural sweetness of the scallops, replacing it with a tinny saltiness. In short, avoid processed scallops.

How can you tell if scallops have been processed? While processed scallops are not labeled as such at the retail level (wholesalers identify them as processed, but retail stores don't tell customers), it is possible to make a judgment based on their appearance. Processed scallops are usually bright white and are displayed in a pool of milky liquid. Unprocessed scallops (referred to in the industry as "dry" scallops) have a more natural ivory color and are opaque, and they are displayed in only a small amount of liquid, if any.

Unprocessed scallops are also more expensive (costing between $8.99 and $11.99 per pound as opposed to $4.99 per pound for processed scallops). After tasting both dry and processed scallops head to head, I would always choose the sweet, meaty dry scallops, even at the higher price.

Now I needed to find the best cooking technique. The first issue was skewers, the obvious method for introducing the scallops to the grill. (I started by grilling scallops without skewers and found that they were too small and slippery and easily fell onto the fire.)

Flat metal skewers (as opposed to square ones) with pointed tips were the easiest to work with. If you don't have flat skewers, try double wooden skewers. Soak them in water for several hours or overnight and then thread the scallops by holding two wooden skewers 1/2 inch apart between your thumb and forefinger and perpendicular to the work surface.

The heat of the fire was the next issue. I wanted grill marks and also wanted to just cook the scallops through to the center. When the fire was too hot, the scallops turned almost black on the outside, the grill flavor was too intense, and they were overcooked and tough. A cool fire produced lackluster color, and the texture was also less appealing. Best results were achieved when I grilled over medium-high heat (you can hold your hand over the fire, 5 inches above the grill, for 3 to 4 seconds) for 2 minutes per side.

Next, I needed to solve the problem of the scallops sticking to the grill. I found that applying fat directly to the scallops rather than the grill grate to be the best solution. I tried using butter as well as olive oil to grill the scallops. The winner was the oil since it is less apt to burn over intense heat. Although salt, pepper, and a squeeze of lemon juice are just fine for a simple lunch or dinner, I recommend the simple citrus vinaigrette if you want to boost flavors.

GRILLED SEA SCALLOPS WITH CITRUS VINAIGRETTE

If your scallops are thicker than 3/4 inch, you may need to cook them an additional 30 seconds or so per side. I also found that many scallops come in odd shapes and sizes and that these smaller bits and pieces cannot be skewered easily. I therefore placed them in a pouch of heavy-duty foil with a bit of olive oil, salt, and pepper and cooked them alongside the skewered scallops. They took one minute longer to cook (and didn't have the grill marks or smoky flavor), but it beats throwing them away.

2 pounds sea scallops
3 tablespoons olive oil for brushing
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Lemon wedges for serving

Ignite grill. Thread scallops on several flat skewers. Brush with olive oil and lightly season with salt and pepper. When fire is medium-hot (you can hold your hand 5 inches over the fire for 3 to 4 seconds), place the scallops on the grill and cook for 2 minutes.

Using a large spatula or tongs, turn the skewers and grill on second side for 2 minutes. They should be well-browned on both sides and just cooked through to the center (you can test one to be sure). Remove scallops from skewers onto a warm platter and serve immediately with lemon wedges or with the vinaigrette below.

Serves 4 to 6

ORANGE VINAIGRETTE

This recipe is simply drizzled over the grilled scallops and can be prepared several hours ahead of time with the exception of the fresh herbs which should only be added immediately before serving.

1 teaspoon white balsamic vinegar
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon finely chopped orange zest and
2 tablespoons orange juice from one orange
2 tablespoons best quality olive oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot, about 1 medium
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 teaspoon finely chopped thyme

In a small bowl combine the vinegar and salt and stir for about 10 seconds to dissolve the salt. Add the zest, juice, olive oil, shallot, and pepper and whisk until smooth and emulsified. Whisk in the herbs and serve immediately.

LEMON VARIATION

Substitute lemon zest for orange zest, two teaspoons lemon juice for the 2 tablespoons orange juice and 1 tablespoon chopped chives for the thyme.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JUNE 14

This day is prime for relaxing, veging out. If you are working, it may be difficult to focus and easy to waste time and energy. It is best to postpone working on projects that require mental precision; on the other hand, you can continue to make gains developing creative endeavors. The sun and Jupiter conjoin this morning, generating an upbeat mood. The Pisces moon becomes inactive at 6:26 a.m., traveling at the tail end of the zodiac until 1:03 p.m., when it enters Aries. A 90-degree alignment of Venus and Neptune sets the stage for a romantic evening.

FRIDAY, JUNE 15

Energy and enthusiasm run high. The moon continues to travel in fiery Aries. In addition, a sun/Uranus alignment can make for an exciting, surprising day. New is in; old is out. Spur of the moment ideas can be the most successful. Let fun and games top your agenda this evening.

SATURDAY, JUNE 16

An Aries moon makes this morning ideal for all physical activities; power-walking, bicycling, jogging. Plan a busy day. Tackle jobs that require physical labor and exertion. The moon forms harmonious contacts to five planets until 2:32 p.m., when it becomes inactive. A sensuous Taurus moon takes over at 10:39 p.m.

SUNDAY, JUNE 17

Astrological blue skies and sunshine prevail today. Take advantage of a calm period in this stormy month; kick back, relax, enjoy. The Taurus moon interacts with Neptune and Venus. Retrograde Mercury aligns with Uranus today and Jupiter tomorrow. Its influence may intensify communications. Keep things light. Don't take anyone or anything too seriously.

MONDAY, JUNE 18

It may be difficult to get motivated to focus on work projects today. However, if you carefully organize your time and stick to your game plan, you can be most productive. The moon continues to travel in laidback Taurus, active until 7:21 p.m., when it aligns with Uranus. The remainder of the evening rates high for relaxing and enjoying favorite leisure activities.

TUESDAY, JUNE 19

This is a day that can go either way. The best way to work with it is to go with the flow. Projects may take unexpected turns. Unanticipated situations may demand your immediate attention. The moon enters Gemini at 4:42 a.m. Jupiter aligns with Uranus at 8:17 a.m. Follow your hunches; your instincts are on target. The good news is that this combination of influences may bring sudden opportunities, new discoveries.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20

Yesterday's planetary patterns affect today as well. Slow down between 1:44-4:44 p.m., when the Gemini moon opposes Mars. The dark side of a new moon is in full force and effect. This is a time for cleaning out, letting go, preparing the way for new activities. Lunar alignments to Mercury, Uranus and Jupiter may bring new insights this evening. At 11:24 p.m. the Gemini moon becomes inactive.

THURSDAY, JUNE 21

The summer solstice arrives at 3:38 a.m., when the sun enters the sign Cancer. At 7:41 a.m. the moon enters Cancer, and a new moon/solar eclipse occurs at 7:58 a.m. New moons bring a time for new beginnings in your life. Influences this month prompt you to initiate new starts on an inner, personal level. The family-oriented sign Cancer reminds you that world peace begins at home. This an ideal time for working out conflicts with others, forgiving and forgetting past grudges. Clear the decks and start anew.

Cultivating the alluring irises

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

Part 2

Perched atop our reindeer weathervane, our resident male bluebird chirps happily to his nearby fledglings as brilliant sunshine illuminates his heavenly blue plumage and rusty red vest. Moments later he swoops to the ground to retrieve a plump green caterpillar which has fallen from the shredded leaves of a large weeping cherry tree to share with his hungry brood peeping in the branches overhead. Although the application of pesticides might have alleviated the caterpillar infestation, the knowledge that the robins, catbirds, wrens and especially the handsome bluebirds can safely consume these intruders is worth the temporary unsightly appearance of these affected trees.

The color blue has tremendous appeal for most of us signifying serenity, calm and repose as it is usually associated with peaceful expanses of water or spacious clear blue skies. Plants which offer blue, violet or lavender blossoms are usually highly sought after at our local nurseries, combining and contrasting beautifully with nearly all other flower colors. Blue salvia, lobelia forget-me-nots, veronica, ageratum, and perennial geraniums, to name only a few, provide reliable sources of this pleasing, soothing color. More challenging plants for our area, including hydrangeas, delphiniums and gentians, are often too irresistible to pass by due to their electrifying blue tints, but may not reward us from year to year. As a family, few plants rival the irises for their ease of culture and the broad spectrum of blue and violet tinted flowers they display.

There are innumerable bearded and beardless iris cultivars available in colors ranging from soft, pale lavenders to rich, saturated blues, to deep, velvety purples. The sun loving, rhizomatous, bearded irises offer the greatest diversity of color opportunities but the low-maintenance Siberian iris family has become my iris of choice in recent years. Hybridization efforts have produced a broader range of colors including pale, lavender pinks, rich burgundy reds, pale yellow, glistening whites and many shades of blue and purple in addition to significantly larger flower sizes. Unlike the sword-like, blue-green leaves of bearded iris, Siberian iris form more of a grassy clump from which dozens of slender stems emerge, each bearing 2 or 3 flowers, 2 to 6 inches wide. Tolerant of most soils, they perform well in sun to partial shade in acidic soils enriched with humus. They thrive in moist soils, particularly during the growing season. The bloom season is similar to that of their tall bearded cousins, usually peaking in early to mid-June.

Although routine division is less critical in Siberian iris, clumps may become woody and more difficult to separate after many years so it is advisable to split large clumps occasionally, discarding the woody centers and replanting the younger, outer divisions. Early May and early September are the preferred seasons for transplanting and roots should never be allowed to dry out during the process. Cut foliage to the ground after killing frosts to minimize rodent damage during the winter months.

To extend the iris bloom season into the month of July, grow the spectacular Japanese iris (I. ensata). Giant flower heads up to 9 inches across may resemble dinner plates and provide sensational blooms in white, pink, lavender and purple. Many varieties offer distinctive patterning including veining in contrasting colors or a marbling effect. They require moist, acid soils enriched with bountiful humus in sun or partial shade and tend to be heavy feeders. Avoid the use of bone meal, wood ashes and lime around members of this family. In northern climates they are said to like their feet wet but their ankles dry so gardens which receive regular irrigation during dry periods are perfectly suited to these majestic beauties. Like the Siberian iris, they should be transplanted in spring or fall and never allowed to dry out. Regular division is recommended to maintain their vigor.

The family of crested irises are delightful additions to the front of the partially-shaded garden, thriving in moist, humus-enriched soils. Iris cristata, an American native, has lavender-blue or while flowers on 4-inch stems in late May. The Japanese roof iris, I. tectorum, blooms at approximately the time in similar colors with slightly larger flowers and taller stems. Both form colonies of light green foliage and are charming interplanted with blue and white forget-me-nots.

For those gardeners with damp areas, brooks or water gardens, the so-called 'flag' irises are ideal. Iris versicolor, commonly known as the blue flag iris, is a native found in wet places which will naturalize along brooks and ponds with bluish-purple blooms in June. Iris pseudacorus is a taller, non-native cousin with showy, electric yellow blossoms. Both types will thrive in containers submerged in water gardens where the flowers and foliage provide dramatic architecture.

Iris plants can be purchased through local nurseries in containers or through catalog sources. I recently visited a charming local garden which specializes in bearded irises, Hermit Medlars Walk, which is open to the public on Rt. 140 (near the intersection of Rt. 1) in Foxboro. For breathtaking panoramas of Siberian iris, now is the time to visit Tranquil Lake Nursery, 45 River St. in Rehoboth, MA. Japanese iris will put on their show in Rehoboth during early July. Both of these nurseries provide catalogs and offer iris mail order deliveries. A beautiful bearded iris catalog is available from Schreiner's Gardens, 3625 Quinaby Rd., NE, Salem, OR 97303.

Tapestry tribute not fit for King

Theatre review

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Catharine Duff

By the time her landmark album, "Tapestry," earned her superstar status in 1971, Carole King had already established herself as one of pop music's most successful singer/songwriters. The breadth of King's work remains astonishing even today, 40 years after she — and her frequent songwriting partner Gerry Goffin — had their first number one song with the Shirelle's recording of "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," soon followed by chart-toppers like Bobby Vee's version of "Take Good Care of My Baby" and Little Eva's "Locomotion."

It is not surprising then that King's song catalogue would form the basis of "Tapestry: A Tribute to Carole King," a musical revue first produced in New York and now being presented by JM Productions Dinner Theater at Raffael's in North Quincy.

The current production contains some 30 of King's compositions, but it offers little feeling for their unique style.

Many artists, from James Taylor ("You've Got a Friend") to Blood, Sweat and Tears ("Hi De Ho"), have done covers of King's songs. They only succeeded when they managed to infuse the songs with a soulful pop sound. At Raffael's, there is very little soul on the menu and what pop there is, is flat.

Kate Tellers

Musical Director Todd Theriault does double duty here as piano accompanist and vocalist and often joins the three other singers, Catharine Duff, Kate Tellers and Ted Hewlett. Theriault is also alone in the spotlight on "I Feel the Earth Move," which he performs like a piano lounge offering complete with overt mugging. Indeed, the entire cast never achieves more than an uneasy fit with the material.

The original creators Rowan Joseph, John Kroner and Jeffrey Martin exhibited a clear sensibility by blending lesser-known numbers with the bigger hits. The creative team deserves particular credit for its sensitive pairing of "So Far Away" and "Home Again." They also did an excellent job linking some of King's earliest hits in a 1960s medley that closes the first act.

These good ideas and this great music, however, still require performers with vocal abilities suited to the genre. Director John F. McDonald Jr. has assembled a cast that would probably have been better suited to traditional Broadway music, or material from the Great American Songbook, than these more contemporary pop classics.

Ted Hewlett.

Ted Hewlett is definitely the weakest link in this "Tapestry." With a light voice and scant stage presence, Hewlett makes little impact on the solo "Where Does Love Go" and his other ensemble work.

Tellers is a disappointment, too, on "It's Too Late" and "Jazzman," where she is not helped at all by Keith Papa's inexplicably disconnected saxophone play. Tellers redeems herself in the second act, though, with a terrific take on "You Make Me Feel Like A Natural Woman," proving that Aretha Franklin may not own this song after all.

The evening's one standout is Catharine Duff who gets closest to conveying this show's real potential on "Up on the Roof" and "It's Gonna Take Some Time." Duff also has a winning presence that adds much needed appeal to her collaborations with Tellers and Theriault.

("Tapestry: A Tribute to Carole King" will be performed through June 21 at Raffael's on Enterprise Drive in North Quincy. For tickets, call Raffael's directly at 617/328-1600.)

Park is practically perfect

Forum participants want World's End to stay the same

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Some watch birds, others study wildflowers. Some hike and others just want to get away from it all.

But visitors to World's End in Hingham all share a common vision – they want the peninsula to stay just the way it is.

However, leaving the 251-acre property that is owned by the non-profit Trustees of Reservations alone is not an option. The wide tree-lined causeways, large meadows and panoramic ocean views from nearly every corner of the site are there because the land is "managed."

"We are all here to make sure we have a wonderful place 50 years from now."
— Nick Noon of Cohasset

Without careful handling — the land, which served as a private farm owned by the late John R. Brewer and his descendants for many years — would return to forest. For example, problematic reeds known as phragmites and other unwelcome plant growth would crowd out native plants and therefore, reduce the diversity of birds that nest there.

About 45 enthusiasts, including many from Cohasset, packed one of the upstairs hearing rooms at Hingham Town Hall last week to contribute to the "fact-finding" phase of a management plan.

"The common thread is that we all want to see World's End preserved," said Nick Noon of Cohasset, who is chairman of the planning team. "We are all here to make sure we have a wonderful place 50 years from now."

The planning team hosted the public

MBTA: Greenbush cost not soaring

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

MBTA officials say a recent report chronicling the spiraling cost of building the Greenbush commuter rail line is false and that the line can still be constructed for its $408 million estimate.

"From our perspective, the report is baseless," Executive Office of Transportation and Construction spokesman John Carlisle said referring to a Boston Globe article that reported the cost of the rail line ballooning as high as $600 million.

The article cited unnamed sources within the MBTA as saying the cost had gone up at least $50 million, and possibly as high as $200 million. With debt service factored in, the total cost could reach as high as $1 billion.

"I like to tell people that the cost of the project is now somewhere between $408 million and the sky."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund

However, Carlisle said the MBTA last year hired MK Centennial, a nation-wide consulting firm, to give a cost estimate "warts and all." The result was the $408 billion number, which Carlisle said is actually the "high end" of the cost estimates, and includes mitigation costs to the five towns affected by Greenbush.

Officials to look at runway lawsuit

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Former state senator William Golden slammed Massport's environmental impact report on the proposed new Logan Airport runway, calling it "fraudulent" and filled with "outright lies," and suggested launching a lawsuit to force the state to review the matter.

In a presentation to Cohasset selectmen Tuesday, Golden — a Cohasset native and Braintree attorney who successfully sued to force the Boston Harbor cleanup — argued Environmental Affairs Secretary Robert Durand succumbed to political pressure and "rubber-stamped" approval of the report.

But Massport says the report "validates more than six years of review, analysis and public comment on the runway," calling it a "very progressive document," according to Jose Juves, spokesman for the agency.

Golden, who is leading the fight against the runway on the behalf of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Winthop, Somerville and Everett, has filed a 375-rebuttal to the impact report with Secretary Durand's office.

"The state should not be allowed to do this to its own people."
— Selectman Michael Sullivan

The rebuttal lists a number of instances where he claims Massport's data is either inaccurate or missing. Golden pointed out one example where a Massport map showing the flight path of Hull is drastically different than the actual flight tower radar paths.

He also said the data used to calculate the amount of planes using the new runway is old and that the

Pratt calls for disciplinary action against Haddad

Town manager denies allegations

By Rick Collins and Mary Ford
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Peter Pratt asked selectmen to hold a disciplinary hearing over Town Manager Mark Haddad's alleged behavior toward the Planning Board member after he questioned Haddad's authority to conduct an informal meeting with other officials last week.

Pratt appeared in Haddad's office Thursday after reading a Cohasset Mariner story about a meeting with Haddad, other town officials and developers from Avalon Bay Properties to discuss a proposed 250-unit apartment complex at the former Norfolk Conveyor site off Rte 3A.

Pratt, who was elected to the planning board in April and did not know about the Avalon meeting beforehand, said he "forcefully" questioned Haddad during an impromptu visit to the selectmen's office.

Then, according to Pratt, Haddad "exploded" and became "threatening and intimidating" toward him.

"He was yelling in a violent manner from 10 to 40 seconds," Pratt said, adding Haddad "exhibited assaultive behavior."

Haddad, on advice from his personal attorney, said he could not comment on the accusations except to say, "the complaint does not warrant a response."

Pratt, who admits raising his voice saying he would "not tolerate being treated like this," said Haddad apologized at the end of the alleged altercation and extended his hand, which Pratt shook.

"It is our intent to keep you and the town manager separate from each other."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

Nevertheless, in a letter sent to Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed, Pratt asked that the board conduct a formal investigation into the alleged incident and immediately suspend Haddad pending the outcome of the disciplinary hearing.

In a response to Pratt dated June 20, Koed said the board would conduct a preliminary investigation of the validity of his allegations. He said the board would retain an independent investigator to look into the complaint. Koed further stated Haddad denied Pratt's allegations and reported that Pratt was abusive to him.

Koed asked both Pratt and Haddad not to initiate any contact with one another during the investigation.

"It is our intent to keep you and the town manager separate from each other," Koed stated. He asked that if Pratt had any issues needing the attention of selectmen he contact the chairman.

Haddad had acknowledged that the June 13 meeting included himself, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, Town Planner Liz Harrington, Police Chief Brian Noonan, Jim Lagrotteria and Wayne Sawchuk of the town Senior Housing Committee, Building Inspector Robert Egan and Selectmen Ronnie McMorris and Michael Sullivan. He further said the meeting was at the request of Avalon Bay Properties.

"Avalon Bay contacted me directly as the Chief Administrative Officer of the town, asking to set up a meeting," Haddad recalled.

He called the meeting an "outreach to the town" by the developers and said no official action was taken. The meeting did not include a quorum of any board and therefore was not in violation of the Open Meeting Law.

"It was just for some question and answering," Haddad said.

Because the project would be built using a comprehensive permit,

Festival succeeds despite weather

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Despite extreme weather on different ends of the spectrum, the 46th annual South Shore Arts Festival was a roaring success.

Scorching temperatures and sunny skies on Friday and Saturday gave way to the drenching rains of fading tropical storm Allison on Sunday, but festival goers were still able to admire more than 300 works of art, and visit with dozens of crafters.

"We were very, very happy with our turnout and all the art work."
— Monica McKenney, art center

"It really went well. We were very, very happy with our turnout and all the art work," said arts center spokesman Monica McKinney. "We could have done without the rain though."

More than an inch of rain fell on Cohasset Sunday afternoon, forcing the exhibitors under the festival's half-dozen tents. But still the people came.

"We had people coming right through until 6 p.m.," she said. "When we realized the heavens

AdCom questions transfer requests

Will meet tonight

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Advisory Committee sent back to selectmen two reserve fund transfer requests, which would provide money for the senior housing committee to conduct a feasibility study of two town-owned parcels of land and pay for an audit of the Sewer Commission.

Advisory Committee chairman Maureen Jerz said the group asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to explain what the money would be used for and what the town hopes to accomplish.

Haddad said the requestsfor more information were not interpreted in a negative way, but were part of the checks and balances system within town government.

"They just want to make sure the town's dollars are spent properly," he said.

"They just want to make sure the town's dollars are spent properly."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

A question arose over how much the town was asking to give to the senior housing committee. Haddad asked for $5,000, however, the committee pointed to a Mariner article that said the senior housing committee only asked for $3,000 when it appeared before selectmen last month.

Haddad called the $5,000 request a "mistake" and that the correct amount is $3,000.

Jerz said the Advisory Committee also wants the town to better explain "what the money will buy us, what are we going to get for our money."

The senior housing committee is looking to construct affordable housing units for seniors on town-owned parcels of land; one off Route 3A near Stop & Shop, and the other off Pleasant Street. Senior Housing Committee Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said the money will be used to hire an engineer to determine the feasibility of building there.

In October, selectmen told the Sewer Commission that it would be audited, in light of the $1 million overrun of the town sewer construction project.

Jerz said the committee wants to know what the selectmen expect to get from the audit and its potential usefulness in the future.

Haddad is scheduled to meet with the committee tonight (June 21), and doesn't believe there will be any further issues.

"We expect the committee to talk about it and say everything's fine," he said.

Haddad explained the only way to pay for something that is not included in the town budget is to either go back to Town Meeting or ask the Advisory Committee for permission to take the money out of the reserve fund — which is like a "rainy day" account.

The Advisory Committee then decides whether the request is urgent enough to call for a reserve fund transfer, or should wait for Town Meeting approval.

Committee resignations

Joe Buckley handed in his resignation from the Senior Housing Committee, due to time restraints.

Also, Jim Shipsky has resigned from the Growth & Development Committee. Selectmen voted to replace Shipsky's spot on the committee with a second member of the Planning Board.

MBTA liaison

Selectmen named Thomas Gruber as the board's official liaison to the MBTA, to deal with issues involving Greenbush. Gruber is a four-year member of the Mitigation Committee and, according to the board, was very valuable during the recent mitigation negotiations between the board and MBTA.

Gruber will remain chairman of the Mitigation Committee.

Pay-As-You-Throw

Selectmen Merle Brown said the bags for the upcoming Pay-As-You-Throw trash program are in and available in Town Hall and stores around town. The bags are sold for $1, and are the only type of bags that will be accepted at the Recycling Transfer Facility starting July 1, except for bread bags filled with garbage.

Brown, also a Recycling Committee member, said as of July 1, any town resident without a facility sticker and an official PAYT bag, will not be allowed to dump his or her trash.

Meeting with Bellotti

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti appeared before Selectmen Tuesday to update the board on its ongoing outreach program to the county's seniors.

Seniors are able to buy outdoor porch lights that they can make blink in case of an emergency, the R-U-OK safety reassurance daily call, more visible house numbering, and a Life File containing a senior's medical history that hangs on the refrigerator in case of an emergency.

"Merle do you have all this stuff?" Town Manager Mark Haddad jokingly asked Selectmen Merle Brown.

Bellotti complimented town Police Chief Brian Noonan and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln on their help dealing with senior issues. "They are very progressive," he said. "They know their job is more than just answering the bell."

He also thanked Council of Elder Affairs director Kathy Bryanton for her involvement.

Mercury poses health threats

The Massachusetts Interagency Mercury Task Force is beginning a statewide public awareness campaign to deliver a message to residents – mercury is toxic and must be handled carefully.

"Without the facts, it is easy to mishandle mercury," a recent letter to local communities from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) states. "Exposure to mercury can be harmful to your health."

Mercury is harmful to developing fetuses and children and can damage wildlife, including birds and fish.

More than 40 percent of the Commonwealth's lakes and ponds that have been tested contain fish with unsafe levels of mercury. These fish pose health threats to humans when they are eaten.

According to the EOEA, mercury must be removed from the solid waste stream so it does not continue to be released into the environment.

Further information about mercury and its safe disposal is available by calling the toll-free mercury hotline, 1-866-9MERCURY.

Water restrictions for North Cohasset

Based upon the extremely dry period in late April and may and the continued high water demands, the Massachusetts-American Water Company, which serves 600 customers in North Cohasset, is advising its customers in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset to continue to use water wisely and efficiently during this upcoming summer season and is implementing mandatory odd-even outside watering restrictions. Outside water use is now limited to between 5 and 9 a.m. and 6 to 10 p.m. on an odd/even schedule consistent with street address number.

Eileen Commane, Operations Manager for the Company said "Recent rainfall has helped curb demand but the 30 plus days of little or no rainfall in late April and May has caused water demands to remain higher than normal. As such, it is especially important that customers use water as efficiently as possible and manage outside water use consistent with the mandatory odd/even schedule.

Deer Hill celebrates start of school building project

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Deer Hill School kicked off its last week of the school year by celebrating the start of the school's renovation.

On Monday, the school's fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders assembled on the front lawn to cheer on the groundbreaking of the project — after first learning what a groundbreaking ceremony is.

"Thank you!"
— Deer Hill students

The Deer Hill school band and chorus kicked the ceremony off by joining together for a rendition of "America." Former principal Ken Ekberg reminded the students in attendance that there is a time capsule buried by the flagpole and that it needs to be opened in 2176.

Also in attendance were former school building committee members Osborne Ingram and Arthur Sullivan.

Superintendent Dr. Edward Malvey talked about the "3 C's" of the project: the culmination of two years of planning and hard work, the commencement of the project, and the cooperation needed to live in an evolving school building for the next two years.

"I have no doubt that everyone will pull together, and we'll be back here in two to three years to dedicate the new building," he said.

Off to the Malvey's left, screened fencing blocked the students view of the work already begun on the school property. Contractors for BSC Construction have started scraping away the topsoil and pavement to mark out where the building's expansion will be.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed, who attended the Deer Hill when he moved to Cohasset 40 years ago, said the new school will give the students a place to become the future of the country.

School Committee Chairman Stephanie Noble honored fellow school committee member Mark DeGiacomo, and School Building Committee Chairman Rob Spofford for being the impetus behind the project.

"They've worked harder than you can imagine," she said to the students. "Remember a time when you've really, really wanted something? Well these gentlemen really, really wanted new schools for you, and you should give them a huge thank you."

"Thank you!" responded the students.

Along with the middle/high school, the Deer Hill will undergo a complete renovation and expansion as part of a $41 million school improvement project.

Youth counterfeiting is on the rise, federal agent says

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The U.S. Secret Service agent assisting local police with a youth counterfeiting investigation, says Cohasset is not alone in experiencing crimes of this sort.

"Throughout Massachusetts, we see a lot of juveniles do this," said Special Agent George Hartford of the Boston office. "We have a case up in North Hampton involving 11 juveniles and one adult."

Police said upwards of 15 Cohasset juveniles — meaning they are under 17 years of age — have been interviewed since two Cohasset teenagers were arrested earlier this month; one after allegedly asking another boy to exchange counterfeit $20s for real money at Shaw's and the other for allegedly printing the phony money. All the interviews were conducted in the presence of one or both of their parents, some of whom brought attorneys, Cohasset Det. Rick Grassie said.

More than $700 in counterfeit money in the Cohasset case was manufactured, but far less was "uttered" or passed and most of that has been recovered, Grassie said.

Hartford said the teenagers apparently started out with what they thought was a cool idea and didn't understand the severity of what they were doing.

"They do now, without a doubt," he said.

"Periodically parents should take a look a the computer files and see what's going on."
— Special Agent George Hartford

The two Cohasset teenagers have been arraigned on counterfeiting charges at Quincy District Court. Another Cohasset juvenile and a boy from Pembroke were summonsed and will appear in court June 28. Police, who make seek a summons for another Cohasset juvenile, seized a computer and printer from the home of one of the Cohasset youths and another from the Pembroke boy's home. Another computer was confiscated and returned after the image was deleted, Hartford said. That computer had not been used to produce any bills. When someone is summonsed, they are notified in the mail on when to appear in court and what the charges are.

Grassie said the word "got around" after one of those involved found out he could spend the money. "Others heard about it and asked for some," he said.

Hartford said parents need to pay attention to what their children are doing on the computer.

"Periodically they should take a look at the computer files and see what's going on, " he said. "In all probability, this is the last thing the parents thought." He said, however, those teenagers involved were old enough to know better.

Grassie said the next step is to see what happens in the court proceedings. He said those involved will be required to make restitution to the stores that received the counterfeit money.

"They were out the product sold, the currency passed and the change," Grassie said.

Seatbelt bill doesn't pass muster

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

A motion to reconsider the tie vote on primary enforcement of the seatbelt law was defeated Wednesday, effectively killing the bill until the next legislative session.

On May 29, the House tied 76-76 on a bill that would have given police power to pull over motorists not wearing their seatbelts and issue a $25 ticket.

Public Safety Committee Chairman Timothy Toomey, D-Cambridge, who had asked the House to reconsider their vote, tried to withdraw his motion Wednesday when it became obvious the bill's supporters didn't have the votes.

However, Majority Whip Sal DiMasi, D-Boston, at the gavel in place of House Speaker Thomas Finneran, said under House rules he wasn't able to withdraw his motion, and it was defeated on a voice-vote.

The bill is essentially dead, unless revived by a unanimous vote in the House.

According to state Rep. Garrett Bradley, a supporter of the bill, he thought proponents had the votes to force a reconsideration last week.

"But a lot of people in favor of the bill felt it had been fully and fairly debated, and there wasn't a need or there was nothing new that would necessitate reconsideration," he said.

Seatbelts have been required under state law since 1994. Currently, not buckling up is subject to secondary enforcement, meaning the officer can cite a motorist for not using a seatbelt only if he or she is stopped for something else. A police officer can only use primary enforcement to stop a vehicle for a seatbelt infraction if a child, age 12 or under, is not wearing a seatbelt.

The bill passed by a voice-vote in the Senate.

Bill supporters argued that primary enforcement would result in a 15 percent increase in seat belt usage, 39 fewer deaths and 3,000 less injuries suffered in Massachusetts car accidents a year. They also said taxpayers could save up to $154 million a year in medical costs accrued by people in car accidents with minimal or no medical insurance. The money to treat those people comes from a hospital's taxpayer-funded uncompensated care pool.

Bradley office hours

State Rep. Garrett Bradley (D – Hingham) will hold district office hours this Friday, June 22, in Hull. He will be available at the William E. McTighe Manor, 6 Atlantic House Road from 3:30-4:30 p.m.. If you are unable to attend this scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, please call (617) 722-2120 to schedule an appointment at your convenience.

Beechwood St. cleaning, lining to begin soon

By the end of June, the Water Commission, through its contract with the Biszco Company, will begin cleaning and lining the water main under Beechwood Street (from King Street to Riverview Drive), which will initiate Phase A-1 of their long-range distribution system capital improvement program. The Beechwood Street project is expected to take until approximately Aug. 15 to complete.

The Water Commission will then clean and line Elm Street and Summer Street, from approximately Aug. 25 to Sept. 7, replace 900 inches of undersized 6-inch pipe on Border Street with 8-inch ductile iron pipe around Sept. 14 to 20, and then replace undersized 6-inch pipe on Rustic Drive with 8-inch ductile iron pipe approximately Sept. 28 to Oct. 4. All dates are subject to change.

A total of 20 fire hydrants have been replaced in a project that began in January and concluded recently. One of the oldest fire hydrants, on Highland Avenue was replaced May 11.

Get your beach and RTF stickers

The Board of Selectmen has extended the expiration date of the beach and RTF permits until June 30. Beach and RTF permits will be on sale starting June 4, during normal business hours at the Town Hall and at the DPW garage for the next fiscal year.

Starting July 1, the Pay-As-You-throw Program will start. An "all facilities" sticker will be $50 and an additional second sticker for $20. This sticker will allow access to the RTF, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

Residents who do not utilize the RTF can purchase a beach sticker for $7 and the cost for a senior over 60 is $3. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at various locations throughout the town.

You may purchase your sticker through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

SCHOOL ENDS

Hello Cohasset! I cannot believe that it is finally the last week of school. I for one am very excited for the summer but also very sad that this year is ending. We have had a wonderful year with all the teachers and new friends that have been made that the end always seems bittersweet. Yes, the fact that my youngest is going into first grade also has me a little (ok, a lot!) teary at the thought of him growing up to this stage. I am going to enjoy all of them so much this summer and hope that it doesn't go by as fast as this school year did.

FOND FAREWELL

I would also like to say good-bye to Mrs. Marilee Cantelmo, principal of the Joseph Osgood School. Marilee is leaving and moving on to some new ventures and I want to thank her for all of her hard work and time that has been put into the Osgood School! Good Luck in all of your new adventures.

FESTIVAL WINNER

The Festival on the Common was beautiful this year with many wonderful things to see. The art work was amazing on all levels. Congratulations to all who took part in this. One young man, Myles Garbarini, took a first place prize in the kindergarten through third-grade level. Myles just finished kindergarten at Derby Academy and his painting was wonderful. We know that your family is very proud of you Myles!

ST. ANSELM GRAD

There is a lot of school news to report this week. I will start with Saint Anselm College in Manchester, New Hampshire. Eva L. Humphreys graduated with a bachelor of arts in criminal justice. Eva is the daughter of Charles Humphreys and are both Cohasset residents. Eva was named to the dean's list for the second semester as well. Great Job.

WITH HONORS

Bronwen M. Daley of Cohasset graduated with honors from the College of Nursing at the University of Massachusetts Amherst on May 27. Bronwen spent her sophomore year in Granada, Spain, which led to a minor concentration in Spanish. Her area of specialization is pediatric oncology. Her extremely proud parents are Charles and Mary-Lynda Daley. What great accomplishments!

FAMILY CELEBRATION

I heard from Jenny (Fox) Markulec that Bill and Gert Fox came to Cohasset this past weekend with eight of their 10 children and 13 of their 19 grandchildren to enjoy the festivities and celebrate the baptism of Petriani Amelia Fox, daughter of James Fox and Matoula Karagiannis, of Los Angeles, Calif.. All of his children wanted to make sure that Dad Fox had a wonderful Father's Day with all. We are sure that you did. I hope that you were all able to see many familiar faces while you enjoyed each other last weekend.

SPECIAL BU GRADUATION

Boston University's Metropolitan College held its spring commencement exercises on Sunday afternoon, May 20. Included among the 119 students who received degrees were Denise Louise Dunphy and Michael Joseph Dunfy, son and daughter of Mr. Arthur L. Dunphy, formerly of Sohier Street and now of Scituate. Denise received a bachelor of science in sociology, while Michael, received a bachelor of arts in English. An amazing note to these accomplishments is that Denise and Michael were the sixth and seventh children of Mr. Dunphy's who have graduated from Boston University. To celebrate this wonderful occasion, the dean invited Mr. Dunphy to personally present his children with their diplomas. A beautiful end to a wonderful college experience for all. Congratulations.

AWARD WINNER

Some news came my way from Maine from Bruce and Georgine Butman. Amelia won the Nicholas Green Foundation Scholarship Award recently. This $500 Savings Bond is awarded to one student from each state. Amelia was nominated from her teachers and the community by showing leadership and community service and has impacted those around her greatly. This award will be presented to her by the Maine Educators Gifted and Talented at the National Association for Gifted Children in Washington, D.C. on behalf of the Nicholas Green family. Nicholas was the young boy killed in Italy some time ago. What a huge honor Amelia! Congratulations from all back here in Cohasset. Amelia's accomplishments have been many since moving to Maine. She was the only sixth-grader who received high honors in all subjects and is doing beautifully in Girl Scouts, music and more. Keep up all the great work.

BROWN GRADUATE

Shelley Mcmillan Vanderweil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.G. Vanderweil of Cohasset received a bachelor of science degree from Brown University in Providence, RI. Shelley earned her degree in engineering. Good Job.

MAGNA CUM LAUDE

Frank Wheelwright of Cohasset recently graduated from Stonehill College, magna cum laude. Fantastic Frank!

THAYER GRADUATES

Thayer Academy had two Cohasset ladies to let us know about. Brooke Baker and Lauren Smith graduated from Thayer recently and Lauren received the Gilbert A. Booth Award. Brooke is planning on attending the Univ. of Vermont and Lauren is going to Colby College.

Congratulations to both!

DEAN'S LIST

Bryant College of Smithfield, R.I. had two students also for us to mention. Todd M. Bestick, a junior finance major, and Lauren N. Dooley, a senior management major, were both named to the spring semester dean's list. A lot of hard work went into this, congratulations.

HONOR ROLL

Philips Academy of Andover, Mass. also sent some news about two of their students. Kara Gaughen, daughter of Robert and Margaret Gaughen, and Alanna Hughes, formerly of Cohasset and now, living in Andover and daughter of Lauren Souza of Andover and Bruce Hughes of Beverly Farms, Mass. were named to the Honor Roll. Great work, girls.

DUFFY NEWS

Rosemary and Dan Duffy of Cohasset wanted to do a little bragging on their two children and rightfully so. Kevin Frederick Duffy recently graduated from Coast Guard Academy and is now in Oakland, Calif. Kevin's sister Maura is at Northeastern and made the dean's list all three quarters. This was wonderful to hear and we know how proud you both are of these two. Congratulations.

HIGHEST HONORS

Sarah Nohe, daughter of Olga and Brian Nohe of Whitney Woods Lane recently earned highest honors for the spring semester at Skidmore College. Sarah was also awarded the Adirondak Trust Award by David Miller, Gallery Director of the Tang Museum. Her winning entry was among 172 works of art submitted. Sarah is a studio arts and anthropology double major. Great Job on all achievements, Sarah.

That is all for this week. Please send in all news, events and other great information to me no later than Mondays at noon. If I get the news after this, it will appear in the following week's column.

'Teens' share memories 60 years later

Class of 1941 holds reunion

By Amanda E. Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

While Adolf Hitler and his troops marched across Europe — 25 teenagers from a small Massachusetts town were crossing an auditorium stage to receive their diplomas.

Then, it was off to college, nursing or secretarial school, or war for the members of the Cohasset High School Class of 1941.

But no matter where the graduates went after that graduation night, they would meet again 60 years later.

Though only eight of the graduates attended the class's 60th reunion at PJ's Country House in Scituate last Friday — all the classmates were there, in photographs, letters and memories.

Eileen (Mitchell) Sargent, who said she was the youngest and shortest of the eight girls in the class, organized the reunion, with a little help from her high school sweetheart and husband, Stewart. The Sargents, who now live in New Hampshire, began dating during their senior year at Cohasset and married a few years later.

Class president Joseph Perroncello, of Cohasset, said he and his buddies knew exactly how to get Stewart fired up back then.

"Stewart and Eileen, our two lovebirds," Perroncello recalled. "Every once in awhile, to get Stewart mad, we would make eyes at Eileen and all hell would break loose."

Eileen and class treasurer Edwin Pratt each brought their yearbook, a soft-cover green book, which was then called "The Piper." Though it is not nearly as big as the yearbooks nowadays, it displays the same sorts of pictures, including snapshots of underclassmen, clubs, sports teams, faculty and, of course, the graduating class.

Though there were only eight girls in the class, Eileen said a fair number played on the school's sports teams. Eileen, who was the captain of the girls' basketball team, said the team played on the third floor of the school, which was on Elm Street, and recalled going to Hull for games.

Even in 1941, high school seniors were causing trouble.

Stewart remembered a day when "we were raising hell in the senior class room. One of the boys, who isn't with us anymore, started out the door and I picked up a chalkboard eraser and threw it at him. It hit him and bounced up into the master clock. It rang all the bells and broke the tape."

Stewart had to stay after school for two weeks and fix the broken clock.

Perroncello, chuckling, said of the class, "It was a fun group."

Because of the alphabetical listing of their names, Perroncello said, he, Pratt and Robert Pape were seated next to each other.

"There were three of us who sat together, Perroncello, Pratt and Pape," he said. "And Pape never got blamed for anything. It was either Perroncello or Pratt. He [Pape] had this very innocent look on his face and he never got blamed for anything! I never let him forget that!"

For their class trip, the high school seniors traveled to New York City on the Eastern Steamship Line. Eileen said that was the last year the boat, which sailed through the Cape Cod Canal, ran. The classmates slept on the boat at night and spent the day sightseeing in the city.

When they weren't raising hell in school, playing sports or sightseeing in the Big Apple, the graduates said they did the same stuff teenagers do now on the weekends and after school. They said they went to the movies and ran around town, too.

Clifford Dickson, who still lives in Cohasset, spoke of a big difference between being a teenager then and being one now. The Class of 1941 grew up during the Great Depression.

"Money was hard to come by in Cohasset in the 1930s," he said.

Dickson said he, along with other teenagers at the time, worked after school and on the weekends.

Though there were 26 students, eight girls and 18 boys, in the class, not all made it to the graduation ceremony.

Dickson left school in April of 1941 because his uncle needed an engineer on a boat he was captaining.

"They still graduated me," he said. "I had to go back and take my exams, though."

Dickson joined both the Coast Guard and Navy and served in World War II, like several of his male classmates.

Though they graduated before the United States officially entered the war in December 1941, a number of them enlisted in the service after they finished high school. Perroncello and Milton Kerr were stationed in London, England, together.

Other classmates attending included George Haley, of Cohasset, and Virginia (Wheelwright) Bland.

Those who could not attend the reunion were class vice president George Mulhern, secretary Mary (Figueredo) Maree, Pauline (Blakeman) Henn, Nicholas DeVito, Augustine Mello, Daniel Sullivan, Jean (Wheelwright) Burris and Frances Mulvey.

The Class of 1941 would like to remember those classmates who have since passed away: Belmira Barrow, Jane Donovan, Arthur Goodwin, Ralph Keegan, Thorndike Litchfield, Rita (Lyons) Tower, Robert Pape, Richard Thompson and Phillip Whittemore.

OPINION

Big enough for both

In terms of square footage, Cohasset Town Hall is not the largest of places. Hingham's "headquarters" for example, is palatial when compared to little Cohasset's.

But despite its size, our Town Hall has to be big enough to encompass a range of business matters, board rooms, elected and appointed officials — and personalities.

Two men in particular who serve our town – both at well over six-feet tall – share imposing statures. We know them to both have short fuses. But that is where their similarities end.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, our chief executive officer, and Planning Board member and former selectman Peter Pratt, clash. That reality is coupled with the fact they have fundamental differences about how business in the town should be conducted.

We can speak from the experience gained from covering countless Town Hall meetings over the years where we have seen both men in action. We can honestly tell you they are both competent, intelligent and want the best for Cohasset.

Apparently, that combination of clashing personalities and differences of opinion erupted in a shouting match last week in the selectmen's office. For the record, we weren't there at the time and can only go by what we've heard.

But given their respective temperaments, we're sure there is fault on both sides and last week's "altercation" between the two men may have been inevitable. However, we think it was also unnecessary.

It's clear Mr. Pratt and Mr. Haddad don't like each other and there is no law, saying they have to. But the two men do share the common ground of aspiring for good government. Therefore, both men need to agree to disagree and move on. Surely this "incident" need not have escalated to where it is today.

Town Hall is not the OK Corral and, now that Mr. Pratt is back on an elected board, the place has to be big enough for both him and our Town Manager.

Funny money

The youth counterfeiting investigation should serve as a wake-up call for parents.

We'd all like to believe our children know the difference between right and wrong – but those lines aren't as clearly defined as they were in past generations.

Today, thanks to computers and laser printers, making fake money that looks real is within the technological capability of our youth. One thing apparently led to another in Cohasset and some phony money was passed at local shops.

As U.S. Special Agent George Hartford said, those involved may not have realized the seriousness of their actions.

"They do now, without a doubt," he said.

We hope the issue has prompted family dinner table conversations about why counterfeiting is against the law. Simply put, it's stealing.

Also, as wonderful as computers are, they are also dangerous. Parents should pay close attention to what their children are doing there.

Sandy beach barrels painted

TO THE EDITOR

The Sandy Beach trustees want to let everyone know how grateful they are to Bill Cavanaro at Cohasset Collision. The barrels at the beach were painted in record time as a donation to the beach. Half the barrels are new, part of many expenses at the beach at this time of year.

Most people are really not aware that the "beach stickers" sold by the town provide no money for the operation of the beach. That is why your donations are so important. The town maintains the parking lot and removes the trash. There had been some concerns last year about odors at the beach. All can be assured that there is no problem at the bathhouse. This year there are even four new toilets. New signs are being painted as part of the general maintenance.

The beach has been a wonderful respite during these early hot summer days. How lucky we are to have it!

COHASSET CARES

No sticker, no RTF

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

No Pay-As-You-Throw bag, no trash disposal.

OK. Let's not get hot under the collar. Let's back up a bit and explain. It's not as bad or as hard as you might think. After being on closed-circuit TV the other night and hearing Merle painstakingly explain the whole PAYT process for an hour and a half, and after handling some live phone calls during the program, I think we can clarify things here for you.

First of all, let's take a tour of the RTF to refamiliarize ourselves with the establishment, moving counter-clockwise, from right to left, the normal sequence, in preparation for PAYT on July 1.

As we enter, first of all, the boutique on the right. No junk here, please! Our employees have more than enough to do. Decent reusables. We've all obtained treasures here. It's a sensible community exchange in the Yankee tradition. Broken TV's do not go in the boutique! Nor broken computers. Non-working TV's and computers go in the next building on the right along with fluorescent lights and batteries [all four of these items contain hazardous materials which must be removed]. Engine oil and filters go here also.

Next is the paint shed, only open usually the last Saturday of the month, for oil base paint only. The DEP says to dry out latex paint, use kitty litter if you have a sizeable amount, and then dispose in the trash. Hazardous wastes like solvents are only collected at special times when a DEP representative is present. Or you can take hazardous waste to Clean Harbors, Hingham 1-800-444-4244.

Next, the green dumpster w/roof, for used 8-1/2 x 11 office paper. This is worth quite a bit of money! Please try to get it to us! If you put this type of paper anyplace else, we all pay to have it hauled off, whereas the town could be making money. Thanks.

Next the open dumpster for tin cans and coat hangers [coat hangers are best returned to the cleaner's — they welcome them].

Next the corrugated and plastic building. Brown bags go in corrugated along with such as cereal boxes [after waxed liners removed] and any other cardboard not waxed[waxed cardboard goes in junk mail]. Naturally it's a big help if you flatten the cardboard and insert the smaller items into the larger! No styrofoam! Foam packing peanuts can be brought to Thompson's Business Services, Front Street, Scituate Harbor, just a bit north of the theater. [They cost $25. for a 30-gal. bag, that's why they're glad to get them back.] Please check your cardboard boxes for foam or plastic before flattening. Then rinsed and flattened milk jugs, rinsed colored plastic [i.e. detergent containers], then rinsed clear plastic. Note in front here the barrel for plastic shopping bags. The Recycling Committee hope to have reusable cotton shopping bags with our "Cohasset Agrees To Recycle Everything" logo available soon and as inexpensively as possible.

Next the newspaper and magazine dumpster. No brown bags, no plastic bags. The story is that you and I earn money if we put our brown bags in the corrugated; we cost the town money if we don't, to have it hauled off.

Left of the newspaper bin is junk mail. Put flattened waxed OJ and waxed milk cartons here, please. No other cardboard here. No brown bags, no plastic bags. Another opportunity to earn money for the town or to lose.

The bottle building. Rinsed clear, green, brown. Please no metal or plastic rings. No ceramics [i.e. coffee mugs]. No broken glass.

Next turning the corner, the clothing bins, Salvation Army and Red Cross. Bagged.

Next, aluminum dumpster. No cans. No coat hangers, which are steel [try to remember to return to cleaners].

Next the Scout building for returnable cans and bottles. Ever thought about volunteering? You see how the returnables pile up. The sorting is not hard and is actually very satisfying. Friends of the RTF!

Now for the big one, the trash container, last stop before brush [down the hill on designated days] and the yard compost. If you've noticed, the big dumpster to the left of the Scout building is actually a truck trailer, one holding 20 tons. You and I fill it up in one day. It costs us $100./ton to have this hauled off, $2,000./day. This is a trash dumpster/trailer that includes garbage. [There are still some black plastic composters available, $15. Organic matter really breaks down fast these warm days!] Cardboard does not go here! We all earn money for Cohasset and lower our taxes

'The day would change my life'

D-Day vet writes memoirs

James Gabaree, who landed at D-Day 56 years ago, stands in the yard of his Jerusalem Road home.

"I was 19 years old, and was about to take part in an event that would affect the course of history; defeating those that would enslave humanity and rule the world by force. This day would change my life, if I lived to survive it. My youth would be sacrificed. I would be entering a world of kill, or be killed..."

Those words from James Gabaree's memoirs are the Cohasset resident's recollection of D-Day, the massive Allied invasion of the Nazi-occupied French coast on June 6, 1944.

Gabaree had gone from living on the streets and in foster homes on the South Shore, to an Army Ranger leading the landing at Omaha Beach at Normandy.

"We were the Indian fighters," said Gabaree of the Rangers. "We were like ghosts – we'd take a shot and disappear."

Gabaree didn't go to high school, instead opting to join the Army as soon as he turned 18 in 1943. Not only did he have to land on the beach, and fight his way through a blizzard of smoke, bullets and mortar shells, but he did it with 15 pounds of dynamite strapped to his back.

"I was a bangalor torpedo man," he explained. He would take two metal tubes filled with dynamite, connect them, and blow through the walls of barbed wire the soldiers faced while landing. Hopefully, he'd be able to dive out of the way before the explosion.

On the day after the 56th anniversary of the landing which resulted in more than 10,000 casualties, but ultimately, the defeat of the German Army, Gabaree sat discussing the events of that day in his Jerusalem Road home — as far removed from the beaches of Normandy as possible.

"It was terrible," he said.

"Our immediate objective was to get off the beach alive. We fought our way up the hill to the cover of some hedgerows that were practically impossible to penetrate. Looking down at the incoming forces presented a horrible sight of men being blown to pieces. I lost my religion."

In all reality, Gabaree should not have come back. The fact the Allied forced took Omaha beach is almost miraculous. Bombing runs had failed to knock out the German guns, as planned. As a result, not only did the Nazis have clear shots at the men exiting from the landing craft, but also were able to set up guns to shoot parallel with the beach, taking men down in rows.

"Rommel had fortified it well," Gabaree said of German field general Erwin Rommel.

"The infantry had stopped," he remembered. "If it wasn't for the Rangers, they never would have gotten off the beach."

His battalion's mission was to secure Point Du Hoc, where the Germans had set up their big 155 millimeter guns that could fire on ships eight to 12 miles out to sea.

"If you stopped, you were dead," he said. "Everyone was left to make their own decisions."

Gabaree's group made it the farthest behind enemy lines that first day. When they met at the rendezvous point, only 23 of the 78 members of his battalion at made it, and even those 23 were listed as "missing in action."

The battalion completed its mission, but had lost radio contact with the beach. So six members, including Gabaree, volunteered to make their way from the point back to the beach.

"In the process, I was standing next to my friend in an open space on the cliff, and he was cut in half," Gabaree said. "And then I was wounded."

"The emotional strain of not helping a fallen comrade in order to reach and accomplish your assigned mission would take its toll."

Gabaree was pulled into a ditch, and then abandoned.

"I was left to die really," he said, with no anger. "If you fell, they left you. There wasn't reinforcements to pick you up."

He discovered his left buttock had been blown wide open, and soon realized he had also been shot in the back. Gabaree treated the wounds with the sulfur drugs he was given and began the journey back to the point.

"I would walk for a while, and then crawl," he said.

At one point Gabaree was spotted by a German sniper, and started to crawl towards him to surrender.

"Then I decided I'd rather be dead than captured by a German, and dove into the bushes," he recalled. "I landed in a mint patch and it burned. To this day, whenever I smell mint, I feel the burn."

He eventually came to an open field where a sixth sense told him to turn and shoot.

"I didn't see or hear anything, I just turned and fired," he said. The German missed, but Gabaree didn't.

He stole the dead German's black bread — the first food he had eaten in days — and promptly threw up. That's when the hallucinations started.

"I saw Goofy and Mickey mouse in full color," he said. "I'd pass out for a little while, then wake up, and pass out again. I realized I was in pretty bad shape, and said I'll wait four hours, and then I'll kill myself."

But in the distance he heard a mortar go off.

"Then somebody yelled out 'Son of a bitch!'" Gabaree recalled. "I tried to get their attention, and they dragged me out of the foxhole, and brought me to the beach."

I was alive.

Gabaree recovered enough to be sent back into battle. In the Battle of the Bulge, he was again wounded, this time by either a hand grenade or concussion mine. He shattered his hand, hurt his shoulder, and suffered a full body-blister.

"They curled my hand around a gun, and taped it in place," he said.

He left the Army in 1945, but still feels the affects of his injuries. The slight, bearded man who still looks like he'd fight his way up Black Rock Beach if he needed to, walks with a stiff limp, and has been in chronic pain since the day he was shot overlooking the beach at Normandy.

Despite all that he had seen and done, Gabaree was able to put it out of his mind, and move on.

"Life goes on," he said. "All of life is adjusting. You just have to learn to deal with it."

Gabaree entered the post-war world with two purple hearts and a bronze star, and no high school education. He took a carpentry job, started his own business, worked on a local fire department and then started buying local properties.

He ended up owning 400 apartment units in Quincy, running two state housing partnerships, joining the mortgage game, and founded World Realty Corporation.

Gabaree met his wife, Shirley, on a blind date shortly after leaving the Army.

"I fell in love immediately and proposed a few days later. She changed my life," he said. "It's been a honeymoon for 54 years. I tell her 20 times a day I love her."

He moved to Cohasset 25 years ago, after his three children had left the home, and despite loving the area, is contemplating a move to the North Shore to be closer to his children.

"War is hell. There are no winners in war."

It bothers him that there wasn't much fuss made about the recent anniversary of the landing.

"It bothers me that it just goes by. We changed history out there," he said. "I saw the fortiments, they were getting ready to invade England."

Gabaree saw the 1999 film "Saving Private Ryan," and was dismayed about fellow moviegoers reactions to it. "I was all emotionally charged up," he said. "Everyone else was discussing where to go for dinner."

Gabaree has avoided the standard veteran organizations; he isn't a member of the American Legion Post, or V.F.W. He's never been back to Normandy, and it wasn't until he came across an message in the Internet asking for D-Day veteran experiences that he ever really discussed what happened.

He typed it out, posted the message, and watched in amazement as the responses poured in, including some from those he served with. It prompted Gabaree to sit down and start writing his memoirs for his children, so they can understand what he went through.

As he sat telling his story, the American flag waving in his back yard echoed the words that he had started with:

"I was a patriot then, and I'm a patriot now."

Women's jokes no longer funny

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Did you hear the one about the woman who . . .

No? Well, don't hang by you're thumbs waiting. Humor involving the female gender seems to have been placed on the proscribed list by the people who have been appointed to protect female sensibilities.

The Women's Caucus, taking note of what it deemed to be provocative clothing worn by female pages in the South Carolina Legislature, forced a directive banning low cut blouses and short mini-skirts.

Whereupon, a group calling themselves the Men's Caucus posted a suggestion that the female pages wear shorter skirts and smaller blouses when they carry on their duties among the legislators, both men and women.

Furthermore, the young ladies, mostly coeds from the University of South Carolina, were instructed to ignore further memos from the Women's Caucus.

Everyone laughed at that as good clean fun — at least they would have when I hung around the State House — and everyone went back to raising taxes or whatever else legislators do to make our lives miserable. Right?

Wrong! Before you knew it the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission was mustered into active duty to find the miscreant who wrote and circulated the memo. They were joined in the hunt for the criminal by the State Human Affairs Commission

Pretty soon there were more investigators beating the woods and bars of Columbia, S. C., for the author of the memo than there were hunting the latest escaped triple axe murder.

Even the ladies of the Women's Caucus saw the ridiculousness of it all.

"I would take the investigation as to be done and closed," said Rep. Vida O. Miller before the probe had gotten down to the serious work. "That's basically it."

Nevertheless, it appears that women's jokes have gone the way of the Polish jokes that were so popular 40 or 50 years ago.

Incidentally, in Canada at the time, Polish jokes were told about those who lived in the province of Newfoundland. They called them "Newfie" jokes. But I digress . . .

There's nothing funny about gastrointestinal surgery but Marshfield Library Trustee John Kaczorowski is going through a similar experience, according to the Patriot Ledger.

John became a little too graphic in describing his surgery to Library Director Joanne Ribldi. She said it made her uncomfortable but didn't regard it as harassment. But the Marshfield selectmen did. They want him removed.

He conceded that he made an error in judgment and added he was only explaining why he couldn't do certain jobs.

"There are folks out there who have an overly broad idea of sexual harassment," said Eugenia Guastaferri, an attorney for the MCAD.

Right on!

When I was attending the Copley Square division of Boston University in the early 50s, I also took English courses at BU's College of Practical Arts and Letters, a nearby girls' school, rather than make the long trek to the main campus on Commonwealth Avenue.

My teacher of Shakespeare was one Harold Ogden White, one of whose claims to fame was that he studied under Harvard's sainted "Copey."

One day, after class he took me, the only male in the class, aside and told me one of the raunchiest jokes I ever heard, filled with scatological terms for the female body parts.

"I've been wanting to do that for years," he chuckled.

So what happens during an inspection?

ASSESSMENTS

ELSA MILLER

In order to assist in determining the fair market value of a property, assessors conduct inspections of property throughout every year. We inspect whenever there is a building permit in process. Permits cover such items as new construction, additions and renovations. We also ask for an inspection when the homeowner files for an abatement. During the triennial revaluation, we also inspect all sales and a sampling of other properties. So what happens during an inspection?

An inspection is a walk through of a home by the Deputy Assessor Cheryl Pooler and possibly one or more of the members of the Board of Assessors. The property field card and the records are reviewed for accuracy. Data such as the number of bathrooms, kitchen updates, overall condition, room counts etc., are check to assure that the information is correct. Exterior measurements are checked against the existing sketch on file to verify that they are also correct. External factors such as the view, water frontage, topography and location are reviewed. Sale terms and date are also verified.

Any changes in the data are entered into the assessor's computer database.

Any changes in the data are entered into the assessor's computer database. In a revaluation year the data is processed on the sale and applied to all properties in the neighborhood. Inspections are vital to maintain quality control and accurate assessed values. They are also state mandated. When viewing sales, the assessor can use the information to determine and create the state-required sales analysis. This analysis indicates how much buyers are paying for certain amenities. For instance comparing the price difference of a house with a modern kitchen to a house with an older kitchen provides information about kitchen updates. Similar comparisons are made for water frontage verses water view, and also to what degree different views are reflected in the sales price.

Location is one of the key value indicators. Assessors recently plotted sales on a map of Cohasset. Price ranges are indicated by different colors. The map shows a pattern or a possible neighborhood price factor. Neighborhoods are delineated by demand or price. Neighborhood lines change as buyer's demands change. The revaluation gives us the tools to generate the values to reflect the demands of the typical homebuyer.

A property inspection is a good vehicle for the homeowner to make sure the data used to generate their assessment is correct. Some data can be entered wrong or could be out of date. Inspections can work in the taxpayer's favor. The more data available for analysis, the more accurate the current market conditions can be reflected. Therefore influence that effect assessments are indicated.

Elsa Miller is chairman of the Board of Assessors.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats from Massachusetts held their annual issues convention earlier this month. Representing the South Shore, were, among others, Weymouth's Jim Cantwell (who ran for state senator against incumbent Republican Bob Hedlund) and Cohasset's Margy Charles and Dorothy Kelville.

No sticker, no RTF - Pay As You Throw to start

when cardboard goes where it's supposed to. Besides, starting July 1, if you put cardboard in your PAYT bag, it's going to take up a lot of precious space—that you'll be paying for. Wood scraps do not go here— that goes over in the demolition bin as you go out. [Why pay for wood scraps?] Brush does not go here. Watch/Ask for Brush Days. Household trash goes here. It's the stuff that cannot be recycled — paper napkins, plastic caps, incandescent light bulbs, celluloid packaging, chips bags, you get the idea. Garbage may go in the PAYT bag, but garbage may also be brought up to the RTF and disposed of here in the trash between times if you wish in clear plastic bread bags. Not bigger bags, not super market plastic bags full of garbage. No household trash in with the garbage, the stuff that should go in the PAYT bag. No charge for these clear bread bags.

Grass clippings [left on the grass provide nutrients for the grass] and leaves go next, in the compost area, where the completed 'black gold' product of last season is free for the taking, great stuff.

Next—demolition materials, last on your right as you leave.

Now: why the $20. charge for the second all-facilities sticker? What was a convenience has been spoiled for all of us by some unethical townspeople. The $20. fee is an attempt to put pressure on the dishonest minority. The selectmen and the Recycling Committee almost vetoed a second sticker altogether, because unfortunately some dishonest people have been letting out-of-towners use their second RTF sticker. Waste disposal is an expensive business, and as we know, there are criminal types amongst us, people who somehow can sleep at night while being unfair to the rest of us. Or I guess they sleep. Human life, based as it is on common decency, has a way of catching up with the indecent.

This is the place to state that the all-facilities sticker pays for less than half of the cost of trash [and paper and plastic] disposal. The rest of it comes out of our taxes. When out-of-towners dump here—and they have been—we pay their costs, out of our taxes — and lose money. Use proper channels and lobby for more help at the RTF. Talk to your friends. We're in this together. Help out by volunteering! Join the town Recycling Committee!

It's a great—common — cause! See you next time.

"We feel we can do it within that number," he said. "Most state projects haven't had such a comprehensive cost analysis done at the front end of the project."

He said people are quick to point out the skyrocketing costs of the Central Artery project, but insisted comparing the two projects is like comparing apples to oranges.

"With the Central Artery project, the whole scope of it had changed," said Carlisle. "That $408 million for Greenbush is not an internal number meant to sugarcoat the project; $408 million is a lot of money. But it's a worthwhile expenditure."

Carlisle, however, did say that the more the project is delayed, the greater chance its price tag could go up.

Work could start on the 17-mile track as early as next summer, in hopes of having it opened by 2005.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said the MBTA was given approval by the legislature to construct the rail via a "design-build" process that would essentially put the project on the fast track. The design-build process essentially allows the contractor to design the project as it builds it.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said he asked members of the House Committee on Transportation, and they had not been told of any anticipated price increases about Greenbush. However, he said "any state project within recent history has always come in above budget," and that it's another reason why the state should be looking at alternatives to the train.

Hedlund, speaking to Cohasset Selectmen Tuesday, criticized the Governor's Office for backing off an earlier pledge that $408 would be the most the state would spend on the project.

Representatives from the five Greenbush towns met with then-Gov. Paul Cellucci and Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan in September to discuss the merits of the project, and Cellucci said his original statement on the $408 ceiling was meant to mean that "the sky isn't the limit."

"I like to tell people that the cost of the project is now somewhere between $408 million and the sky," said Hedlund.

Hedlund said Wednesday that the "high end" was originally $120 million in 1995, and that the project has gone through five cost revisions.

"Given the fact we're not even at the 30 percent design phase, and haven't resolves some major mitigation issues, I don't think anyone believes they're going to able to do this for $408 million or even $420 million or $450 million."

Carlisle said the state won't abandon the project if it does go above $408 million, but it also won't "cannibalize" other state transportation projects.

"But the bottom line is the $408 is a reasonable figure, and I strongly believe we'll get it done," he said.

Officials to look at runway lawsuit

5,000 foot runway would be too short for new planes to use.

Massport spokesman Juves said allegations the runway is too short is "certainly not true," and characterized them as a desperate attempt to stop the project.

"Nothing we have heard from any aviation agency bears that out," he said. "And if no one can use it, then what's wrong?"

In general, Golden said, there were so many problems with the impact report that he thinks Massport "believed nobody would ever read it."

"If a private business had submitted something like this they would have been sued for deceptive practices," he said. "There are some very, very serious issues that arise from something like this."

Despite the objections of many communities to Runway 14/32, Durand approved the controversial proposal last week, thereby endorsing the 12-volume supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement that lists building the runway and other improvements as the "preferred alternative," despite acknowledging that the amount of delay hours would increase.

Golden, who was state senator from 1984 to 1990, and served with Durand in the Senate, is stunned that Durand, a self-described environmentalist, would approve such an impact report.

"The Bob Durand I knew wouldn't have signed this," he said.

Selectman Chairman Fred Koed called it a "total political decision."

Former Gov. Paul Cellucci and current Gov. Jane Swift strongly support the new runway. Durand and Massport head Virginia Buckingham were both appointed by Cellucci.

"The state should not be allowed to do this to its own people," said Selectman Michael Sullivan.

Golden said he hopes to join the 22 towns affected by airplane noise together and fight the faulty report. Selectmen named Golden a "special municipal employee" to allow him to negotiate on behalf of the town, and selected Sullivan and Koed as committee representatives.

The town will also attempt to gain an audience with Buckingham or Swift to express their concerns with the runway.

Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull joined together this spring in opposition to the runway proposal. Each community appropriated $30,000 at their respective Town Meetings to pay consulting and legal costs in the battle.

Hingham recently transferred an additional $10,000 from reserve funds to add to the anti-runway coffer.

A public rally on the front steps of the State House was planned to protest Durand's approval of the new runway as the Mariner went to press Wednesday.

The runway battle now shifts its location to the Federal Aviation Agency, which could approve the runway later this summer.

Staff writer Carol Britton Meyer also contributed to this report.

Haddad said Avalon Bay Properties could have first gone to the state to discuss the project before coming to the town.

"I commend them for coming to the town, and I thank them," he said.

Under the state's so-called "anti-snob zoning act," a comprehensive permit allows developers to skirt most local zoning and planning regulations, in exchange for setting aside 25 percent of the total units as affordable housing. The developer then only needs a permit from the town zoning board of appeals. Towns with little or no affordable housing are vulnerable to comprehensive permits.

Pratt, who said the issue of a residential development in the former Norfolk property currently zoned "technology business" was discussed publicly at the Planning Board meeting the week before, questioned what legal jurisdiction Haddad had to call such a meeting. Pratt said state law clearly vests the application process under Chapter 40B (the anti-snob zoning act) completely with the Zoning Board of Appeals and it's up to the zoning board to distribute the application to other boards and committees.

Pratt said the Planning Board the week before discussed the potential "tremendous loss" of a large tract commercially developable land in town if a project like Avalon's went through. The board discussed going to the state to "enumerate" the need to maintain commercial land in Cohasset, he said.

"It was obvious to me that Haddad did not want to discuss the merits of this (authority to call such a meeting) but just wanted to tell me who the boss is," Pratt said.

Pratt also claims Haddad "exploded" at his wife, Donna Pratt, reducing her to tears after she called to question an apparent lack of action over the school crossing guard issue last October. The Pratts lobbied selectmen to have the school crossing guard duties fall under the jurisdiction of the police department. Pratt said his wife did not "commit" the alleged altercation to writing at the time, but may now decide to do so. However, they did discuss the phone call with then Selectmen Chairman Tom Callahan, Pratt said.

Pratt said he is bringing this to the forefront because he "sees a pattern" and does not want "this to happen to another citizen."

Pratt also filed a public records request asking for Haddad's performance evaluations to see if there have been other complaints similar to his.

"This is not a pleasant circumstance, I do not want to do this," Pratt said. "But being treated like that is unacceptable and I insist it not happen to myself, my wife or anyone else."

Selectmen to investigate accusations

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Selectmen voted Tuesday to hire an independent consultant to investigate claims of abusive behavior between Town Manager Mark Haddad and Planning Board member Peter Pratt.

On the advice of Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, the board voted unanimously to hire a former state director of Personnel and Administration for $1,000 a day to investigate the complaints.

"I recommend the board not plunge into hearings, without a preliminary fact-finding," DeRensis said. "Simply because people make allegations isn't sufficient to plunge into full-blown hearings."

Because the consultant only has to interview four people about the incident — Pratt, Haddad, and the two selectmen's office secretaries who were witnesses — DeRensis said the investigation should only take one day.

Selectmen hope to have the results of the investigation in time for their July 10 meeting. At that time, the board will make a decision whether conduct a formal hearing on the matter.

The consultant's report will not be released to the public without a vote by selectmen to do so.

Pratt and Haddad can waive their right to have the hearing conducted in executive session.

The fact the issue has gone this far upset some members of the board.

"I'm appalled that this has become necessary," said Selectman Thomas Callahan.

Selectmen also voted to ask Pratt and Haddad to refrain from contact with one another until the investigation is complete.

Delays would go up, not down

LOGAN VIEW

MARY ANN FRYE

A listener who heard Attorney Bill Golden interviewed on David Brudnoy this week said to me that it was almost comic the way Brudnoy, bright as he is, could not shift the gears of his preconceptions fast enough to get that if runway 14/32 were built, delays would go UP, not down. Over and over in press releases and talks, Massport says a new runway would reduce delays. It is Massport head Virginia Buckingham's public trademark. And the opposite of what Massport's Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for runway 14/32 says in writing.

Bill Golden quoted from the executive summary of Massport's EIS, that if the runway were built, delays would go UP, not down. I am picturing a sort of nightmare image of State Environmental Secretary Bob Durand, Massport Director Virginia Buckingham, former governor Paul Celucci, and former EMI head Richard Egan in a conga line, shaking to this beat: Delays would go UP, not down. Delays would go UP, not down. Delays would go UP, not down.

If you support 14/32 because you've heard delays would go down, you have been misled. Massport says in the EIS that traffic would go up, and worse delays would occur than anything so far.

If you support 14/32 because you've heard delays would go down, you have been misled.

Delays would go UP, not down

Logan is sixth in the United States in delays now. Massport has claimed to the public that adding one 5,000 foot runway for strong NW wind conditions would reduce delays. Strong NW wind conditions occur for parts of about 10 days a year. If you fly a lot, what percentage of your flying was on those 10 bad days? Say you commute to New York four days a week, 384 flights a year, 192 days total a year. 192 is .526 of 365 days. Say you hit .526 of the 10 bad days - 5-1/4 days. If Massport were telling the truth that NW wind delays would be affected, that is 10-1/2 of your 384 flights or 3 percent where delays might be less. But the figures prepared by Massport's consultants to support 14/32 in the EIS say unequivocally that delays would go UP, not down. You would not even get your 3 percent.

Dozens of municipalities in Greater Boston are fighting 14/32, because it would add massive pollution. And massive congestion and delays. Mr. Brudnoy said, "This is a very big project. You can't say responsible people are going to line up and lie about it."

That is exactly what Mr. Golden, lead attorney for the South Shore Jet Pollution Council, is saying. He got it from the aviation experts who examined the EIS. Close your eyes. Remember what you think Massport has said to the public to sell 14/32, that it will reduce delays. Now picture that conga line, chanting what it says in Massport's EIS:

Delays would go UP, not down.

were going to open up as they had predicted, we moved the musical group into a tent and invited all the crafters into the main exhibition tent."

She said none of the artwork was damaged, however, one crafters tent collapsed under the weight of water collected on its top.

McKinney also said Saturday's oppressive heat did keep some people away, but still estimated the weekend attendance at upwards of 7,000.

"We got a lot of compliments about our crafters. People say every year for the past couple of years they have gotten better and better," she said.

In all, the festival featured 245 painting by young artists, and 120 in the members' show, as well as 80 different craft vendors.

"It really was wonderful, it had a sort of wonderful calm feel to it," she said. "People said it felt like a wonderful summer country arts festival."," said arts center spokesman Monica McKinney. "

Coalition lobbies for more state money for schools

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Cohasset is not alone in having to rely heavily on property taxes to pay for educating its schoolchildren. But the Suburban Coalition hopes to change that.

Jerry Wasserman, a Needham selectman and chairman of the lobbying group, said the coalition's focus this year is to establish a guaranteed minimal base of Chapter 70 money, which is state aid for schools.

The state House of Representatives recently tweaked the funding formula sending more money to urban areas at the expense of more than 100 suburban towns that saw their state aid numbers drop.. A subsequent amendment bumped the Chapter 70 aid back up to the level included in the governor's budget. But that did little to calm the coalition that was created a couple of years ago to make sure the interests of suburban towns were being fully represented in the State House. The group consists of boards of selectmen members from the region, as well as some school committee members.

Wasserman told selectmen last week the coalition is lobbying for the state to pick up at least 25 percent of a town's education costs.

If that was to happen, said Town Manager Mark Haddad, Cohasset could receive an additional $900,000 in state aid for the town's schools.

Wasserman also brought up House Speaker Thomas Finneran's proposal to raise the state sales tax by one cent as a way to fund education.

Selectman Merle Brown said if that happens, he hopes it's accompanied by a constitutional amendment that requires every dollar raised to be sent to the towns.

"They originally said that was what would happen with the lottery, but that's not the case," he said.

Cities and towns get a percentage of the money raised through the state lottery system.

Wasserman said the coalition will also target money for road and bridge repairs, also known as Chapter 90 money. He said members hope for a $150 million boost in funding in the next fiscal year.

"I think that's a battle we can win this year," he said.

All of Cohasset's road repair projects are funded solely through Chapter 90 money.

Wasserman said the group had a huge legislative breakfast planned this past April, however it was scrapped when then-Governor Paul Cellucci resigned on the same day. He hopes for a similar event in the fall with the gubernatorial candidates.

Work begins at Hagerty site

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The long-awaited improvements to the town-owned Hagerty property — the former site of the Cohasset Colonials furniture company – began Monday after eight years of planning and delay.

"It's not quite anti-climactic but I never thought it would actually happen," said Hagerty Property Committee Chairman Russ Bonetti. "I'm just glad to see it happen."

Workers for RAD Construction of Hingham have already torn out a concrete slab, and dug a trench for a future retaining wall bordering the 27-spot parking lot, and the wetlands.

"I'm encouraged by the amount of stuff they've gotten done in the first two days," Bonetti said.

Work is expected to take just over a month to finish. RAD Construction will also raise most of the parking lot 18 inches to avoid flooding during high tide, installing a new seawall, 100-foot pier and 65-foot dock, and build a wooden walkway from the property to Government Island.

Work is finally underway at the Hagerty property off Parker Avenue. Boat-haulers can turn around across Parker Avenue in the Cohasset Harbor Marina parking lot while construction is underway.

Use of the property will be prohibited during the week during construction, but will be open on the weekends. Boat haulers looking to launch boats on the Parker Avenue ramp are able to turnaround in the Cohasset Harbor Marina parking lot.

LIBRARY CORNER

Artist of the Month

An Irma Cerese landscape

Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the South Shore Art Center invite the community to a wonderful exhibition of "Intimate Landscapes" by North Easton Acrylic Artist, Irma Cerese.

Ms. Cerese works are a continuing exploration of places and seasons that reflect her pleasure in a specific activity of painting. She says in her artist statement: "I can respond in small increments to the light and color I see - there are no grand vistas here, only the familiar surroundings of my home in Easton."

Utilizing shape, color and texture, Ms. Cerese creates images that are representative without being realistic. "These paintings are about looking more than thinking, about the curiosity of process", states Ms. Cerese.

Ms. Cerese was educated at the American Academy of Art and the School of the Art Institute, both in Chicago, Ill. Some of her collections are an display at Chemical Bank, Citicorp and Conn. Bank Intl., all in New York City. She has had shows at the South Shore Art Center, Concord Art Association, and the Cape Cod Art Association. She was a past Blue Ribbon Members' Show at the South Shore Art Association.

Her art is on display until Tuesday, June 26. Everyone is invited to visit the library and enjoy these colorful landscapes.

Coming soon

Big Ryan, story teller, returns for a second performance on Friday, June 22, at 10 a.m.

Then, kick off summer with your kids by participating in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Summer Programs for Children. All programs, with the exception of July 9, will take place on Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m.

Join Betty Lehman on Tuesday, June 26, with her Little House Stories. Prairie refreshments will be served by the Cohasset Girl Scout Troop. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency, supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Score big

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library announces its reading program for children this summer. "Score Big with Books" is the sports-theme program for this year.

Children grades one and up can register at the library on Friday, June 22, and receive a "scorecard" on which to record their summer reading selections. Bring the scorecard back to the library and receive an official stamp worth points towards a free paperback when they reach their reading goal.

Help your kids maintain their reading skills during the summer months by visiting the library on a regular basis.

forum to "check in" with those who use World's End to gather information and any concerns they might have going forward.

"It's more of a refinement," explained Lisa Vernegaard, director of planning and ecology for the Trustees. "It's been 30 years since a plan was done and we've learned a lot about stewardship since then.

"It's OK to pause, update and incorporate new thinking in terms of setting forth our goals."

Concerns raised included the proliferation of poison ivy, the state of the old "ice pond" at Rocky Neck, lack of accessibility for the disabled, traffic on Martin's Lane that leads to World's End, use of herbicides to control unwanted plant growth, and any loosening of the requirement that dogs be on leashes at all times.

In the late 1800s, it became important to "reforest" and Brewer's vision to plant trees at World's End which had been "deforested" was in keeping with that philanthropic cause.

One of the attendees at the forum, Frank Mahoney, said the property is unique because of the vision of Brewer and the renowned landscape architect, Frederick Law Olmsted, who designed the tree-lined roadways for a 150-home subdivision there that never came to pass.

"If we let it go back to nature, it would lose all its principal character," he said.

Before the Trustees took over the property in 1967, the land was heavily farmed. Al Yalenezian, superintendent of World's End, said over the last five years, the rate of woodland intrusion into the fields has doubled.

Bob Hidell of Hingham, a member of the planning team, said World's End has been a "man-influenced landscape."

"How much should go back to its natural habitat?" Hidell said is one of the questions the team is wrestling with about the property that boasts 40 species of butterflies among its wildlife population.

Crowds are not a problem at World's End which is open to the public but charges a $4.50 entrance fee to those who are not members of the Trustees.

"One the busiest days where 400 people visit the park, visitors are still able to find peace and quiet," Vernegaard said. In addition to the miles of footpaths and causeways, vistas and wildlife – visitors report they feel safe at World's End, she said.

But an unexpected intruder into the "peace and quiet" of World's End, however, has nothing to do with land management and may be harder to control.

Mary Ann Frye of the South Shore Jet Pollution Council warned that the noisy jets that fly over World's End will quadruple if the new Logan runway is constructed and disturb the "peace and tranquility" so many seek there.

Noon noted Frye's comments and said the runway was a concern shared by a growing number of people.

Vernegaard said the next step in the plan is to tackle some of the issues raised at the forum. A draft plan will be ready in the fall.

"We've added a lot to our list and we will figure out a way to share the draft," she said.

One neighbor to World's End summed it up for the others.

"World's End is terrific," said Roberta Lincoln of Martin's Lane. "I've been there 22 years and I still look at it with admiration every time I go in."

The Trustees of Reservations, founded in 1891, is a member-supported non-profit conservation organization, which preserves exceptional properties such as World's End for public use and enjoyment. The Trustees is not an agency of the government and is supported through membership dues, contributions, grants, reservation receipts, special events and endowments. For more information, call the Trustees Southeast Regional Office, 781-821-2977.

United Nations was almost built there

While World's End strives to maintain the peace and quiet that its 60,000 annual visitors a year seek — over the past two centuries, the 251-acre park miraculously survived repeated attempts at development.

Back in the late 1800s, owner John R. Brewer hired landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted – who designed New York's Central Park and the Boston park system – to design the roads and landscaping for a 150-home subdivision that never came to pass.

And in 1945, the land was considered as a potential site for the United Nations when a committee appointed by then Gov. Maurice Tobin had the task of finding a location for the organization near Boston.

Hingham lost the opportunity to host the United Nations to New York but that did not keep it safe from the eyes of developers.

Two years before the Trustees of Reservations bought the property through an exceptional public-private fund-raising effort in 1967 — New England Electric and Boston Edison considered building a nuclear power plant there.

When the Trustees expressed an interest in purchasing the property – which lies between Hingham Bay and the Weir River — $450,000 was raised through public and private donations to subsidize the purchase so the peninsula could be maintained for public enjoyment.

Maritime Museum open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum located at Elm St., Cohasset Center, is open for its summer season. Open times are Tuesday through Sunday, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission, and donations are accepted. The museum itself is an old Ship Chandlery, or marine supply building, built in the 1700's by Samuel Bates and originally located at Cohasset Harbor. It is the sole remaining 18th century maritime-related building in near-original condition found in Cohasset today.

The Maritime Museum is devoted to preserving and presenting Cohasset's history as a seafaring community during the latter 1700's and the 1800's. During the "Age of Sail" the town's principal maritime occupations were fishing and shipbuilding and its maritime activity centered around its harbor, then known as "Ship Cove." Peak years for Cohasset's fishing industry were the mid-1800's, when family owned schooner fleets fished for mackerel in Canada's Gulf of St. Lawrence

The Maritime Museum preserves and presents that part of Cohasset's own history with ship models, carvings, dioramas, documents and pictures relating to the town's "Age of Sail".

Additionally the museum holds numerous unique exhibits on general historical subjects relating to Cohasset's early years. Currently the Museum's building is in process of being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. The Historical Society's telephone is 781-383-1434

Tobacco collaborative program director takes aim at smoking

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Don't be fooled by his soft voice and quiet demeanor.

The 44-year-old former Norfolk County deputy sheriff is stalking a deadly enemy and plans to use as much firepower in his repertoire as possible to get the message across.

Jim Wells — who is the new director of the 14-town South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program — wants to make smoking and second-hand smoke history.

"Nearly 450,000 people a year die of tobacco-related illnesses," the Abington resident says. "It is the Number One preventable cause of death in the world."

In one photograph on the wall of the collaborative's Hanover office — a father's eyes stare out from his emaciated body riddled with lung cancer as his young son sits at his side. Another picture depicts 31-year-old Pam Laffin, who shared her story in Massachusetts Tobacco Control advertisements and videos on the hazards of smoking. Laffin succumbed to emphysema last fall and left two young daughters.

"This is a battle," says Wells, who also owns Abbadessa's restaurant on Route 3A in Hingham. "People like Pam keep us going."

"We're not anti-smoker. We're anti-smoking."
— Jim Wells of the tobacco control program

Wells, who served as the D.A.R.E. officer for the past eight years in Holbrook through the Norfolk County Sheriff's office, is comfortable with the education part of his new post. D.A.R.E. is a nationally recognized curriculum about substance abuse and peer pressure geared toward middle school-age students.

Part of the collaborative's mission is to spread the word about the dangers of smoking and second-hand smoke through school and youth programs and other activities.

And it's no secret most smokers start young, says Wells, the father of three. Tobacco company advertisements target the 16- 22-year-old bracket and if "they're hooked by 19, they figure they've got them for life," he says.

Statistics seems to back up Wells' claims. Ninety-four percent of those who try to quit smoking fail after one year. The collaborative tries to help smokers kick the habit by referring them to cessation programs.

"We're not anti-smoker," he says. "We're anti-smoking."

Another part of the collaborative's activities dovetails nicely with Wells' experience in law enforcement.

The collaborative conducts quarterly compliance checks on local merchants through "tobacco stings." The collaborative hires 14- and 15-year-olds to try and buy tobacco products. If they succeed, the local board of health conducts a disciplinary hearing that usually results in fining the establishment. In Massachusetts, it is illegal to sell tobacco to someone under 18.

During a recent compliance check, for example, none of the 14 tobacco license holders in Norwell sold to a juvenile while 13 out of the 26 establishments in Rockland did, Wells said.

"That means if they're selling to us, how many other kids walk through the door and buy cigarettes?"

Smokers aren't only putting themselves at risk, but those who are exposed to their cigarette smoke.

"Our principal mission is people's health and protecting workers, customers and children," Wells says.

He also said exposure to second-hand smoke is a major health issue and kills an estimated 53,000 people nationally a year.

Wells says he understands restaurant owners' concerns about losing business if smoking is prohibited.

Jim Wells, a former DARE officer, stands in front of a sign in his office showing how silly smoking looks. Wells recently took over the helm as director of the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program.

"As a restaurant owner, I've been there," he said. "But in a town (Hingham) that went 100 percent smoke free — new restaurants are opening up and old ones are thriving."

Wells claims there is no ventilation system sophisticated enough to completely remove gases created by second-hand smoke. That knowledge is prompting the town of Braintree — where there are numerous large restaurants — to consider eliminating variances and go smoke free.

Ten towns in the collaborative have adopted some smoke-free regulations. Of those Hingham and Duxbury are smoke-free, while others, such as Cohasset and Braintree, allow variances with strict standards. Only four towns — Abington, Rockland, Hanover and Kingston — go by the less restrictive state regulations that stipulate 25 percent of the area be set-aside for non-smokers. The collaborative will be lobbying hard to get those four towns to enact tougher smoking laws, Wells said.

In his role as collaborative director, Wells also testifies on Beacon Hill to encourage the legislature to pass tougher smoking laws at the state level. One such bill would double the tax on a pack of cigarettes from 25 cents to 50 cents. Another would make all work sites, restaurants and bars in the Commonwealth smoke free.

The collaborative, formed in 1994, has a total staff of six full and part-timers, including Wells, three health educators, an administrative assistant and enforcement officer. The program is funded by member towns through their share of the 25-cent state tobacco tax on each pack of cigarettes.

The South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program includes member towns, Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland and Scituate. For more about the program, call 781-829-4301 or check out the website www.smokefreenews.com.

Cohasset regulates smoking

Cohasset restaurants are 100 percent smoke-free meaning no area is designated as a "smoking" section and smoking is not permitted.

The Board of Health has issued a total of three variances, for a five year period, all to bar areas, for Atlantica, The Red Lion Inn and KoKo Island, chairman Stephen Bobo said. Those establishments must have a separate ventilation system for their bars and negative pressure in the bar so any air flows into the bar area and not the other way around. The establishments must also provide evidence of a maintenance contract showing that the ventilation system is being maintained, he said.

Cohasset Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said smoking is prohibited in all municipal buildings and vehicles. The town also restricts smoking in private work sites unless there is a private office where the public does not enter, he said. Businesses are allowed to have a smoking lounge, but if they do, must provide a lounge of the same size for non-smokers.

The town also limits youth access to tobacco products by requiring permits for tobacco sales; prohibiting sales to those under 18; banning vending machines and self-service displays; and penalizing violators with fines and/or suspension of tobacco sales permit.

Smoke-free poster winners named

The fourth-grade students at the Deer Hill School recently participated in a poster contest sponsored by the South Shore Boards of Health, Tobacco Control Program. The students worked on their posters as part of their health education classes taught by Jane Gregory. This year's theme was "Smoke Free — It Matters to Me." The finished posters were displayed at the South Shore Community Center in order to commemorate "World No Tobacco Day" on May 31.

The winners of the contest were announced at the school two weeks ago. They received award ribbons, T-shirts and their posters will be part of next year's anti-tobacco calendar. Carly Zappolo came in first place, Michael Froio won second place and Kelsey Coughlin was the third-prize winner.

A panel of volunteer judges reviewed the posters and selected the winners. The calendar is sponsored by the Plymouth County District Attorney's Office and the local DARE and SAFE offices. All winning posters will be displayed on the collaborative's web site at www.smokefreenews.com.

South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program works with schools, families and communities to make breathing easier for everyone on the South shore.

Art festival has it all!

Bonnie Brewer peruses work in the art tent including a "Dancing Nude" by Chris Harvey in the members' show. The three-day annual Festival on the Common drew thousands despite two days of heat and a tropical storm Sunday afternoon.

Janette Harrington carries her daughter Jackie away from the food booths at the festival. Two days of scorching heat followed by the remnants of tropical storm Allison on the third day didn't keep thousands from visiting the common for Cohasset's signature event.

All out of miracles

C.H.S boys lacrosse team falls to Hingham in state finals

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

For a few brief moments, it appeared to the Cohasset faithful that "their boys" might have one more miracle in them — this after Curt Kahn put home a rebound to pull the Skippers within four goals at 7-3 with six minutes left in the third quarter.

This tally by the sophomore forward seemed to energize the Skippers who had been, up until that point in the Div. 2 championship boys lacrosse game last Wednesday, pretty much pushed around by the top-seeded Hingham Harbormen.

Hingham 9

In the ensuing minutes, Cohasset pushed deep for a handful of quality assaults on the Hingham net. However, the Harbormen's sophomore goalie, Nate Hammond (10 saves), proved equal to all salvos in his vicinity and his defenders took care of the rest with some excellent body and stick play.

As time wound down in the fourth quarter, the Skippers grew increasingly desperate as they struggled in vain to put another one past Hammond. Their waning hopes were dashed for good when Hingham captain Steve Skinner bounced a bullet from 35 yards out past Cohasset goalie Kyle Weber (10 saves) with 4:22 remaining.

Patrick Lenhart would wrap up the scoring when he picked up a loose ball off a scramble in front of the Cohasset goal with just under three minutes to go and fired it home to bring the scoring to a close at 9-3, putting the exclamation mark on Hingham's first Div. 2 state title in the 29-year history of the lacrosse program.

"We gave it all we had, but in the end the better team won," conceded Kevin Orcutt, Cohasset's first-year coach, graciously. "They just did a great job on us defensively, and I thought that was the key to the game. They just didn't let us get off the kind of shots we've been getting in other games."

With the loss, Cohasset claimed the MIAA finalist trophy for the first time in the history of the Cohasset lacrosse program, a record-setting season that included the most victories (15) and most goals scored (243) by the Skippers.

"I'm proud of each and every one of you," Coach Orcutt told 22 spent players gathered in the far corner of the field 10 minutes after the final horn, as Hingham players and fans posed for pictures and danced on the turf. "You accomplished more than anyone expected, you gave more than anyone thought you had to give, and you brought respect to yourselves and your school. You walk away from here with your heads held high."

Of course, Cohasset, seeded 7th in the Div. 2 bracket, was not expected by many to make it to this point. The Skippers opened the tourney with lopsided wins over Catholic Memorial and Ashland — 15-3 and

Cardinals win 'instant classic' series

The Cohasset Little League semifinal playoffs opened with an epic struggle between the Cardinals and the Dodgers on June 13th and 15th. The Cardinals won the best two out of three series in two straight, but the Dodgers, led by Jared Kinch, made them earn it the hard way.

Kinch made Cohasset Little League history in the second game when he hit four home runs out of Barnes Field in four at bats. Kinch had also homered in his last at bat in game one.

Cardinals 4 - Dodgers 3

The first game was a classic pitchers duel between the Cardinals' Tim Smith and the Dodgers' Kinch. The Dodgers struck in the first inning on a bunt single by Chris Rose, a stolen base and an RBI single by Nick Zappolo.

The Cardinals answered in the second inning. After a single by Smith, Alex Hunt laid down a beautiful sacrifice bunt. Smith moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. After Josh Lambert and Mark Flibotte walked, the Cardinals pulled off a fake bunt/double steal with Nick Simonds at the plate. When the throw to third got away, Lambert scored the go-ahead run.

The Dodgers tied the game in the fourth on another single by Zappolo but the Cards went ahead to stay with two in the bottom half of the inning. After Smith and Hunt had singled, Gabriella Flibotte bunted perfectly down the third base line for a hit. When the throw sailed into right

Sailing club honors Roger Porter

The executive committee of the Cohasset Swing Club (CSC) voted this week to name a new match racing series in memory of longtime member and former vice commodore, Roger Porter, who passed away this month.

The Roger Porter Match Racing Cup will be held July 8; 10, 12, 15 and 22. According to former commodore and chief organizer of the event, Chuck Peterson, two boats at a time will duel each other in an elimination series.

The executive committee wanted to commemorate the many contributions Porter made to the club over his lifetime.

Said Vice Commodore Sandy Crough, "Roger did a fine job as vice commodore. He was greatly respected and we will greatly miss him."

Several years ago, Porter generously donated a "Flying Scot," a sailboat which continues to receive heavy usage by club members. More recently, Porter entered the intergenerational Sunday racing series ("the Stanton Cup") with his 11-year-old grandson, Nathan

According to CSC Commodore Bob Deutsch, "We wanted to establish a meaningful event in Roger's memory. You couldn't miss seeing Roger and Nate. They were frequently in front of everyone else rounding the buoys. Nate will continue Roger's winning ways."

Both inexperienced and veteran CSC members are encouraged to participate in this cup. Eight slots remain available. Boats will be assigned on a first-come basis. Call Vice Commodore Bob Cunningham for more details at 781-383-1710.

Thayer Academy tennis star yearns to climb USTA ladder

By Lou Molinari

Sixteen-year-old Dennis Reardon of Cohasset is planning on making some big tennis moves over the next several weeks.

The moves we're talking about here do not concern actual tennis playing moves but rather moves in the ranking of tennis players.

Wednesday, the Milton Academy junior-to-be left for New Haven, Connecticut for a five day visit to Yale University, where he will be looking to move from number 10 to number one in the New England rankings for tennis players 16 and under.

To be more specific, Dennis will be competing in the United States Tennis Association Sectional Championships for individual

Ronan Buick stands tall

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Slashing his way through double and triple teams all season, Cohasset High lacrosse superstar senior Ronan Buick stands taller than almost everyone on the field.

But his physical height is no comparison to the stand-up guy he is off the field.

"He is highly respected," said Buick's first year coach, Kevin Orcutt. "Not just by the younger players, but by the other seniors as well."

Although Buick missed four games due to an arm injury, he still led the Skippers in scoring for the second consecutive year, amassing over 90 points.

Always regarded as a true hustler, Buick managed to score from both outside and from bizarre angles after being taken out by opposing defenses.

"He has got a great outside shot," lauded Orcutt. "But at least nine or ten of his goals he scored from the ground. It is definitely his toughness."

Two of his "ground goals" were scored in the Semi-Finals of the state tournament, in the 12-11 quadruple overtime win over Ipswich.

Orcutt attributes much of Buick's success to his toughness, connected to his fantastic work ethic, one emulated by many of his teammates.

"He is just a great worker," continued his coach. "He is very determined to do well."

And done well he has, playing an absolutely vital role to his team all year. There was no better demonstration of this than when he went down with the injury.

In the four games Buick missed, his team ended up with two of its five regular season losses, including a 13-9 disappointment to Marshfield. In fact, many are all but certain Buick's presence would have dramatically altered the outcome of that game.

Buick will head to Providence College to play lacrosse after being recruited by them all year.

"He'll do well there," predicted Orcutt, who himself played college lacrosse at Merrimack College.

Buick is a talented athlete in not just lacrosse, but in football as well. He was a South Shore League All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic Team linebacker for the Skippers last fall, leading the team in tackles, averaging almost 10 per game.

Coastal Youth Soccer League success

The games to determine the teams to represent the Coastal Youth Soccer League (CYSL) in the state playoffs for the Cohasset Soccer Club may have been in Duxbury, but the road certainly went through Marshfield with four of the five championship games played between these two powerhouses. The CYSL consists of 15 South Shore communities.

When the CYSL championship series was completed on Monday, the Cohasset Soccer Club teams had capped an extraordinary season, taking home championship trophies in four categories plus reaching the championship game level in another category. Cohasset's under-12 girls' team, coached by Joe Coggins and Steve Daly played Marshfield to a zero-zero tie through regulation and two overtimes, winning by a 3-3 goal result in a shoot-out. Cohasset's under-12 boys' team, coached by Andy Normal and Dee Davis, had a similar success beating Marshfield in an overtime shoot-out, again by a 3-2 goal advantage.

The under-14 boys' team, coached by David Buick and Joe Busk, also claimed their division championship with a 4-0 win over Marshfield. In addition, Cohasset's under-16 boys' team, coached by Paul Cotter, completed an undefeated season with a fantastic record of 10-0 with a strong win over Norwell in the playoffs. Finally, the under-14 girls' team, coached by John Englander, reached the championship round in an extremely competitive grouping but lost a hard-fought game to Marshfield by a score of 2-0.

As a result of winning their championships, each team will be heading to Amherst this coming weekend to represent Cohasset and the South Shore in the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions. As you see these championship athletes around town this week, offer your congratulations and wish them well as they move to this year's State Tournament of Champions.

field, two runs scored and Flibotte sped all the way to third. Tim Smith was dominant on the mound for the Cardinals, striking out thirteen for the game. Kinch's towering home run blast in the sixth brought the Dodgers to within one but Smith got the next hitter to pop to short to end the game.

Cardinals 11 - Dodgers 10

People will be talking about this Little League game for some time to come. The two teams hit seven home runs, including two grand slams.

The Cardinals drew first blood, scoring two in the first. Michael Grimm walked, stole second and scored on a single by Ben Libby. Tim Smith singled and Connor Holway followed with an RBI single to left.

The Dodgers responded immediately on a two-run homer off the bat of Jared Kinch deep into the trees in right center field.

In the second, with one out, the Dodgers got consecutive singles from Cliff Musto and Kyle DeSisto. After a walk to Danny Martin, Chris Rose singled home a run. One strikeout later Kinch came to the plate again, this time with the bases loaded. He did not disappoint, drilling the ball well over the left-center field fence for a grand slam and 7-2 Dodger lead.

The Cards pushed across a run in the third on singles by Ben Libby, Justin Hollis and Josh Lambert, and then jumped back into the game in the fourth. Michael Grimm walked, Libby singled and Tim Smith delivered some fireworks of his own with a three run blast out of Barnes in the direction of the town pool.

Michael Grimm came in to pitch for the Cardinals in the bottom half of the inning. After a quick strikeout, Kinch strode to the plate and delivered another blast into the night. Grimm struck out the next two to keep the game close.

Kevin Lewis led off the Cardinal fifth with a double down the right field line. Grimm and Alex Hunt followed with singles, producing a run. After Ben Libby bunted for a base hit, loading the bases, Tim Smith came to the plate.

Down in the count two strikes, Smith turned on a fast ball, driving it out of Barnes for his second homer of the night, a grand slam and an 11 -8 Cardinal lead.

The Dodgers would not quit. Kinch led off the bottom of the sixth with his record fourth home run of the game, this one to center. After a conference at the mound, Nick Zappolo hit the next pitch out of Barnes to bring the Dodgers to within one. In a very gutsy pitching performance, Michael Grimm shook off the long balls and set down the next three Dodgers to get the win in relief.

The Cardinals face the Rangers in the best two out of three championship series starting this week.

rankings in New England.

A total of 30 players will be competing in the 16 and under division.

Should Dennis finish among the top 14, the next stop is a trip to St. Louis in mid-July to compete in the Zonals, which leads to national rankings.

Young Mr. Reardon, who looks and sounds like he could be running a board meeting at one of the top 50 companies in New England, has a theory about the Yale tournament. While the saying is not new, it does say it all.

"Anyone there can beat anyone else. I feel very confident going into the tourney," declared Dennis.

Each participant plays one match a day over the five day tournament.

An All-Star in the Independent School League, Reardon played fourth singles on the Milton Academy tennis team, where he was undefeated with a 28-0 record.

His Milton Academy team also won the New England's this year.

Reardon, who plays at the Weymouth Tennis Club, has entered the USTA Sectionals since he was 12. His rankings got up as high as nine before slipping back to 10.

While he isn't coming right out and saying such, Dennis sounds like a person who has number one on his mind.

"It's always nice to make the trip to Yale," he said. "I get to meet a lot of old friends. Since this is my last year competing in 16 and under, I really want to do well."

One person who will certainly be rooting for Dennis is his older sister Emily, who taught him the game.

Emily, a former top player at Thayer Academy, was also the number one player on her Fairfield University team.

"She taught me the game," said Dennis. "She was very patient with me and took a lot of time teaching me the sport."

Obviously, another reason Dennis had that number one figure on his mind as he prepared to leave on the trip.

While this trip is about Dennis and only Dennis, he wanted to make sure his teammates at Milton Academy also got some recognition.

"I played on a great team. There are a lot of talented players on that team and they all deserve a lot of credit. The team comes first with me."

Cohasset laxers run out of miracles

18-5, respectively — and then knocked off defending state champ and second-seeded Milton, 10-8, in a quarterfinals thriller. The "piece de resistance", however, came in the semi-finals against Ipswich when the boys stormed back from a six-goal deficit in the final eight minutes to tie the game at 11-11 and send it to overtime. Robert Hickey won it for Cohasset in the fourth OT period.

"Cohasset had an unbelievable run in the tournament," noted Hingham coach John Todd as his team was still celebrating Wednesday's championship win. "They peaked at the right time and they believed in themselves. Watching them play and not giving up against Ipswich when they were down by six goals, we knew that we were going to play the full 48 minutes of lacrosse (today)."

While Cohasset's journey to the finals had been thrilling, to say the least, the Harbormen's run was marked by sheer dominance, as indicated by the 35-9 scoring margin they compiled on their road to glory.

This included the quick spirit-shaking 4-0 lead they posted on the Skippers Wednesday.

Connor Fitzgerald curled around the Cohasset defense to put Hingham on top four minutes after the opening faceoff. A little more than two minutes later, Lenhart doubled the bulge, finishing off a 4-on-2 break on a nice feed from Ben Prime.

With just 24 seconds remaining in the first period, Thayer Academy transfer Hardy Allen delivered a back-breaker from 25 yards out when he bounced a shot past Weber to make it 3-0.

Sophomore Greg Paul extended the lead to 4-0 just over a minute into the second frame on a nifty pass as he crossed into the middle from Matt Connelly .

Cohasset finally got on the board with just 4:06 remaining to the break when Jason Moore scooped up a loose ball near the Hingham net off of a scramble and beat Hammond down low.

The Skippers drew a penalty late in the quarter, but were unable to capitalize. Their best opportunity came on a point- blank shot from Moore that Hammond was somehow able to block and control. The quick thinking netminder then outletted to a middie upfield to start a fast break that was finished on a beautiful one-on-one move by Connor Fitzgerald.

The Skippers were still probably reeling from that dramatic turnabout when Hingham's Sean Melanson won the ensuing faceoff over to Fitzgerald who made a nice rush and an even nicer feed across the crease to Lenhart on the doorstep for an easy re-direct past the helpless Weber.

Steve Skinner scored two minutes into the second half to give Hingham a 7-2 lead, but the Harbormen had to then weather Cohasset's best run of the game, with Hammond stopping three one-on-the goalie situations in the late third and early fourth quarters.

"Nate had his best game of the season today," raved Todd. "He really came up big when it looked like Cohasset might make a real run at us."

Hammond, who faced only 13 shots on net, was quick to cast a bit of the spotlight in the direction of his backline mates.

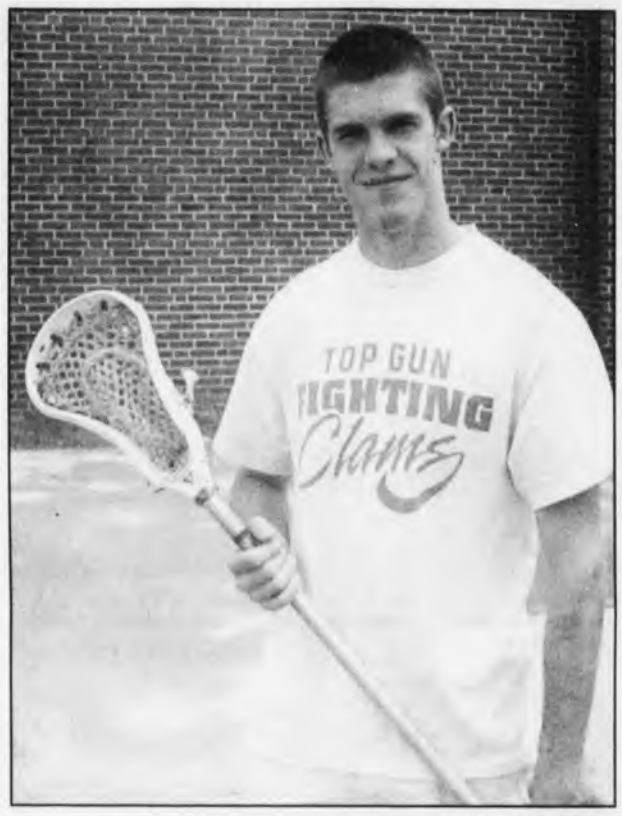
"My defense was awesome," said Hammond following the game. "I was seeing the ball really well and I was watching the ball real well."

With Cohasset missing its leading goal scorer — junior Paul Previte (53 tallies on the season), who was injured in the Ipswich game — Hingham's defense seemed to focus on stopping the team's overall leading scorer, Ronan Buick (49 goals, 37 assists-86 points). It seemed every time the senior captain tried to move to the net with his assortment of power/finesse moves, there were at least two Harbormen there to body him off aggressively. Frustrated, Buick was forced to take several shots from outside his normal comfort range, several of which sailed just wide of the net. He wound up pointless for the game, the first time this season that's happened.

"I'm just really disappointed in everything," said Buick as he headed off the field following the loss, clearly not in the mood to entertain questions. "We just never got in a rhythm. I guess you've got to give Hingham some of the credit for that, though. They played us great."

Coach Orcutt refuted the notion that the Harbormen did anything special to stop Buick, offering the observation that it was their adherence to a good game plan, hard work and better overall depth that made the difference on this oppressively warm day.

"That's just a well coached and talented team that did the things against us that they've been doing all along," said Orcutt. "They had a lot of talented bodies to throw at us, and I think they just wore us down. I give our guys a lot of credit, though, for the way they refused to pack it in."



The Skippers actually started the game with a few nice prolonged holds in their offensive end, but the Hingham defenders set the tone by allowing just one shot to reach Hammond.

"That stretch at the beginning of the game was tough because we were trying to settle into the game," said Todd. "What made me happy was that they did not get anything."

The game marked the final appearance in the blue and white for seniors Buick, Geoff McWilliams, Lane Forrer, Justin Langham and Greg Figureido. The good news was that 18 lettermen return for the 2002 season, among them three All-Conference selections.

"We surprised a lot of people, including ourselves, this year," said Orcutt. "Next year, this is what we'll expect of ourselves."

Cohasset boys assistant lacrosse assistant coach Terry Kahn contributed to this report.

But what is perhaps even more amazing than his outstanding athleticism, is his modesty. He is able to be the general of the team without the benefit of a commanding voice, or a showy personality. He simply goes through practices, and lets the others see and attempt to imitate.

"He is not really loud," affirmed the coach. "His leading aspect is his humility."

Anyone who witnessed the season-ending State Finals contest in Hingham knows what Orcutt means. The Harbormen blanketed Ronan from end to end, often times not even watching the ball, but instead focusing on the senior captain midfielder.

But not needing to take the glory for himself, Buick selflessly passed off to his offensive teammates, even though they too were stifled by the Hingham defense more often than not.

"He was trying to learn when to dish it off," explained Orcutt, of Buick's relatively new skill, honed in response to opponent's increasing their focus on him this season.

He led the lacrosse team to its 15-6 record, which would have been 16-5 without their forfeit to Catholic Memorial, and even better than that if not for the Buick injury.

Now Buick heads off to college where he may end up just another fish in a much larger pond. Folks from Cohasset know, however, that he will continue to stand tall regardless of how he does on the lacrosse fields.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Peter Collins visits second-graders

Peter Collins, a graduate of Cohasset High School and Mass. Maritime Academy, recently completed a "Dive and Discover" expedition to the Indian Ocean. The 40-day long voyage to explore hydrothermal vents at the mid-ocean ridge in the central Indian Ocean was followed by two-second grade classes at the Joseph Osgood School via the Internet. Collins visited the students to answer their questions about the expedition. The following are two summaries written by the students:

For the past two months Miss DeLeo's and Mrs. Collins' second-grade classes tracked Mrs. Collins' son, Peter. Peter and 56 other crewmembers went out in the Indian Ocean on a ship called the Knorr. Each day Mrs. Collins' and Miss DeLeo's classes read each daily update. The crew's mission was to find if there was life in the Indian Ocean. On one of the days during the expedition, they lost their elevator! But just in case that happened they brought other parts for a new elevator. One of the days two 6-foot sharks were spotted! Luckily the sharks did not do anything. Most of the scientists worked day and night. The ROV Jason is like a big robot. It looked down in the sea like a computer. Our two classes did a lot of computer work. The ship members did a ton of research. Four kids from each class looked up facts on sea creatures. The Joseph Osgood hall is full with research on "Dive and Discover." Those are some of the facts from the expedition.

Peter Collins poses with Miss DeLeo's class.

Tracked a ship for 31 days

By Mike Monaco

Miss DeLeo's and Mrs. Collins' classes tracked a ship called the Knorr for 31 days. They went to the Central Indian Ridge in the Indian Ocean. They went down there to find life near hydrothermal vents. Hydrothermal vents are hot, big chimneys with very, very hot smoke coming out of them. The scientists found bacteria and vent shrimp living here.

We read the daily updates and put them in our "Dive and Discover" folders. We made our folders out of purple paper. They held all of the things we did with "Dive and Discover," such as crossword puzzles and daily updates. The scientists and tech crew had a remotely operated vehicle (ROV) Jason on the Knorr. They used it to bring samples onto the elevator and then onto the Knorr.

Web site is about the ocean

By Claire Pozniak

"Dive and Discover" is a web site about all the expeditions the Knorr and the (ROV) Jason went on. It has lots of other information too! Some of the information is about plates, the earth's crust and about ocean temperatures. It tells about fish that live in the ocean. Once even on the expedition they saw a shark!

On the ship, the crew ate lots of huge boxes of Oreo cookies. They also ate a lot of other stuff. You could see what the crew ate each day by logging on the daily menu. That is what we did with "Dive and Discover"!

D.A.'S office talks law at Cohasset Middle School

Approximately 90 Cohasset Middle School seventh- and eighth-graders learned more about the Massachusetts juvenile justice system, and the potential consequences of certain types of conduct, when the Office of Norfolk District Attorney William R. Keating offered a recent panel presentation designed to help students make more informed decisions.

Participating in Keating's "Responsible Decisions Seminar" were Detective

Richard Grassie and Officer Chris Tarantino of the Cohasset Police Department, Asst. Chief Probation Officer Paul Keefe of the Norfolk Juvenile Probation Department, and staff members from the D.A.'s Juvenile Unit.

Using fictitious multi-media fact pattern scenarios, panel members explained their respective roles in the criminal justice process, how commonplace situations can have legal implications, and the importance of sound decisions before, during and after problems arise. Topics included internet safety, bullying, harassment, assault and battery, and alcohol. Questions were fielded from students throughout the presentations.

The D.A.'s Office commended the Cohasset School System and the Cohasset Police Department for their proactive school safety efforts, and thanked faculty members Maureen Duffy and Dr. Michael Gill for their support of these types of educational programs.

Cause of harbor fuel spill sought

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

State and local officials are unsure what caused a large fuel oil spill that covered more than four acres of the harbor Friday and caused people to become nauseous from the fumes.

Cohasset Fire Capt. Mark Trask said five gallons of fuel oil, suspected to be diesel fuel, spread out across the harbor's waters, thanks to a brisk breeze.

Harbormaster John Winters called the fire department early Friday afternoon to say a number of people were complaining of eye irritation and nausea from gas fumes on the water.

"Where it had originated from had stopped by the time we got there," said Trask. "There could be many, many sources, we just couldn't localize it."

Seven members of the town's water response team, and 14 people from the United States Coast Guard worked to contain the spill.

Trask said because of the warm temperatures and wind, a good deal of it evaporated in the afternoon heat. However, a slick had formed over by the Cohasset Yacht Club. The town, with the assistance of the Coast Guard, surrounded the spill with eight-foot long, cigar-shaped booms that helped absorb the oil.

A federal clean-up crew remained on-site through Tuesday when the last of the spill was cleaned up.

The spill remains under investigation by the Coast Guard.

POLICE BRIEFS

3A/King accident

A 66-year-old Weymouth woman was transported to Quincy Medical Center following a two-car accident Sunday evening, police said.

Police cited Gerald G. Ernstein Jr., 58, of Brockton with failure to grant the right-of-way after he pulled out from Lower King Street onto Route 3A at about 6:30 p.m. in front of the northbound car driven by Brenda D. Dunker.

Dunker, whose condition was not immediately available, was cited for having an expired inspection sticker, police said.

Bridge jumpers

Police arrested two 15-year-old juveniles from out of town Friday for jumping off the Border Street bridge.

Apparently groups of up to 50 unruly teens from Brockton, Quincy, Abington and Rockland have been congregating at the bridge on hot afternoons and creating a nuisance by not allowing traffic to pass.

Police explained that Cohasset teenagers know the rules and disperse when told, but these teenagers refused to leave. Police also found that one of the teens allegedly had a bottle of Capt. Morgan Rum in his possession.

Both teens were charged with willful violation of the town by-law (prohibiting jumping from the bridge) and disorderly conduct. One was also charged with liquor law violations.

Marijuana plant

Police said two older women brought a marijuana plant into the police station Sunday night. They apparently found the plant, which still had its roots attached, on the sidewalk in front of Village Wine and Spirits.

OBITUARIES

Edward J. Maree

Edward J. Maree, a former, longtime resident of Cohasset, died June 16, 2001 at Quincy Medical Center after a long illness.

He was a meteorologist at Logan International Airport for 10 years before retiring in 1991.

An engineering graduate of Northeastern University, he was trained by the Air Force in meteorology during World War II. He left the service with the rank of captain.

He was a member of the Blue Hills observatory Meteorological Society and the Pembroke Recycling Committee.

Mr. Maree enjoyed stamp collecting, golfing, gardening and snowmobiling, a sport he took up when he was 60 and continued until last year.

Born and raised in Cohasset, he graduated from Cohasset High School in 1938 and from Northeastern in 1943. He lived in Valley Stream, N.Y. for 25 years before moving to Pembroke 15 years ago.

Mr. Maree leaves his wife of 58 years, Mary E. (Figueiredo) Maree; his son, Dr. Terence E. Maree of Norwell; his daughter Linda A. Maree of Brockton; a sister, Jessie Moorehead of Sonoma, Calif; and two granddaughters.

A funeral service was held at St. Luke Episcopal Church in Scituate. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery. Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Memorial donations to a scholarship in Mr. Maree's name may be made to St. Luke's Episcopal Church, P.O. Box 291, Scituate 02066.

Lyn M. Baxter

Assistant Town Clerk of Hingham

Lyn M. (Gordon) Baxter, 54, of Hingham died June 18, 2001 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a long illness.

Born in Weymouth, Mrs. Baxter spent most of her life in Hingham where she graduated from Hingham High School. She also attended Salve Regina in Newport, R.I. where she received her certification of the office of town clerk. In addition to her duties as the Assistant Town Clerk in Hingham, she was also a Justice of the Peace and performed many marriages in the South Shore area.

She was a member of the Town Clerk's Association and had been active in establishing a Hingham Veterans War Memorial Park which is an ongoing project on the grounds of the town hall.

After leaving Hingham, Mrs. Baxter was a resident of Hanover for five years before moving to Cohasset three years ago.

Mrs. Baxter leaves her husband, Paul B. Baxter of Cohasset and her two sons, Johnathan E. Gordon of Cohasset and Scott D. Gordon of Holbrook; her sister Pauline V. Emilson of Marshfield, a brother, John S. Gordon of Rockland and the late Edward L. Gordon; she also leaves her grandchild, Kaileigh A. Gordon of Holbrook.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated on Friday, June 22 at 10 a.m. at St. Paul's Church in Hingham Square. Interment will be in the High Street Cemetery, Hingham. Arrangements were made by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in her memory to the Hingham Veterans War Memorial Park, c/o The Town Clerk, 210 Central St., Hingham 02043.

Road trip tales inspire zany new children's book

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

A calculator named Nanook. Arguments about chickens and eggs. Grouchy grandparents armed with "fart rays—" these are some of the creative elements in a new children's book by Marshfield resident Steve Beck.

The book, Beck's first, is "The Hotel Bradbury" and at its center is a 12-year-old boy named Joe who takes a bizarre new job at a fictional hotel in Green Harbor.

"As (Joe) goes along at his job, he starts meeting some very unusual people and eventually, he finds out that most of the people he has been working with are all extraterrestrials," Beck said. Another strange aspect of the hotel in the book is that most of the people who work there are named Al, Beck noted.

Beck said his book targets the age 9-14 bracket, but he said kids who pick up the book shouldn't be expecting any kind of moral lessons.

"I had that in mind when I first started writing it," Beck said. "I just wanted to write a funny story with as little violence as possible."

Marshfield author Steve Beck

Beck said he had a great response at a book signing two weeks ago at Once Upon A Time in Marshfield which he referred to as "a rousing success."

But Beck's work is far from done.

"The Hotel Bradbury" is only the first book in a series of three.

The follow up to "Bradbury" will be "The Search For the Chubby Chefs," and the third book will be titled "Hotel Bradbury 3: A Fridge in Time." There is no official publishing date for either book as of yet.

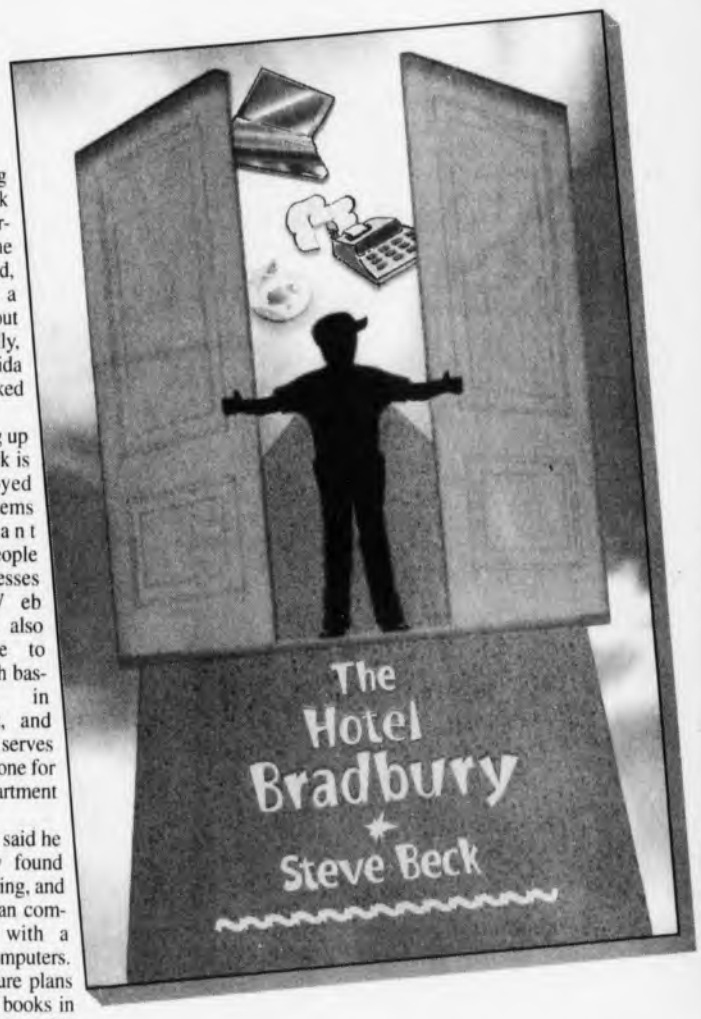
After reading "The Hotel Bradbury," some people may find themselves wondering where Beck gets all of his zany ideas. Beck said much of his inspiration stemmed from long road trips with his wife and two children.

"My family lives in Pennsylvania and my wife's family lives in New Jersey," he said.

"So we go on lots of car rides where we all invent stories and running gags to try to make each other laugh. 'The Hotel Bradbury' basically started as one of those short stories."

We go on lots of car rides where we all invent stories and running gags to try to make each other laugh. 'The Hotel Bradbury' basically started as one of those short stories."
Marshfield author Steve Beck

Beck said some of his ideas also came from reading humor-based works like "A Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" by Douglas Adams and also books by Kurt Vonnegut.



After thinking about it, Beck decided he wanted to actually put the car-trip story down on paper. He worked until he finished the book, and started circulating the first draft around to Marshfield residents and even to teachers and students within the Marshfield school system.

"People started telling me 'Not only is this book funny, but it's very different,'" Beck said. "The response was really good, so I started looking for a publisher. It took me about 20 publishers but eventually, a small publisher in Florida called Disc-Us Books picked up the manuscript."

When he's not dreaming up zany new story lines, Beck is self-employed as a systems consultant helping people and businesses set up W eb sites. He also finds time to coach youth basketball in Marshfield, and frequently serves as a chaperone for music department outings.

But Beck said he has a new found love in writing, and hopes he can combine that with a love of computers. He has future plans of not only writing more books in print, but he also wants to try to his hand at writing e-books which are basically books with moving pictures one can read and watch at a computer.

"Writing takes a lot of self discipline," Beck said. "When you're writing a book, you really have to block out a portion of time every day. But with writing 'The Hotel Bradbury,' I think it helped that I never bothered growing up myself."

Beck hopes that even though his book is geared toward kids, their parents will have fun reading it too.

"I think kids and adults will have a lot of fun when they read the book," he said, "and hopefully, they'll get a lot of laughs out of it."

Beck will be on hand for another book signing July 23 at Barnes & Noble in Braintree. Beck's book is currently available at local bookstores and online at Amazon.com. For more information, log onto www.thehotelbradbury.com.

A taste of the Big Apple

Broadway dancer at head of class at Hanover dance school

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Start spreading the news—the Dance Unlimited dance studio in Hanover will soon be welcoming a Broadway original.

On July 11, a four-week dance workshop will kick off with a two-hour class taught by Deborah Leamy, a former member of the Broadway cast of the renowned dance revue called "Fosse."

"Everyone here is really excited about it," said Linda Turner-Murphy, director of the Dance Unlimited studio. "(Leamy) is a fabulous dancer, but it's just thrilling to have someone from Broadway coming to our little studio."

Leamy brings a wide range of talents with her to share with students at the Hanover dance school.

"To be able to perform on Broadway, you have to be able to dance, but you also have to know how to act and sing as well," Leamy said. "My class will emphasize that reality. Broadway performances are very real, and you need the talent to be able to back it up."

Whatever her initiative may be, Leamy is geared up for visiting the South Shore. A graduate of Emerson College, Leamy is no stranger to the Boston area.

Leamy said when she first contacted Murphy about the possibility of holding the class, Turner-Murphy responded in all the right ways.

"(Linda) supported me from the get go," Leamy said. "She really got what I was trying to do with this class in terms of exposing kids to the reality of it all."

But Turner-Murphy is not the only dance studio director who "got it." Other directors in places like Florida, Los Angeles, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Seattle, and Washington D.C. all recruited Leamy for her teaching talents.

Leamy decided to start traveling around and teaching dancing shortly after she left the cast of "Fosse" at the beginning of 2000. Her permanent home is in New York, but she had no problem with the concept of constantly moving around in order to teach.

"I spent two years with 'Fosse'," Leamy said. "And I left it with a greater knowledge of choreography. Right after I left, I went out to Los Angeles, and started trying to market a 'Fosse' workshop."

"This class will be the time for young dancers to go for it."
-Broadway dancer Deborah Leamy

From then on, Leamy has been finding success with her unique brand of instruction.

Leamy has been in touring Broadway productions like "Phantom of the Opera, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, West Side Story, and A Chorus Line." She has also performed in shows at Radio City Music Hall, and she has done her fair share of off-Broadway performances as well.

Deborah Leamy

"The kids who take her class are going to benefit from it," Turner-Murphy said. "It's a different kind of style of dancing for them. This is the kind of workshop that people usually have to travel to New York to take, so it's very convenient."

Leamy said she thinks her class will definitely help those students who feel they want to make a life out of dancing.

"This class will be the time for young dancers to go for it," Leamy said. "This will be the time for a trial basis to see if they want to actually make a career out of this."

After Leamy's workshop, there will be other classes held during the course of the four-week series by Jazz dance greats like Adrienne Hawkins and Billy McLaughlin, Turner-Murphy said.

For more information on Leamy's class, or any of the ones following it, call Dance Unlimited at (781) 871-4264. The four-week series costs $120 for enrollment. There is limited space available.

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

David Brudnoy
CNC Film Critic

By David Brudnoy
FILM CRITIC

Atlantis (B)

The phrase "derived from" isn't the kiss of death, unlike "based on a true story," which means hoked up beyond recognition. "Atlantis: The Lost Empire," Disney's latest grab for your dollars and your rug rats' repeat visits and tie-in toy collecting, is a textbook case of derivation. Jules Verne pops into mind, the vessel in which our hero and his buddies voyage to the vanished realm reminding us of the classic film made from "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Smidgens of other Verne stories creep in, as do many plucky-lad-goes-about-doing-something-plucky books you read as a child. It's Disneyfication of the classics without, mercifully, either wee adorable chattering beasties or the usual noxious assemblage of songs to melt us. There is music but it doesn't swallow the thing whole. They've gone for story and animation, and the result is good.

How good? Good enough to save us from being totally submerged in the inevitable, manipulative, condescending PC tokenisms, like the black character (voice of Phil Morris) who of course sounds "black," lest a blind black audience member not be sure that the affirmative action cops have done their duty; the princess our hero comes to crave (voice of Cree Summer) who's a couple shades tawnier than he; or the teen mechanic chick made to sound Hispanic (Jacqueline Obradors). No reason not to broaden the imagery in films, but nowadays it's manifestly insincere, soldered onto movies to achieve a contrived "inclusiveness," just as the all-white Disney cartoons of yore reflected the ethos then. Movies reflect their era. Ours, one of moviemaking by the numbers, is hell bent on maximizing "diversity" dogma, though the Italo stereotype hovers at the brink (Don Novello's Vinny is a riot), as does the sultry siren iconography (Claudia Christian).

The game plan these days (after raking in the green) is to cover every base in transparently fraudulent ways, since kids are taught by today's corrupt pedagogy to "identify with" only those who resemble themselves. Many critics, shamefully, strive to demonize any film not conforming to these ridiculously cookie-cutter panderings.

The simple story, set in 1914, features our hero, a nerdy would-be scientist, Milo Thatch (voice of Michael J. Fox, superbly complementing the visual), who's financed by a wealthy pal (John Mahoney) of his late granddad to undertake this voyage, captained by Rourke (James Garner), and accompanied by our mini-rainbow coalition of attendants. Turns out that most are rotters, though many also come around by the end, and the voyage is an eye-poppingly voluptuous excursion into the depths of the oceans and worlds unknown, with animation whose crispness undercuts the story's goody-goody verities. Many scenes exhibit the best 3-D-like effects of any Disney film, and most are riotously colorful. Nowadays most movies aimed at undiscriminating audiences (a redundancy) nearly drive you bonkers with the propaganda. But the result here transcends its negatives. A saga of yearning for wonders only imagined, this is finer than its parts, and kids, who deserve better than they usually get, will be awed.

Written by Tab Murphy; directed by Gary Trousdale and Kirk Wise. Rated PG.

Milo talks it up with a suspicious Helga and a bored Commander Rourke.

Peach kuchen

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Peach kuchen is a recipe that graces the pages of community cookbooks but will never be found in magazines like Gourmet or Bon Appetit. It's solid, nonsense fare; easy to make, unpretentious, and, when properly made, delicious.

The first problem with peach kuchen is defining it. Recipes call for everything from boxed cake mixes and refrigerated bread dough to yeast cake as a base. However, the consensus is that kuchen (German for "cake") is a coffee or breakfast-style cake with fruit baked into the top and a garnish of cinnamon and sugar or streusel.

Such a recipe appears in "The New Joy of Cooking (1997)." It contains all-purpose flour, baking powder, salt, butter, sugar, and eggs for the cake and peaches, pecans, sugar, and cinnamon for the topping. As it turned out, the cake was dry and overleavened (1 tablespoon of baking powder to 1 cup of flour is extravagant), and it could have used a bit more fruit.

My solution was to add milk to the batter for moisture, reduce the amount of baking powder, and increase the amount of fruit. Now I had a good working recipe — this kuchen was sturdy but moist and had enough fruit to balance out the foundation of cake below.

Next I tried using sour cream instead of milk but, to my surprise, the texture of the cake turned tough. Cake flour produced a weak structure, one into which the sliced peaches happily dived during baking, so all-purpose was the winner. I fiddled with leavener quantities and settled on 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/4 teaspoon baking soda, quantities that balanced the cake's height with the moistness of its crumb.

Now I was on to the topping. Fresh peaches are available at this time of year, but I found that they benefited from sitting out at room temperature for a couple of days to soften. After peeling and slicing them I found lemon juice unnecessary for preventing discoloration. My first topping included cinnamon and sugar, but I preferred a more interesting streusel topping. After some experimentation, I settled on a topping made from flour, butter, sugar, and chopped nuts, which provided the crunch I was looking for. (Many streusel toppings are soft and too sweet.)

It is best to bake this cake in a 9-inch springform pan. In a pinch it can be baked in a 9-inch cake pan and flipped out with minimal loss of topping, but it's much easier to work with a springform.

PEACH KUCHEN WITH CRUNCHY STREUSEL

This recipe can also be made with apples or plums. The easiest way to peel peaches is to first immerse them in boiling water for 30 seconds and then plunge them into an ice bath; this loosens the skins. Do not use underripe peaches. They are tasteless and will be difficult to peel even after being blanched in boiling water.

For the Streusel Topping:
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
3 tablespoons chopped almonds or pecans, or a combination of both
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 tablespoon unsalted butter at cool room temperature

For the Fruit:
3 cups peaches, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch slices, about 3 large to 6 small (you can substitute plums or apples)

For the Cake:
1 1/2 cups flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter at room temperature
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs at room temperature
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2/3 cups milk

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust rack to middle position. Grease and flour a 9-inch springform pan. Combine all ingredients for the streusel topping in the bowl of an electric mixer and mix until crumbly and thoroughly combined, about 2 minutes. Set aside.

2. For the cake, sift the first four ingredients together onto a piece of wax paper. Place the butter in the bowl of an electric mixer and beat on medium-high for one minute. Add the sugar and gradually beat on high speed for 3 minutes, until the mixture is light and fluffy. Add the eggs one at a time, beating 30 seconds after each addition. Add the vanilla and beat for 10 seconds.

3. Add 1/3 of the flour mixture and 1/3 of the milk and beat on low speed until almost combined. Repeat twice, being careful not to overbeat. Using a rubber spatula, mix briefly, scraping down the sides of the bowl to make sure the batter is fully combined.

4. Scrape the batter into the prepared pan, smoothing the surface with the spatula. Top with an even layer of peaches. Sprinkle with an even layer of streusel topping. Bake for 20 minutes. Rotate the cake 180 degrees and bake for 20 to 30 minutes more, or until the cake is golden brown and a cake tester or wooden skewer comes out clean. Let cool on a rack for 10 minutes before removing the sides of the pan. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Waging war on weeds

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORESSPONDENT

Those of us who sow, grow, weed and cultivate the soil in the northeastern United States are accustomed to a seemingly endless, yo-yo pattern of weather extremes, but the growing season of 2001 may long be remembered as one of the most challenging of all. Temperature and moisture extremes have produced some spectacular displays and an equal number of disappointments.

It is advisable to keep records from year to year, noting the season's weather conditions and those plants which stood out for their exceptional vigor as well as those which struggled or succumbed. Depending on your property's soil and its individual micro-climate, there are likely to be a number of consistently good performers from year to year despite the weather extremes, while others may only offer occasional beauty when given the ideal combination of growing conditions. For smaller landscapes, finicky plants may not be worth the space and pampering they require.

A gardening journal is an invaluable tool for the serious gardener. It can be used to document new purchases, note plants which bloom simultaneously, comment on pleasing plant combinations, and list changes to be made. If time does not permit extensive entries, weekly photos of the perennial border will serve as reminders for future seasons.

As our perennials grow and fill in, so do our weeds, or wildflowers, if you prefer. Some are sneaky, their foliage similar in appearance to desirable plants. Rather than pull out a plant we do not recognize and suspect we may have purchased the previous season, we allow the intruder to flourish only to discover that it soon begins to invade our beds relentlessly. Others are brazen right from the start, growing by leaps and bounds and crowding out the good guys. Whatever their nature, pull early and often as these unwanted guests compete for nutrients and moisture no matter what our growing season has to offer and the weeds always seems to succeed far better than the expensive plants we introduce.

Chemicals are not my preferred means of weed prevention and I find weeding very therapeutic, but there are times when even the most dedicated gardener must resort to drastic measures, if only to break the cycle. Some weeds are easily extricated with a simple tug, but others are considerably more persistent with taproots or underground runners. For these intruders, the use of an herbicide may be required. The careful application of Roundup or Finale to the leaf surface of the unwanted guests may be the only solution, keeping in mind that these chemicals are nonselective and cannot recognize a weed from your most desirable, expensive acquisition. In tight spaces or in instances where the weed has infiltrated an established clump, apply the herbicide with a sponge or small paint brush. There are an endless number of products on the market with varying levels of toxicity to combat your weed populations. My recommendation would be to begin with the least toxic application and work your way up.

Once the gardens have been thoroughly weeded, the application of a weed preventative chemical like Preen, will minimize the emergence of weeds from seeds. These chemicals will not prevent those intruders which are produced on runners nor will they kill existing weeds. After application, it is best not to cultivate the soil which will disrupt the chemical barrier that has been established enabling those persistent little trespassers to germinate. Often the best approach to a relatively weed-free landscape is to pull the existing weeds in early spring, spray the more difficult invaders, spread lime, fertilizer and a weed preventative and then apply a layer of mulch.

The use of summer mulches offers many benefits to all types of plantings. Perhaps their greatest value, in our times of frequent water bans, is that summer mulches help soils to retain moisture in addition to keeping soil temperatures more evenly regulated which results in less stress to our plants. Even a thin layer of shredded bark significantly reduces the emergence of weeds and creates an attractive, uniform background which sets plants off beautifully. Apply two inches of pine bark mulch over the root systems of trees and shrubs, using only an inch or so around perennials. Care should be taken not to bury the crowns of perennials, as this can lead to rot or suffocation of the plants. As the mulch breaks down over the growing season, it provides valuable, moisture-retentive, organic matter to the soil surface which can be worked into the soil early next spring. For smaller gardens, there are a number of specialty mulches in addition to pine or hemlock mulches, which are available in bags including chocolate-scented cocoa mulch, for all you chocoholics, and buckwheat hulls.

The removal of weeds for some gardeners is an endless, dreaded chore; for others, pulling weeds is good exercise and a time for contemplation. The key is to keep up with the process to minimize competition with your preferred plants for water and nutrients and, most importantly, to eliminate the invaders before they have an opportunity to spread their offspring throughout your plantings.

The Eighth Annual Spinning Bee for 'spinners' of all ages will be held at the Harlow Old Fort House in Plymouth Saturday, June 23 from 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. rain or shine. During the old-fashioned contest, spinners will use a variety of hand-held spindles, high wheels, and treadle-operated wheels to spin wool and cotton fiber. Prizes are awarded to spinners at different age levels based on which competitor produces the most yarn or thread in the allotted time. Spinners are invited to bring their equipment and there is a minimal entry fee. The event is free and open to the public. For more information call 508-746-0012.

"Ma Qingxiong - Recent Work" the philosophy and technique of Chinese painting is blended with western art concepts to create breathtaking installation of umbrellas, all suspended from the galleries ceiling. "Co-Founders choice" features works of art chosen personally by Edith Weyerhaeuser in recognition of the museum's anniversary. She made these selections shortly before her death. The museum is located at 189 Alden Street in Duxbury. Museum hours are 1 - 4 p.m., Wed. - Sun. Tel. 781-934-6634.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JUNE 21

The summer solstice arrives at 3:38 a.m., when the sun enters the sign Cancer. At 7:41 a.m. the moon enters Cancer, and a new moon/solar eclipse occurs at 7:58 a.m. New moons bring a time for new beginnings in your life. Influences this month prompt you to initiate new starts on an inner, personal level. The family-oriented sign Cancer reminds you that world peace begins at home. This an ideal time for working out conflicts with others, forgiving and forgetting past grudges. Clear the decks and start anew.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22

The Cancer moon aligns with Venus at 10:11 a.m. and becomes inactive for the remainder of the day. Influences are prime for cleaning out desk drawers, closets, garages. Get rid of the clutter. Making repairs, remodeling, restoring and refinishing also get the green light. Enjoy a special dinner this evening with close friends and family.

SATURDAY, JUNE 23

The moon enters Leo at 8:55 a.m., setting the stage for a social weekend. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can be productive. Be sure to have a clear plan of action and stick to it. Put on your party hat and go for the good times this evening.

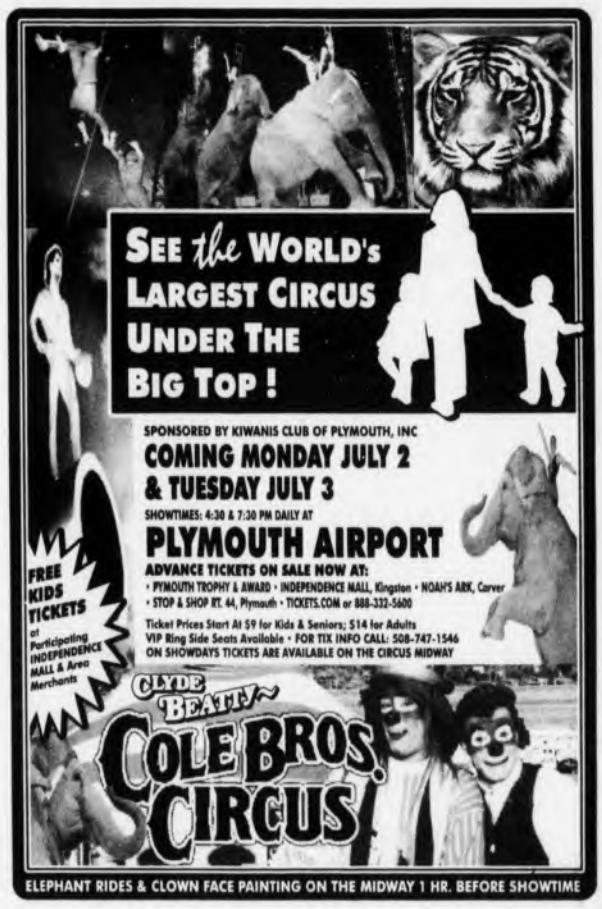
SUNDAY, JUNE 24

This is a wonderful day for relaxing and enjoying life to its fullest. A Leo moon generates an upbeat, playful mood. Put domestic or career worries and decisions on the back burner; rest and recharge your batteries. Visit or entertain friends. Get in touch with people you haven't heard from in a while. Enjoy favorite sports or hobbies. A harmonious alignment of Saturn and Neptune takes the spotlight this evening. Reflect on and learn from past experiences; envision the future you'd like to create.

MONDAY, JUNE 25

At 3:22 a.m. the Leo moon becomes inactive until 9:57 a.m., when a Virgo moon takes over. The sign Virgo is ruled by the planet Mercury, so there are likely to be delays, setbacks, breakdowns. Allow extra time to get where you are going; have an alternate plan of action. Stress management is important. Don't create problems for yourself. Resolve to be more easygoing and lighthearted. You can be productive if you tackle projects that need cleaning, reorganizing, redoing, repair. Eat light foods and avoid stimulants. Get back on track with exercise regimens.

TUESDAY, JUNE 26



A Virgo moon can make for another high stress day. Read yesterday's advice. Slow down. Drop worries, fears, self-doubts. Stay busy with projects that have been left hanging and finish them. Clean out the clutter; get your life in order. The moon forms challenging 90-degree alignments to Pluto, Mars and Mercury today. Choose your words carefully. Don't say or do anything you will later regret. Meditate for peace of mind.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27

The planet Mercury will begin direct travel tomorrow. However, it is still traveling in retrograde today, and things may not go as planned. The Virgo moon becomes inactive at 6:12 a.m. Make up a list of things to do and stick to it. Handle routine chores, errands; tie up loose ends. Stock up on healthy foods and vitamins; take better care of yourself. The moon enters social Libra at 12:11 p.m., and the first quarter phase occurs at 11:20 p.m. A potent full moon/lunar eclipse is building up and will culminate July 5.

THURSDAY, JUNE 28

The planet Mercury begins direct travel at 1:49 a.m., 21-degrees of Gemini. Generally this is a time when the green light goes on for new beginnings across the board. However, if you are planning to launch large-scale enterprises, it is best to wait until July 20, when Mars turns direct and the new moon culminates. The next Mercury retrograde period will occur in October. The moon continues its travel in Libra today. Make a lunch date with friends, colleagues, lovers. Surf, chat, network. Enjoy a romantic evening with the love in your life.

Trash system starts Sunday

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The new Pay As You Throw trash system takes effect Sunday.

Starting July 1, residents will not be able to dump their trash at the Recycling Transfer Station without a sticker and if their trash isn't in one of the new, blue PAYT bags.

"Starting July 1, there will be no exceptions," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. A security guard will be on post outside of the Recycling Transfer Station for the first two months of the program, which is designed to increase the amount of recycling in town.

"We've been advertising this for more than a year and now the important thing is just to jump into it," said Recycling Committee member Allan MacDonald.

The PAYT system was approved at the 2000 annual Town Meeting, but was not implemented for a year so residents could be educated on the program.

The program is designed to force town residents to recycle more.

Music Circus has entertained crowds for half a century

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset institution that has hosted entertainers ranging from Bob Hope and Tony Bennett to "Weird Al" Yankovic and "Stone Cold" Steve Austin is celebrating a major milestone.

The South Shore Music Circus turns 50 this week, and although the shows and technology have changed, the basic purpose has remained the same.

"It brings entertainment to an awful lot of people throughout the summer," said Bruce Cameron, president of the music circus's parent company, South Shore Playhouse Associates. "People get to see their favorite entertainers in a very intimate surrounding."

Since "Showboat" christened the tent on June 25, 1951, the Music Circus has become one of the state's premier summer entertainment venues, and along with its sister tent, the Cape Cod Melody Tent, is one of the last theaters in the round in the country. It has withstood challenges to its viability from the Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts — now known as the Tweeter Center — and FleetBoston Pavilion, the Boston waterfront venue formerly known as Harborlights. It has changed from a summer stock theater, to housing nationally known contemporary acts, ranging from comedy and professional wrestling to country and classic rock. And that's not to mention playing host to Cohasset High School graduation ceremonies and the occasional summer Town Meeting.

"We've become more diversified over the years. For example, we do

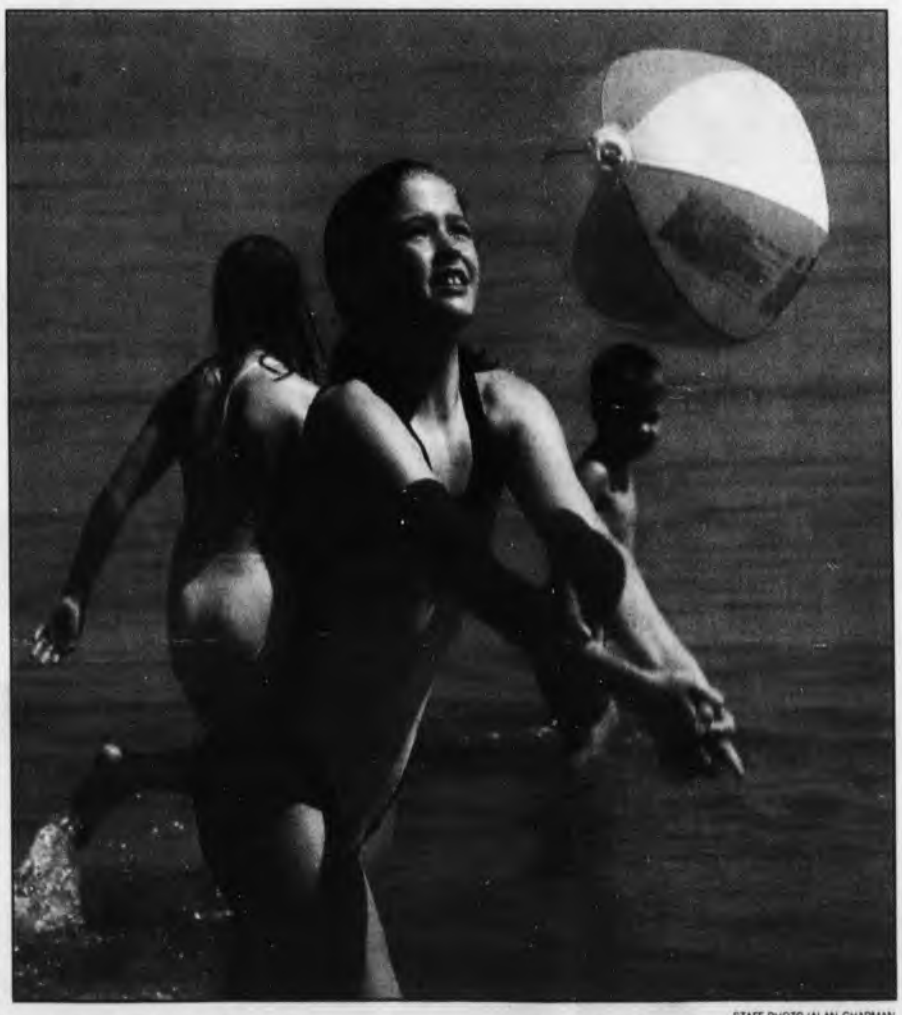
Testing begins in Cohasset waters

Sandy Beach has 'fowl' odor

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Board of Health has begun its annual testing of Cohasset waters for high bacteria levels. The good news is that the results have been excellent in the first two weeks of testing. The bad news is the good results don't explain the occasional pungent smell detected from Sandy Beach.

"We don't really know what the source is."
— Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent



"We don't really know what the source is," said town health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

However, the water off Sandy Beach is nearly bacteria free and completely safe for swimming.

For the past few weeks, some beach-goers have complained of a foul smell on the end of the beach closest to the bathhouse.

Sandy Beach Association president Robin Lawrence said the bathhouse's septic system was recently cleaned. Godzik said the fecal coliform count — which detects sewerage in water — was

School 'treasures' to be up for grabs

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Have any need for an old school desk or filing cabinet? How about an old-fashioned mimeograph machine?

As construction gets underway on the $40 million Deer Hill and middle-high school expansion and renovation projects, old furniture and outdated school equipment and supplies could be in the offing.

"I'd like to keep as much out of the trash pile as we can."
— Chartis Langmaid, school committee

The school department will compile a list of unwanted items that might be of some value and turn that over to the town manager, who could offer them up for sale, said Edward Malvey, superintendent of schools.

"Our junk could become someone else's treasure," Malvey said.

For example, Malvey said, the old swings and a small slide at Deer Hill are outdated and could be thrown away, but someone might like them.

"Disposing of the items depend on how the selectmen want to handle this," Malvey told the school committee last week.

In a telephone interview, Town Manager Mark Haddad explained the town has a "disposition bylaw" governing any surplus equipment,

Fine arts to expand

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Interest in fine arts that include visual arts, instrumental and choral music and photography are on the rise at the middle-high school.

To that end, Principal Michael Jones said the fine arts department needs both a new leader and a new position. Due to retirements and the ability to shift some staff, the new posts would not add to the budget this year, he said.

He explained that Assistant Principal Jack DeLorenzo has been serving as the fine arts department head, but with DeLorenzo's new duties as liaison to the middle-high school construction project, he won't have the time to give the arts the attention they need.

Having the department head position in place would also strengthen the structure of the school program as the high school goes through the reaccreditation process. High schools across the state are accredited every 10 years and Cohasset is embarking on its

Conflicting views on effect of CHL environmental plans

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Cohasset Heights Landfill has filed for a permit with the Conservation Commission that would allow it to cap the remaining opened portion of the landfill, conduct additional groundwater quality monitoring, and install larger leachate storage tanks if necessary.

However, Norfolk Environmental, an environmental engineering firm representing the Cohasset Water Commission, says CHL's plan is inadequate in dealing with the existing groundwater contamination problem — something that CHL says isn't its fault.

"In Norfolk's opinion, the plan does not address the fundamental problem that leachate is being released into the Lily Pond watershed area," said Norfolk Environmental president Mark Bartlett in a letter to the Conservation Commission.

But Ray Quinn of SITEK, the engineering firm representing CHL — which is on Crocker Lane off Route 3A — argued that if contamination was found in the Lily Pond watershed area, it's not coming from the landfill.

"Fifteen years of studies show that the groundwater doesn't flow in that direction [towards Lily Pond]," said Quinn.

He said any drainage from the landfill flows north towards Great Swamp, and suggested looking towards the former MassHighway site located next door to CHL as the potential cause of contamination.

In March, at the request of the Water Commission, the Conservation Commission ruled that the contamination fell under its jurisdiction.

The plan, filed with the Conservation Commissionn, is a "three-component program," according to Quinn.

The first step of the plan would be to cap the remaining two and a half acres of the landfill. Quinn said part of the capping plan involves increasing the slope of the landfill towards the north, and digging trenches and swails to collect run-off.

The second part calls for more assessment of the groundwater drainage around the perimeter of the landfill once capped, and if the amount of leachate doesn't decrease by 50 percent, CHL will make improvements to the underground leachate collection system.

"This will provide redundant protection to the watershed," Quinn said..

Bartlett of Norfolk Environmental said the plan contained "positive steps," but characterized them as "first steps," and called for more extensive testing as well as an interception trench along the edge of the property. He said although the collection system meets state Department of Environmental Protection standards, it is "grossly inadequate and provides no protection from the release of leachate into the environment."

"The amount of leachate leaving the landfill perimeter is improving. Imagine what will happen if we cap it."
— Paul Barry, owner

Owner Paul Barry, obviously frustrated at the Water Commission's attempt to add more cost and delays to the closing of the landfill, said the Conservation Commission should "stand your ground," and work with him to approve the plan or risk having the issue "go on forever."

"The amount of leachate leaving the landfill perimeter is improving," he said. "Imagine what will happen if we cap it."

The commission continued the hearing until Aug. 9 so it could get an update on where CHL's closure plan stands with DEP.

The commission ordered CHL in March of 1994 to control the amount of erosion and storm-water run-off at the landfill, and the amount of leachate leaving the site.

According to then Conservation Commission member, and current Selectman Thomas Callahan, CHL submitted a storm water and erosion control plan afterwards, but the issue became tangled up in appeals with DEP, where it remains today.

In 1997, CHL, with commission approval, cleaned up the wetlands surrounding the property.

School building update

Cohasset Schools Supt. Edward Malvey said with classes over for the summer, work on the school construction project has begun in earnest.

"Everything is going fantastic," he said this week.

The major plan for this summer involves clearing the asbestos out of both the middle/high school and Deer Hill School, moving the middle/high school library to the former Dorr Gymnaisum, and then demolishing the library.

He gave his thanks to the schools' teachers for packing up their rooms in anticipation of the construction work.

"Without their cooperation we would be behind schedule," Malvey said.

He said the earth removal currently going on behind the middle/high school is nearly complete, and work will begin soon on the foundation of the new athletic complex.

Construction crews are also putting together a temporary walkway between the middle school building and high school building.

Malvey also hopes the new gas-fueled heating system will be in place by the winter.

The $41 million school construction and renovation project will enlarge and completely renovate the Deer Hill School and Cohasset Middle/High School.

Car wash benefit

Juniors and seniors from Cohasset Middle High School will run a car wash on Saturday, June 30, from 9 a.m. - 2 p.m. at the Texaco station located in Cohasset Village. Donations will be accepted. Proceeds from this fund raiser will be used to help defray the cost of the field study trip to the U.S. Virgin Islands in which these students will participate this coming winter.

Local water board floated for towns served by Mass-American

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Local legislators have joined together to propose establishing a local tri-town water board to deal directly with the Massachusetts American Water Company.

"We want input from the towns, and this is the best way to do it," state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said about the board that would be comprised of volunteer representatives from the three towns serviced by the private water company — Hingham, Hull and north Cohasset.

"It would basically be a little working group in order to work with Mass-American," he said.

Mass-American, which is in Hingham, provides water for approximately 11,000 customers in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. Only 500 homes in Cohasset use Mass-American; the rest of the town is served by a municipal water department.

The towns and Mass-American agreed in April to a 10 percent rate hike, five years after a 153 percent rate hike gave their residents some of the highest rate water rates in the country.

"We had a lot of unanswered questions as to why we needed another rate increase, what are some of the costs, shareholder questions," said state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, a Mass-American customer. "If we have a board, some of those questions could be answered, and if we ever have a situation where we have another rate hike, the board can be turned to and say it's because x, y, and z happened."

Keith Bossung, spokesman for Massachusetts-American Water Company, backs the idea and has signed on to be the company's representative.

We hope this could be an informal way to create a formal way of communication and cooperation."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund

"I think it's an excellent idea. The company and I are very happy to participate in the group on a regular basis, as it sees fit to meet," he said. "We can sit down and talk water issues in general, and in the area, projects, supply and demand, water conservation, all kinds of issues facing the company."

Bradley said the idea of a tri-town board arose in a meeting he had with the three town's administrative heads, Charles Cristello of Hingham, Mark Haddad of Cohasset and Phil Lemnios of Hull. He said the board, appointed by the town selectmen, could deal with issues as basic as water quality and as large as extending the new Taunton desalinization plant to help provide part of the towns' water supply.

Hedlund said Mass-American is one of the largest privately owned water companies providing municipal service in the state.

"Its a unique situation," he said. "We saw from our vantage point as legislators a lack of communication between the water company and the towns. We hope this could be an informal way to create a formal way of communication and cooperation."

Bossung said the board could be a way to keep a running dialogue going between the company and towns. "I think it would be a very good way to partner with towns, and communicate what issues we are facing in the area," he said.

The two legislators have also filed a bill that would specifically allow the state Attorney General's office to review proposed water rate hikes.

The Attorney General's office has long reviewed rate hikes of other utilities, such as electricity and natural gas, but told the towns in 1996 that it didn't have the staffing to review the massive rate hike sought by Mass-American.

Hedlund later helped secure funding for extra staffing, but again was told water rate hike reviews weren't "in their job description."

"There's nothing that specifically says they have to review water-rate hikes in their authorizing statute," Hedlund said, "but there isn't anything that says they can't.

"This legislation would really clarify their responsibilities and authority over water rate hikes."

Bradley said because the Attorney General's office already receives money for the staffing, it wouldn't require extra funds, and would cut down on costs for the towns.

"There are specialists in the office that do nothing but review utility hikes. It would save town counsels a lot of work," he said.

The bill is currently in the House and Senate Rules Committee.

New Osgood School principal hired

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset School Department has named Janet Sheehan as the new principal of the Osgood School. She replaces Marilee Cantelmo, who is leaving after five years at the helm to pursue other educational opportunities.

Schools Supt. Dr. Edward Malvey said Sheehan is a "good match" for the K-3 school.

He extolled her interpersonal skills, experience in curriculum coordination and district-wide involvement in Milton, where she is currently an assistant principal of the Collicot School.

Sheehan has a bachelor's degree from Westfield State College in education, and a master's degree from Lesley College. She began her teaching career as an elementary school teacher in Randolph, took a couple of years off in the late 1980s to pursue other interests, and has served in the Milton school system since the early 1990s.

Malvey said the jump from assistant principal to principal shouldn't be a big one for Sheehan In Milton, she was one of two assistant principals of the 500-student elementary school, and her duties included curriculum evaluations, personnel issues, budgets, and parental communication.

"All of that is very useful, so it's not as if she has no experience with the duties of a principal," said Malvey.

Sheehan, a Scituate resident, was one of five semi-finalists that met with an interview committee made up of two administrators, two Osgood School teachers, two school committee members, two parents, and a third resident at-large. A total of 20 people applied for the position.

Malvey said Sheehan was the consensus pick as the candidate best suited for the job.

Malvey said he also visited the Milton school system and talked to fellow administrators, teachers and parents; all of whom gave "nothing but outstanding recommendations for her." He also said Sheehan has a "marvelous sense of humor," and was very involved in the Milton school district as a whole.

The full-time, 12-month position pays $76,000.

Ruth Goodwin of Cohasset becomes a great-grandmother

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SUMMERTIME THOUGHTS

Hello, Cohasset Now that all the excitement has died down a little bit for those involved in graduations and end-of-the year parties, it is time to look around and enjoy the summer. I know that I for one, want to take each day and try to slow down the pace of it a little bit and try to find those great, small moments and memories that we all cherish so much. You know what I mean, the beautiful flowers that open and then close so quickly, the mess a child makes when eating his/her third slice of watermelon and the beautiful view that the ocean gives us each day.

We are so lucky to have all of this right here at our fingertips and now, I really want to enjoy it with family and friends because life is definitely going by way to quick for my liking and before we know it, summer will be, well, let's not think about that. Take the time to just have a great summer!

I want to wish all of you a wonderful 4th of July next week. Please let me know where you are spending it and if anyone has any pictures of reunions, parade memories or special Birthdays, don't forget to send them my way. Please keep in mind the deadline for each column is no later than Mondays at noon.

NEW ARRIVAL

Briauna Desirae Nowlin was born on May 18,weighing in at 7 pounds 6 ounces and was 21 inches long. She is the first great-grandchild of Ruth Goodwin of Cohasset. She is the daughter of Jennifer and Jim Nowlin of Surprise (yes,that's the name of Briauna's hometown), Ariz. Her grandparents are Chuck and Ruthie(Goodwin)Sve of Palos Verdes Estates, Calif. and Sandy and Stan Tierman of Glendale, Ariz. .She is 2 weeks old in the picture. Welcome to the world, Briauna, and come to visit your great-grandmother, soon.

SAILING CLUB OPENER

Now, here is a great way for Cohasset Sailing Club members to start the summer off with a bang. The Cohasset Sailing Club welcomes its members and their guests to the opening sailing season "Summer Breeze" gathering and enjoy some "makes you feel fine" music provided by the Grateful Dads. The event will be held on Saturday, June 30 from 7-10 p.m. at the sailing club.

The club asks those of you who plan on attending to bring a food dish for all to share. Members with last names beginning with letters A-L, please bring an appetizer. Those with last names beginning with M-Z, please bring a dessert. All attendees are responsible for their own beverages and don't forget to leave the kiddies at home! Any questions you may have may be directed to Lucia, 383-2792 or Susan, 383-0765.

Please come and enjoy the first of many, "Summer Breezes"! Just writing that made me feel so summer-like, to all who go have a wonderful time.

CHS 25TH REUNIONS

I have two class reunion items to talk about, the first is a request for information on the Class of 1977 25th reunion which should be happening sometime next year. If anyone has any information on this, please email me at jenpiep@yahoo.com or call 781-923-1057 and I will get it to the right person.

The Cohasset High School Class of 1976 is planning its 25th year reunion for Saturday, Aug. 4 at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset. We are looking for members of our class that we've lost touch with in order to include as many people as possible in this event. If you know the whereabouts of any of the following members of the class, please contact Lisa Fitchner Pratt at 781-383-1387 or Leslie Klier Lemaire at 781-383-0227 as soon as possible. Please help us find these old friends: Pam Ballerino Motion, Stephen Bowditch, Mary Colletta, Virginia Collins, Karin Costello, Darlene Atkins, Ellen Block, Donald Clarke, Loretta Livingstone Coughlin, Susan Booth, Kim Douglass, Deborah Farwell, Bennet Driscoll, Kathy Fessler, Andrea Fox, Geoff Gardner, Darlene Gleaves, Ann Hawes, Peter Hobbs, Gwen Howl, Kathy Howley, Gary Hurlbut, Bob Killion, Dwight James, John Mallers, Maggie McGinnis, Marie McGinnis, Joe MacLean, Miriam Lahage, Jeannie McKinnon, Michael Patrolia, Patti Patrolia, Richard Patrolia, Robin Plank, Dean Reynolds, Jill Short, Bradley Smith, Lynn Souther, Debbie Streeter, Leslie Travers, Alice Watson and Stephen Wirth. Thank you for any help you may be able to give.

AWARD WINNERS

At a recent awards ceremony held at Boston University, Emily Nash and Margaret Pilczak of Cohasset were among a group of Massachusetts students who received awards from the John Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth. Approximately 43,000 seventh- and eighth-graders in 19 states were invited to take college SAT tests based on high scores they received on grade-level standardized tests administered in their own schools. Of those taking the test, the top 22 percent were recognized for outstanding achievement on the mathematics and verbal exams and for achieving scores higher than the national average scored by college bound seniors in the class of 2001!

At the ceremony, Margaret and Emily were presented with certificates recognizing their exceptional accomplishment on the these exams. Emily, a seventh-grader at the Cohasset Middle/High School is the daughter of Randall and Linda Nash. Margaret, is the daughter of Kenneth and Jo-Ann Pilczak and attends Derby Academy. Congratulations Emily and Maggie. We are very proud of your accomplishment and foresee a bright future ahead for both of you! This is an amazing accomplishment that is for sure! Great job, girls.

Ruth Goodwin is a great-grandmother! Briauna Desirae Nowlin, who is two weeks old in this photograph, was born on May 18,weighing in at 7 pounds 6 ounces and was 21 inches long.

TRINITY GRADUATE

Brett J. MacQuarrie, son of Jane M. Kyricos of Cohasset and Stephen J. MacQuarrie of Wellesley graduated recently from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. Brett majored in political science while in school. Fantastic news Brett!

THAYER HONORS

Cohasset had three, third trimester honor roll students at Thayer Middle School in Braintree. Catherine M. Ernst and Joseph M. Rosano, both in the seventh grade; and Miranda C. Lanzillotti all earned the following recognition. Catherine earned achievement and high effort, Joseph earned achievement and effort and Miranda earned effort. Keep up the good work next year!

Thayer also recognized those named to the honor roll at the Upper School. Lauren Margaret Smith, daughter of Bill and Maureen Smith, and Malcolm J. Stansell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stansell both made the honor roll for semesters two and three. And Lindsay Erin Feig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Feig, made the honor roll for semester three!

Great job!

DEAN'S LIST

Roger Williams University in Briston, R.I. announced the dean's list for its Spring 2001 Semester. Jared Ford, Carolyn Pratt and Megan Pratt, all of Cohasset were on it. This is wonderful to hear, all three of you have worked very hard!

Megan Waal, a graduate of Cohasset Middle/Senior High School, was named to the dean's list for the spring semester at The College of Wooster. Megan is a sophomore and has a grade point average of 3.5 or above. This is super to hear, Megan.

COLLEGE GRADS

Emily Henderson, daughter of Richard and Linda Henderson recently graduated from Wheaton College in Norton, Mass. Congratulations Emily on a job well done.

Connecticut College also held its ceremonies recently and Thomas Digan of Cohasset was awarded a degree in psychology. Great job!

25TH ANNIVERSARY

A very special anniversary was recently orchestrated by two wonderful daughters. Dan and Judy Cellucci were the very honored and surprised guests for their 25th wedding anniversary celebration held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. This wonderful tribute was hosted by Jennifer and Amanda and by all accounts, was a very special tribute to these great parents. Happy Anniversary, Mom and Dad, from Jennifer and Amanda. We love you!

BEACH BOYS BENEFIT

The Committee Members of the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund would like to invite all of you to spend an evening with The Beach Boys on Sunday, Aug. 19 at the South Shore Music Circus at 9 p.m. The tickets for this show are $60 and $30 goes right to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. For tickets, please contact Ron Ford, 383-6103, Linda Bolster, 383-6148 or Linda Shultz at 383-0597. This will be a wonderful evening and will support a truly, fantastic cause.

That is all for this week. Please make sure to slow down in all aspects, especially when driving around town as the kids are all about enjoying the days of summer. All items for each week's column are due to me no later than Monday at noon. All photos can be scanned to me or Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com or dropped off at CohassetNews, Brook Street in the village.

Searching for the story behind the gravestones

Study group visits Cohasset cemetery

By Timothy Llewellyn
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset Central Cemetery at Joy Place was a living text for the members of the Association for Gravestone Studies last Saturday as the group toured the colonial-era-old site, along with cemeteries in Hingham and Weymouth.

"You walk around these gravestones, and it's said that every other stone is the stone of a child. We don't lose children wholesale like that anymore," said geologist Dan Lynch at Hingham Cemetery, which is behind Old Ship Church. "It's the way the world was then, it's the way the world is not now. It gives you a chance to appreciate what we've got... the only word that I can think of is blessing."

The association is national group of nearly 2,000 members, who are interested in studying gravestones for their historical, artistic and social value.

"As far as I'm concerned, cemeteries are frozen history," said Princeton, N.J. resident Bruce Finnie. "The way that people are buried reflects the way that people lived."

Saturday's group of about 30 members, led by Vince Luti of Westport, was particularly interested in visiting the stones carved by Abington carvers John New and the Pratt family, and Scituate's Jacob Vinal, of which there are fine examples in Cohasset's Central Cemetery.

"There is superb Vinal in Cohasset," Luti said.

New and the Pratts also worked in the Hingham, Weymouth and Cohasset area in the 18th century. The carvers' work is cut from a red slate that is native to the Abington area, and differs from the more common Boston gray slate. Their stylized images of the souls of the deceased marked a "change in religious attitude in the 17th and 18th centuries, away from the grim Puritanical view of death. They represent a softening of this view," according to Luti.

But the group stresses that religious attitudes are not the only thing that can be learned from cemetery studies. In fact, the cemetery can be used as a versatile teaching resource. The group, and the diverse interests of its members, is a testament to the cemetery's flexibility as a primary source of history.

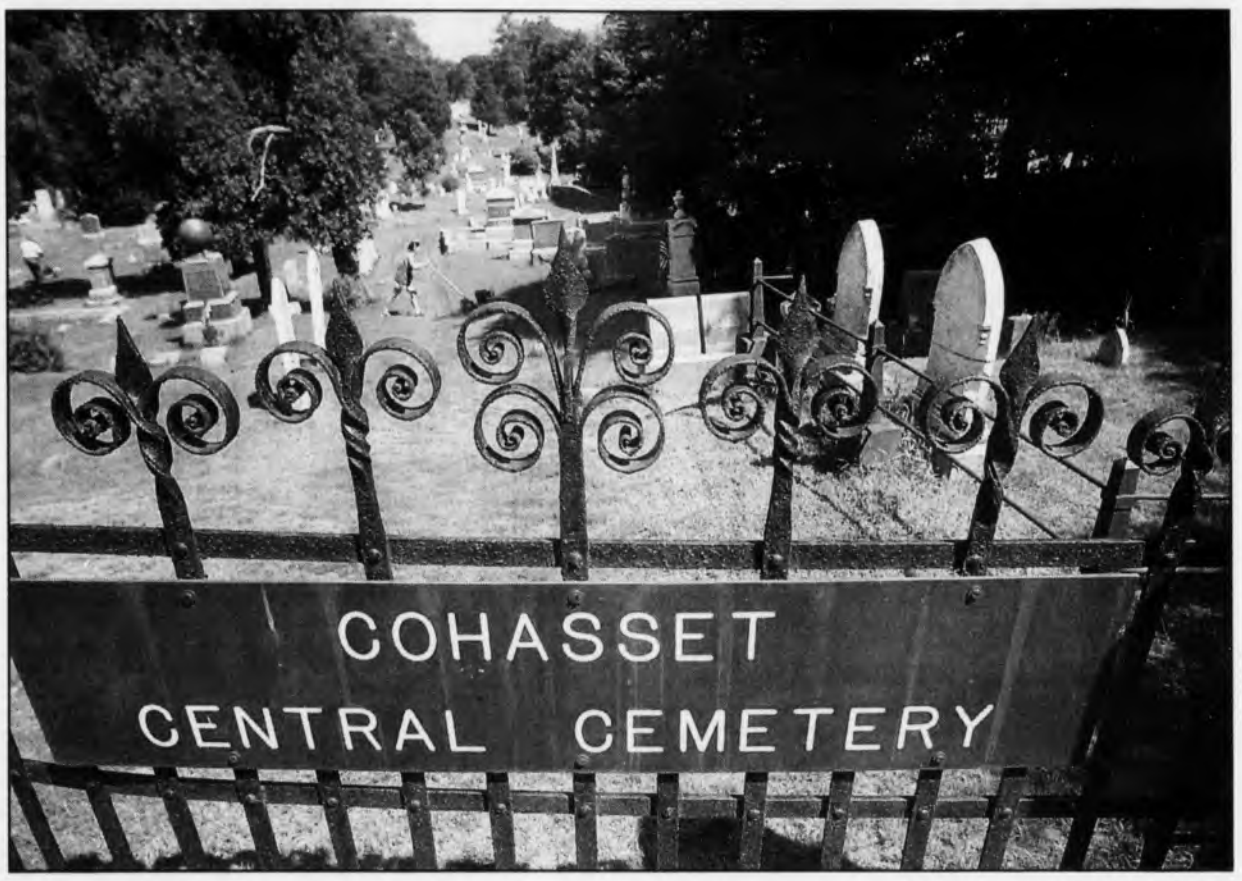
"Some members are interested in cemeteries for their religious symbolism or art history, some are interested in the stones themselves and how they were shaped," said association member Laurel Gable.

Luti points out that the iconography, lifespan and epitaphs can reveal volumes about the region's demographic movements, medical history, religious persuasions and even perspective on death.

Luti explained that Central Cemetery at Joy Place with its hillocks and natural terrain evolved from its colonial beginnings into becoming part of the cemetery garden movement that started at Mt. Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge in the 1800s. Then cemeteries became places to stroll, sit and reflect, or enjoy the scenery. That trend was in sharp contrast to the colonial era when cemeteries were put on "useless flat ground."

"In the 1800s, people talked of death as the great sleep," Luti said. But in colonial times, the cemetery was just a way station — the people in it were just dead and their souls had gone up or down, he said.

Luti also pointed out the wrought iron fences that look like tree saplings at Central Cemetery are a particularly fine example of cemetery ornamentation of the garden era.



The Association for Gravestone Studies will celebrate its 25th anniversary next year. It was founded by a group of gravestone enthusiasts, mostly historians and scholars, who understood the educational value of the nation's cemeteries. Its members participate in lectures, exhibitions and annual conferences like this year's New England tour. The association. also publishes a quarterly newsletter as well as an annual scholarly journal called "Markers."

"As far as I'm concerned, cemeteries are frozen history."
— Bruce Finnie, association member

"People now look at their cemeteries differently, and with more care," said Luti, a retired college professor who has an expert in 18th-century stone carvers.

Further inquires can be directed to the association., which can be found online at www.gravestonestudies.org.

Editor Mary Ford also contributed to this story.

Bradley hosts beach cleanup

Saturday June 30, state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) will conduct a Sandy Beach cleanup in Cohasset. Bradley, who plans to make the cleanup an annual event, said his office has received calls describing trash on the beach.

"It is very important that we keep our beaches clean," he said. "I went down to investigate for myself and found that there is a substantial buildup of trash. Although the town does what it can to remove it, I thought perhaps we could help. I hope people are able to join us, even if it is for a short while."

The event will take place this Saturday June 30 from 8-10 a.m. at Sandy Beach. Trash bags and refreshments will be provided.

Happy Birthday!

The South Shore Music Circus officially turns 50 Saturday. It opened half-a-century ago this week when the Big Top opened with the musical "Show Boat."

There is nary a middle-aged or older native to Cohasset, or the surrounding towns, who doesn't have a "Music Circus" memory or two from the "good old days."

As a young girl in the early 1960s, I remember getting Anita Bryant's autograph while she was sunbathing on Minot Beach. She was starring in "Annie Get Your Gun" at the Music Circus and was staying at the Minot Light Inn.

I also recall a school friend whose older sister worked at the Music Circus one summer and had her picture taken with Hollywood heartthrob Tab Hunter, the prospect of which, sent us all into a collective swoon.

The old Cliff Hotel in Minot featured the Music Circus stars' names above the doorframes of the rooms where they stayed. Mr. Brazilian, the hotel's owner, even had a pink telephone installed for Zsa Zsa Gabor when she stayed there.

But as David Wadsworth, curator of the Cohasset Historical Society, points out — as tastes changed —musicals such as, "The King & I," "Paint Your Wagon," and "West Side Story" faded from popularity, eventually giving way to other types of entertainment.

In recent years, the theater in the round is following the national popularity of "Country-Western" music as evidenced by the season opener this Saturday featuring Wynonna. Other country stars this summer include Trisha Yearwood, Vince Gill, Dwight Yoakam and Kenny Rogers.

But despite musical trends, what hasn't changed is the pristine Sohier Street setting of the Music Circus and the special relationship the theater has with the community. It would be hard to imagine Cohasset — with its rich theatrical history — without the Music Circus.

Also, the commitment to the community of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, the parent organization of both the Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent, continues to be as strong as ever. Over the years the associates have given back $1.3 million to nonprofit organizations across the South Shore and Cape Cod. Those include the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, South Shore Conservatory in Hingham and the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

So there's no doubt that Cohasset and the playhouse associates have a unique partnership that serves both very well. We've even covered Town Meetings and graduations under the tent!

So happy birthday, Music Circus! And who knows, if Broadway musical revivals continue to draw crowds, we might see some of the old shows back in town.

Fine arts

Travel to Europe and you'll find the arts are like breathing. No school system could imagine living without them. Yet here on the other "side of the pond" — art is often on the chopping block at schools during tight budgetary times. In our experience as reporters, the arts always seem to give way to math, science and other subjects.

So we find it encouraging that here in Cohasset — visual arts, choral and instrumental music, and photography are increasingly popular. So much so, that the high school is adding an art teaching position and an art department head. We think the importance of a "well-rounded" education included the arts cannot be understated in these high-tech times.

As Emerson said, "every genuine work of art has as much reason for being as the earth and the sun."

An emphasis on the arts speak well of the school system and the students' parents, who make the arts a priority.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Eye exams warranted

TO THE EDITOR:

As co-owner of Village Wine & Spirits, I would like to address the numerous errors reported by the Cohasset Police concerning the alleged marijuana plant "found" outside Village Wine & Spirits.

On the evening of June 17, which is the day in question, I received a phone call from a Cohasset civil servant giving me a "heads up" on a certain plant the police had noticed in front of our store. I immediately went to the store and was able to identify, on the side of the store, a plant that looked to my untrained-but-garden-club-eyes, as the cannabis family.

Accompanied by my neighbor, Paula Buick of Highland Avenue, we delivered the plant to the Cohasset Police. Upon examining the plant, the police officer in charge (a very pleasant man) informed us that the plant was a weed.

Unfortunately, the police brief the June 21 [Mariner] would lead one to believe that two random, older women came upon a marijuana plant, with roots intact, in front of Village Wine & Spirits.

The numerous errors of this report can only be further substantiated by the most glaring error of all — Paula Buick and myself, two women in the obvious prime of their lives, were identified as "older women." I think for the well-being of the entire community, Chief Noonan should give a thorough eye exam to the entire police force.

Amyra O'Connell,
Highland Court
and Paula Buick
Highland Avenue

Editor's note: Police said the marijuana plant tested negative and apologize for misrepresenting the women's ages.

'No comment at this time'

The Board of Selectmen recently received cross-complaints from two town officials [Planning Board member Peter Pratt and Town Manager Mark Haddad] regarding an alleged incident at Town Hall. Due to the sensitivity of these complaints, the selectmen have chosen to follow a due process procedure of hiring an independent investigator to determine the facts of this alleged incident.

The independent investigator will determine the validity of both complaints and recommend a course of action to the selectmen. It is anticipated that the completed report will be delivered to the Board of Selectmen by July 6. The next scheduled meeting of the Board of Selectmen will be July 10. Until that time, the Board of Selectmen will have no official comment on the issue due to the judicial nature of the due process procedures.

Editor's note: This is a press release from the Board of Selectmen

HEALTH NOTES

Seagulls likely cause of Sandy Beach odor

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This spring, the Board of Health has received numerous complaints of pungent odors at the east end of Sandy Beach.

The Sandy Beach Association, thinking the smell have come from the bathhouse septic system, had the system inspected and cleaned, but the odors persisted on an intermittent basis.

Several inspections have revealed, on occasion, in addition to the heavy seaweed smell (rotting vegetable matter, which is quite normal), a more pungent odor. Such a smell could come from Brush Island where we have an active and large seagull rookery. Seagulls are typically disorderly and generally quite messy. Anyone who has visited the place would agree that Brush Island is a smelly place because of the large bird population.

For the smell to reach Sandy beach, the wind direction would have to be north by east, or east northeast. Such a wind direction is not common; particularly in good weather; hence the intermittent nature of the odors.

Public health nurse hours

In the Health Notes of May 31, a schedule of the office hours for Judy Fitzsimmons, the town's public health nurse, was published. Some people were led to believe that these were the only hours she worked. In addition to office hours and work at the senior housing and the community center, Judy makes calls to shut-ins, and others in need of home visits. In all, Judy spends 25 hours per week working for the town. Starting on July 2, Judy's office hours will be Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8:30-11 a.m., and the second Thursday in the month, from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Senior Center at the community center; and on the fourth Thursday, from 1- 3 p.m. at the Senior Housing facility at 60 Elm St.. She makes house visits as needed. The Board of Health will maintain a list of services which will be available from the town nurse, and we have a calendar of health related events which may be expected over the next year.

Flushing upper Little Harbor

We would like to acknowledge one of the small services which some people do for the town without prompting or acknowledgement, one of the reasons that Cohasset is so special. At the time of every spring tide (approximately twice a month) you may have noticed that upper Little Harbor goes dry between tides for a day or two. This is because Cat Dam is designed with sluices which can be removed to let the water out at low tide.

Every spring tide the DPW comes by Cat Dam with a truck and opens the dam sluiceways and then comes back a few days later and closes things up. The people responsible for this schedule are Doris and Denis McNulty, who live on Nichols Road. Twice a year they get hold of a tide table, figure out the best times to open Cat Dam, and send a letter to Harold Litchfield, head of the DPW, with copies to all those with homes bordering upper Little Harbor. The result is that Little Harbor is mostly algae free, except for a short period in June when algae growth is at its most prolific. In a bad year, the McNultys may keep the dam open for a week; and in the winter, for three months the dam is open full time. This timely activity has enabled the control of nutrients (nitrogen containing plant food found in storm runoff) and a vast reduction in algae growth in Upper Little Harbor. Actually, there is a group of concerned citizens around upper Little Harbor who have been active in caring for that water body for a number of years. In the 80s they helped pay for a study to determine the cause of algae growth, and a few years ago, they paid for painting and refurbishing Cat Dam. In 1999, there was a large algae bloom, so in December of 2000, when the dam schedule was sent out, the Board of Health attached a notice giving pointers about turf management near bodies of water like Little Harbor, which would reduce the flow of nutrients from land near the water. Copies of these documents are available at the Board of Health.

Stephen Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

More donors and some lobbying for new library

By Patience Towle and Sheila Evans
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

— COMMENTARY —

Since May 24, 55 new donors, have pledged another $23,460 to the Cohasset Library Building Fund. In addition, pledges of about $252,000 have been reported earlier here, including two large gifts that total $190,000. Combined with the more than $800,000 pledged in the last year, the library trustees are confident that their promise to raise $1.1 million from private sources will succeed. In fact, with pledges to date from less than 15 percent of Cohasset's households, there are obviously many more who will want to participate. If more money is raised than is needed for the actual building and furnishing of the new library at the old Osgood School, the Trustees plan to establish an endowment fund to assure the library's future maintenance.

In response to the disappointing news that Cohasset and 35 other towns did not receive one of the ten Massachusetts Library Construction Grants awarded on June 7, the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners is taking the lead in identifying the most effective ways to persuade the legislature to appropriate new money for construction grants. The first such effort will be proof of public support for these construction grants by a demonstration at the Statehouse in Boston on Wednesday, July 11 from 11 a.m. to noon. The library trustees are organizing Cohasset's representation, and encourage anyone who would like to join us to call Patience Towle at (781) 383-1954. The group will leave Cohasset about 9:30 a.m. and be back by about 1:15 p.m.. This is grassroots democracy and we are told such efforts really make a difference! The more the merrier!

New donors to the building fund include: Bill and Marilyn Adams, Helen and Ethan Arnold, Sally Barber, Joseph L. and Katherine Becker, John and Meg Bertolami, Gregory and Ellen Bertovich, Lincoln and Iri Bloomfield, Joe and Joan Busk, Joseph and Susan Carrabes, James P. Cifrino, Brian and Patty Connors, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Cook, Kevin and Sandy Crough, Joseph M. and Lauren Curley, Chris and Jeannie de Muras, Louis F. and Robin L. Eaton, Jenna L. Emmons, Linda Farrag, Sarah Whitley Ferguson, Andrea B. and Richard F. Flynn, Garry and Linda Gardner, Frederick and Nancy Garrison, Joan B. Graham, Christa F. and Daniel Hagearty, Alice B. and Robert J. Hall, Martha Horsefield, Michael and Nina Hughes, Katherine Kearns, Susan and Michael Kent, the Norman F. Knight family, Martha L. Magnuson, the Martin/Roine family, Dan and Bridget McGovern, William and Molly McGowan, the McMorris family, James and Olive Mullen, Mr. and Mrs. Richard V. Murphy, Chris and Bronnie Nelson, Dorothy R. P. Palmer, Philip and Susan Pergola, Peter F. and F. Jane Pescatore, Arthur M. Pompeo, Jr., Virginia and Jack Riley, Joe and Carol Sandblom, Dr. Robert and Laneve Savola, Margaret W. Smalzel, Elizabeth A. and Kevin W. Soule, Donald and Mary St. Sauveur, Philip and Judy Tedeschi, M. James and Sandra Theriault, Caroline and Robert Thomas, Grace and Ned Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. D. Reid Weedon, Jr., Eleanor C. Williams, Doug and Pam Wilson and two anonymous donors..

The first such effort will be proof of public support for these construction grants by a demonstration at the Statehouse in Boston on Wednesday, July 11 from 11 a.m. to noon.

Gifts of $1,000 or more will be permanently displayed on the Donor Wall of the new library. Names will be listed in broad "giving categories" by size of gift. All donors will be listed in a final Campaign Report. The Cohasset Library Building Fund plans to publish the names of new donors to the building fund on a regular basis. If you did not receive a library building fund appeal, please call Patience Towle at (781) 383-1954.

Library trustees Patience Towle and Sheila Evans are also president and secretary, respectively, of the Cohasset Library Building Fund.

Where's June Cleaver gone?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I can see her now, a towering figure on the small screen — or, at least, we thought of her as towering in those days. June Cleaver, the consummate homemaker in starched gingham protected by a spotless white apron, preparing the roast for husband Ward's dinner while nurturing the kids, Wally and the Beaver, and seeing through Eddie Haskell's latest wile.

But after what I've seen in the past couple of weeks, all that, along with Margaret Anderson, Carol Brady and, yes, even That Girl, has gone down the drain in the face of action heroines and villains (or is it villainesses) that would make Arnold and Bruce turn in their nung-chucks.

First, there's Erica Chase, only a couple of years out of Nauset High School, sitting on a 50-pound bag of ammonium nitrate, the kind that Timothy McVeigh used to attract all those TV vans with their satellite dishes to Oklahoma City.

She and her boy friend, Leo Felton, who flew a Nazi flag for all to see in the window of their North End apartment, allegedly planned to go after McVeigh's record of 168 while blowing up the Holocaust Memorial in Boston.

There were Laila Ali and Jacqui Frazier-Lyde, daughters of two former heavyweight champions (male), who drew on the gloves for a national TV audience and a live attendance that paid $50 to $300 a seat to watch them in Verona, N.Y.

Ali won but we were assured that the real women's champion was Christy Martin, who was going to defend her title against Holland's Lucia Rijker, so get your tickets before they're gone. Neither fighter has been known to bite an opponent in the ear.

Only last fall, Rosalie Parker, a Harvard grad who is doing advanced work at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, came home to join a U. S. amateur boxing team against a team of Russians. Rosalie lost.

"I'll do better next time," she said.

Where is Dr. Laura when we need her?

Amy O'Brien, coach of the Ashland High School girls' basketball team, was fired as a result of a fight between her girls and members of the Greater New Bedford Vocational High School in the opening round of the state tournament.

"Some shoulders rubbed together, our coach jumped up and said, 'Hey, come on,' and all of a sudden, both benches emptied," said Ashland School Superintendent Richard Hoffman. "The kids started wrestling on the floor."

These are high school girls, mind you. There's no truth to the report that former Bruins Coach Don Cherry offered them all scholarships to play for his junior team, the Mississauga Ice Dogs.

It's getting so you can't even go to the movies to get away from female violence. One of the most popular flicks this summer is "Lara Croft; Tomb Raider." If it wasn't for that compulsory shower scene — whew, don't worry; I'm all right — you'd think the star, Angelina Jolie, was Bruce Willis himself.

Maybe that's why that Brockton boy, who was known only as "Pat Doe," went to court for permission to wear girls' clothes to school.

He just wanted to toughen up his image, that's all.

COHASSET CARES

'Think about the other guy'

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The hot issues at the moment are the gigantic, ghastly, and grotesque accumulations of cooking fat recently discovered in our sewers, but only really inevitable since we've been just pouring fat down America's drains and Mass. lawmakers considering sales tax adjustments dependent upon the gas mileage of the car we purchase.

But there's something else that's timely. One of the great privileges of my life—among them having the opportunity to spend 27 years with Cohasset High School students and their parents — was knowing some WW II heroes. We've all known heroes of one sort or another. It's good spiritually to honor these people. One was Marine Congressional Medal of Honor recipient Everett Pope, a quiet fellow who had been a captain of one of my dad's wrestling teams and written up in a book on the awful battle for Peleleu. Another was my Uncle Russ, who drove a tank in Africa, a man who reminds me of a Robbins for his uncanny motor vehicle expertise. And the inimitable Evie Dorr, who hit the beach carrying the heavy .30 cal. machine gun, was a beloved colleague.

Both of my fathers-in-law were military men of considerable stature — one a career Coast Guard maverick who worked his way up through enlisted ranks to become a commander. The other, Fordie, I want to focus on here today. Fordie spent six years in the submarine service [my cousin Herbert was killed in a WW II sub, by friendly fire]. Fordie's boat, the Halibut, set a record for withstanding Japanese depth charging; the crew credited their survival to the Mainers who built/overbuilt her.

PAYT system is really designed for civic decency predicated on personal integrity.

One of Fordie's standard remarks to his children and grandchildren was 'Think of the other guy.' As Pay-as-you-throw ushers in the Fourth of July on July 1, as we reflect on Memorial Day, as we ponder Pearl Harbor, I ask us to think about this PAYT system which is really designed for civic decency predicated on personal integrity. It may not seem too heroic to put the toothpaste carton inside the cake mix carton which goes inside the cereal box and then into the corrugated bin at the RTF after the non-recyclable plastic or waxed liners have been removed and put into the $1 blue and white TOWN OF COHASSET bag, but these small actions on our part save our RTF employees from having to do this for us on behalf of the community and the planet. PAYT means more work for all of us, but it's for the common good, and it's really a matter of caring. We care about the functioning of our town, and we care about the condition of our world. We think about what it's like to handle recyclables that have been thoughtfully cleaned. We try to do the best job we can, whether anyone's looking or not.

TEACHERS WITH CLASS

ELIZABETH OWENS-RIGBY

The 2000-2001 school year saw the addition of two new science teachers to the Cohasset High School faculty. Both Ann Thomae and Melissa Webster have taught previously at the college level and have an interest in helping their students relate science education to the world around them.

Dr. Thomae earned a bachelor's of science degree from Boston College and a doctorate from Glasgow University in Scotland. Presently, she is continuing her education by working towards a master's of education degree at UMass Boston. Dr. Thomae worked as a teaching assistant during her doctoral program, as a high school science teacher in Scituate, and as a middle-school science teacher at a Montessori school. Although she taught during her doctoral program, Dr. Thomae's inspiration for beginning a teaching career came from studying the developmental processes of her own children, Jean (age 9) and Jack (age 6). She decided that she wanted to contribute to the educational environment in which her children would participate. Dr. Thomae enjoys integrating her science curriculum with the world through projects related to the environment, such as water-quality monitoring.

Melissa Webster

Ann Thomae

Melissa Webster earned her undergraduate degree in physical therapy at the University of Buffalo and her master's degree in science education from Columbia University. She worked as a physical therapist, specializing in treating pediatric clients. Ms. Webster enjoyed working with her young clients and recalled how much she had loved teaching at the college level, and decided to combine her two passions in the field of teaching science at the high school level. Ms. Webster feels it is important for students to relate what they are learning in the classroom to everyday life. A favorite project involves her biology students independently reading a science-related article from a media source. Each student presents their information to the class and discussion ensues in which all the students have the opportunity to relate their learning to the world around them

Both Dr. Thomae an Ms. Webster bring a variety of educational experiences and talents to Cohasset High School. The science department and the high school students will have many opportunities to grow with these new faculty members over the coming years.

Surgeon General's warning needed on SUVs

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

I was thinking about carbon dioxide the other day and how unnoticeable it is. I had driven Nan over to Blockbuster to rent a movie, and was sitting in the parking lot watching people drive by on similar innocuous errands. Thinking how each car that drove by left an invisible trail of carbon dioxide. More carbon dioxide than can be absorbed by Mother Earth. It's hard to grasp how global warming can be caused by something we can't see, smell, feel, taste, or hear spewing out our car's tailpipe. As we drive around Cohasset we can't perceive this danger. It's so easy to pretend we're not hurting the ecosystem every time we drive our cars. Denial is effortless, and relieves us of the pain of the truth.

I grew up around cars. My father owned and operated a gas station in Pennsylvania, and I worked there pumping gas. I learned to drive when I was twelve. In high school I dreamt of owning a hot rod '55 Chevy. Cars became second nature to me. We didn't know then the carbon dioxide produced by cars would one day disrupt the entire atmospheric balance of the planet. It's hard for me to acknowledge cars are now killing nature.

Suddenly a funny image popped into my mind. What if car manufacturers, like the cigarette companies, were required by law to stencil a warning, from headlight to taillight, on both sides of every car? What if there were the ecological equivalent of the Surgeon General, call her Doctor Earth, who would remind us of the drastic harm our innocent-seeming daily driving causes?

What should the warning on the side of cars say? I tried to remember the wording on cigarette packages, but couldn't. Next morning on my bike ride I spotted a green cigarette package on the side of the road and stopped to pick it up. Newport Lights. "SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Smoking By Pregnant Women May Result in Fetal Injury, Premature Birth, And Low Birth Weight". Very strange. Reading this warning would tell any literal-minded child or non-pregnant adult that smoking Newport Lights is perfectly safe. I rode on.

On Beechwood Street I noticed one of those red and white packages so beloved of ruggedly handsome cowboys. I stopped and picked it up. "SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Smoking Causes Lung Cancer, Heart Disease, Emphysema, And May Complicate Pregnancy." That was more like it! At least cowboys tell it like it is, except to pregnant women.

I learned to smoke cigarettes back in Pennsylvania too. Very pleasant really; very satisfying to the senses. You have this little cylinder of tobacco to occupy your fingers. You can imitate various movie stars in how you hold it or dangle it from your lips. A satisfying outlet for oral compulsivity. An opportunity for those deprived of sufficient breast-feeding to make up lost nipple time. Then there's the unique sensation of inhaling smoke into your lungs. Odd that something which is a threat to life can become a pleasure. Firemen say more people die from smoke inhalation than from the flames.

There's a ritual to smoking cigarettes, which includes two of Earth's basic elements—fire and wind. You get to make a tiny fire and take some of the results right into your body. Then there's the pleasure of exhaling the white smoke in long plumes, donuts, or dragon-like streams from your nostrils. The smoke makes the other element, wind, miraculously visible. There's the ritual of carelessly flicking the ashes away. (Of course I never inhaled.)

There's nothing about the whole ritual that feels dangerous. You can't taste the oxidizer added to guarantee constant combustion. You can't sense the extra nicotine added to increase addiction. You can't tell you're giving yourself lung cancer, inviting an early and painful death. Just like driving, it seems totally pleasurable and harmless.

I got to thinking maybe I should increase the depth of my research beyond discarded cigarette packs. What is the atmosphere made of anyway, and why is a little more carbon dioxide such a big deal? A little Internet action and mouse clicking produced some fascinating information. There's hardly any carbon dioxide in the atmosphere! Far less than 1%! Air within the first 50 miles of the Earth's surface consists of 78.09% nitrogen, 20.943% oxygen, 0.93% argon, and only 0.037% carbon dioxide. That's only 370 parts per million. It seems to go against common sense that such a minuscule portion of the atmosphere could cause a problem as big as global warming. I decided to dig a little deeper.

I learned Earth is surrounded by what are called greenhouse gases: carbon dioxide, water vapor, methane, nitrous oxide, CFC-12, HCFC-22, perfluoromethane, sulphur hexa-fluoride. When sunlight warms the Earth, this layer of gases prevents the heat from escaping into space, just as a greenhouse traps the heat of sunlight more children's shows now," said Music Circus General Manager Vince Longo.

When Longo came aboard in November 1992, he said the Music Circus was floundering a bit with "mainly middle of the road acts." Since then, he has worked hard to draw from the wide variety of tastes among entertainment seekers.

"We bring in some stuff that has broad appeal," he said.

This year's featured performers include comedians Kevin James, star of the TV show "King of Queens," and Jay Mohr, from the movie "Jerry Maguire," rock and rollers Jethro Tull and The Beach Boys, adult contemporary artists Bruce Hornsby and The Robert Cray Band, country stars Kenny Rogers, Tricia Yearwood and Wynonna – who kicks of the season Saturday – and golden oldies Tony Bennett, The Sammy Kaye Orchestra and Jerry Vale.

"Our principal activity is to support other non-profit organizations involved in the arts, entertainment and recreation."

— Bruce Cameron, South Shore Playhouse Associates

But despite the regional attention the Music Circus receives, it has always been, and remains very much tied to the community.

"We are a non-profit organization, and our principal activity is to make every effort to support other non-profit organizations involved in the arts, entertainment and recreation," said Cameron.

Last year, more than $150,000 was donated to 40 groups around the South Shore and Cape Cod, such as the South Shore Arts Center, South Shore Conservatory and Cohasset Drama Club.

"We think of ourselves as an integral part of the community," said Longo. "The community really works with us to make it successful."

Between 80,000 and 100,000 patrons filled the 2,300-seat theater last summer.

"It's just a really convenient way to see a live performance," he said.

Of course, the Music Circus' relationship with its Sohier Street neighbors has become a bit strained at times – one of the downfalls of having a concert venue in the middle of a residential neighborhood.

After a particularly loud Blondie concert in the late-1970s, neighbors sued to get decibel restrictions and a curfew put in place, according to David Wadsworth. Neighbors also fiercely objected when the Music Circus applied for a liquor license in 1983. They won that battle, but lost in 1993.

The Music Circus was built on an old horse show grounds. In 1947, as summer theater struggled to survive in Cohasset Town Hall, a group of interested theater goers, including Mrs. John Vosoff, G. Prescott Low, and Dr. Henry Howe formed the South Shore Playhouse Association.

Summer theater had been very successful in Cohasset throughout the 1930s, bringing hopeful actors such as Humphrey Bogart to town. But when profits dropped post-World War II, the Playhouse looked under the glass.

Carbon dioxide is exchanged naturally between three active reservoirs: the atmosphere, the ocean, and terrestrial (or land-based) ecosystems. You probably know plants absorb carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, converting it into their bodies, and give off oxygen, which is very handy for those of us who breathe it. Over the ages a lot of this carbon remained in the plant bodies, and turned into soil, coal and petroleum. A balance was established. Carbon in the atmosphere had remained at 278 parts per million (ppm) for about the last 10,000 years, and the Earth's climate had been relatively stable. But due to burning fossil fuels and converting forest land to agriculture, carbon dioxide in the atmosphere has increased to 385 ppm currently. This increase is now causing serious climate disruptions. Conservative predictions say it will rise to 500 ppm this century, which will cause drastic climate change. Some scientists predict it may rise as high as 700 ppm, which would result in a horrible climate scenario, at least for humans.

According to Bill McKibben, there are few possible acts available for concerned people. Global warming is in the process of happening and there's very little we can do about it. He described pranksters in San Francisco slapping bumper stickers on SUV's that read, "I'm doing something about global warming. Ask me how." Maybe it will be only a token gesture to assuage our guilt, but we can reduce the amount of carbon dioxide we generate. We can refuse to buy gas-guzzling vehicles. The worst SUVs get 12 miles per gallon (mpg). The average car gets 23 mpg. The Toyota Prius gets up to 50 mpg. The Honda Insight gets up to 70 mpg. Buy an Insight instead of an SUV and reduce your carbon dioxide output by 580%! Reduce your gas bill by 580% too! Or ride a bicycle instead of driving on those little errands. Demand a master plan in Cohasset that promotes new homes within walking or biking distance of all daily errands. Check out the soon-to-be-published Cohasset Open Space Plan for ways to reduce carbon dioxide generated by household heating and electrical use.

So what would I like to see stenciled on the sides of every vehicle powered by non-renewable fuel? How about: DOCTOR EARTH'S WARNING: DRIVING THIS VEHICLE IS HARMFUL TO EVERYONE'S HEALTH.

Music Circus has entertained crowds for half a century to revive summer theater by building a modern facility.

However, in 1950 the Hyannis Music Circus opened under the leadership of New York producer Richard Aldrich. The Playhouse jumped on the idea and a similar tent, operated under Aldrich's supervision, opened in Cohasset in 1951.

Unlike today's facility, the Music Circus of 1951 lacked any permanent structures — it was a tent, with directors-style canvas chairs and wooden folding chairs on wooden planks built into a slight embankment leading down to the stage.

Among the first season's shows were "Showboat," "New Moon," "Merry Widow," "Brigadoon," "Naughty Marietta," and "Song of Norway."

Former resident Roger Leonard recently wrote how the performers in these shows stood out in proper 1950s Cohasset.

"One might say they became our counter culture during the long hot days of summer. The young women wore Capri pants, halter tops and other more revealing articles of apparel. It should be remembered as a time in fashion when ladies wore either skirts or dresses in public," he remembered. "Some smoked. Others applied exotic eye make-up. Peroxide blondes became those who were perceived with a high degree of visibility. They seemed to draw attention to themselves. All of this was curious behavior for the onlooker in those days, and it obviously set theatrical people apart from the conservative Cohasset citizenry of the 1950s."

Wadsworth, a production apprentice in 1954, remembered the original tent as being a massive dark green canvas tent, and was present when two hurricanes ended the theater season early.

"In late summer Hurricane 'Carol' devastated coastal New England on a scale not seen since the 1938 hurricane, and the Cohasset tent finally victim to winds of well more than 100 miles per hour. The big tent didn't give way without a fight, however, as those of us in the company struggled to keep its edges taut and firmly attached to the ground. It was only after the supply of small wooden perimeter poles had been used up, and many broken in the process, that the vast canvas top began the uncontrollable shaking that tore its heavy canvas and laid waste to chairs near the tall quarter poles," he recently wrote in a letter to the Mariner.

"But there was no way the shredded canvas of the Cohasset tent could be repaired after 'Carol's' 1954 visit. The show being performed on the week of the hurricane was the western "Paint Your Wagon" and its fine production run ended prematurely. Whatever damage hadn't been done by hurricane "Carol" was completed by hurricane "Edna" a week later, and the summer season was over for the Cohasset theater."

Now, Longo said, the tent is able to be lowered in case of a strong storm where winds are expected to reach 85 miles per hour. Although he has had to do it in Cape Cod a couple of times, he hasn't had to lower the tent in Cohasset since the early 1990s.

Wadsworth said it was under Ron Rawson in the 1960s that the Music Circus recognized the change of interest from operettas and musicals to more contemporary forms of entertainment.

"Instead of traveling troupes, it went to a more Las Vegas-type entertainment," said Cameron, who has been involved with the Playhouse for more than two decades.

The town was abuzz when Bob Hope came to town for five shows in the mid-70s. The Music Circus hit the national spotlight on July 27, 1977 when singer Tony Orlando suddenly announced to a stunned crowd mid-set that he was retiring from performing that night. Professional wrestler Mick Foley talked about doing the "tent circuit" and coming to Cohasset in his best-selling 1999 autobiography.

Other performers have included Diana Ross, Liza Minelli, Wayne Newton, Englebert Humperdinck, and Johnny Mathis.

Although the acts have changed, the impetus behind them haven't; to provide summer entertainment to the South Shore in different ways.

"I think we've held true to that," said Cameron. "We're there to support the communities and we've tried to do that year in and year out."

A look inside the Music Circus during a performance, circa mid-1950s. Early audiences sat on director-style chairs, placed on top of wooden planks

Health department begins bacteria testing in Cohasset waters

"just about zero."

The smell also comes and goes.

"Sometimes you get a smell, sometimes you don't," said Godzik.

The theory, which Godzik and Board of Health Chairman Stephen Bobo are leaning toward, is the seagull rookery on nearby Brush Island.

Bobo said in his latest set of health notes (see page 7) that the island is a popular hangout for the "generally quite messy" birds, and the scent could arrive at Sandy Beach on a northeast or east northeast wind, which are common in good weather.

Godzik has also been testing for enterococci, a group of bacteria that is the "generally accepted health risk indicator." Until last year, health officials tested water for fecal coliform counts, but enterococci is the new red flag when looking for bacteria because it is more sustainable in water for testing purposes than fecal coliform.

Once a week throughout the summer, Godzik takes a 125-milliliter water samples from Little Harbor by Cunningham Bridge, Black Rock Beach, Sandy Beach, and from the Cohasset Yacht Club and Cohasset Sailing Club in Cohasset Harbor.

The samples are then picked up by G&L Laboratories in Quincy. So far, the samples have come back "below detection levels."

The only spot that raised concern last year was by the sailing club, where twice the waters were closed because of high counts. Godzik attributed the high counts to a heavy rainfall days before the testing.

"Those levels are generally associated with rainstorms," he explained, "and they're probably not going to go away."

He said its natural for bodies of water to see their bacteria levels jump after rainstorms because of the run-off from streets and yards.

A new state law requires cities and towns to test their beaches bacteria levels at least once a week and post the results.

Health effects from swimming in polluted water includes ear infections, conjunctivitis, rashes, and possible gastro-intestinal problems from swallowing the water.

The legislature is debating a $400,000 budget amendment that would partially reimburse towns for the cost of the testing. Cohasset pays $18.50 per sample tested, the money for which comes from the laboratory analysis line item in the Board of Health's budget.

It's unclear how much money Cohasset would be reimbursed.

Interestingly, the town could technically get away with doing next to no testing. Sandy Beach, although open to the public, falls under the jurisdiction of the Sandy Beach Association. The town only manages the parking lot. There is no formal beach around Little Harbor, and swimming is prohibited in Cohasset Harbor.

But that won't stop the town from testing the waters anyway.

"We've been doing it before I got here, and I've been here now for 17 years," Godzik said. "We have a long tradition of doing this testing."

School 'treasures' to be up for grabs

In this case, the process involves the school department compiling a list that will be turned over to selectmen who will decide whether to sell the items, give them away or throw them out, Haddad said. Selectmen can also decide where to direct any money from the sale of items. For example, proceeds could go into the athletic revolving fund or a gift account, Haddad said.

Malvey said if the school department spotted something that was a real "gem," it could decide to keep it for the school archives.

School Committee member Chartis Langmaid said she wanted every effort made to pass items on to others.

"I'd like to keep as much out of the trash pile as we can," she said.

Trash resulting from school construction is covered under in the project's price tag. But the school department will be responsible for disposal of unwanted or unusable items — such as old athletic equipment or old chairs — not directly related to the project and not worthy of inclusion on the list for selectmen, Malvey said Tuesday.

School Committee member Pat Martin reminded the board the town sold the old, obsolete fire boxes a few years back. The fire boxes, which contained a lever to be pulled in an emergency, were installed on poles around town. Martin bought two during the sale at Town Hall.

"I shipped them off to my brothers who are using them as doorbells," she said.

Haddad said the town raised $5,000 from the fire-box sale. The money was put in the Town Common gift account and some was used to pay for repairs on the town clock housed in the steeple of the First Parish Church.

Fine arts program to expand

10-year cycle. Department heads are relieved of teaching one period for one semester of the school year, Jones said.

"The art program is very highly subscribed right now," Jones told the school committee last week in lobbying for the new positions.

He said, for example, 46 students have signed up for the photography/media course. Therefore, the choice is to add another position or deny some students access to courses, he said.

The formula for determining a department head's stipend is stipulated in the teachers' contract and is an additional .08 percent of the teacher's salary for the first year. The cost is within the budget because of retirements and the hiring of new teachers in at a lower salary level, Jones said.

Jones said the art teaching position can be covered by re-arranging staff and consolidating the smaller science electives. He also said a long-term substitute would be hired to replace a math teacher who will retire mid-year, so the new art position could be added without affecting the fiscal year 2002 budget.

"With enrollment projections, the need we have is in the arts as opposed to math and science," Jones said. He explained that math and science would not be getting short shrift. Classes that are under-subscribed — some number only a four or five students — would still be offered but in a later semester for a greater number of students.

The school committee approved both requests.

Trash system starts Sunday

"It's also an equalizer," said MacDonald. "It allows those who do not have as much trash to pay less. In other words, you pay for what you generate.

"It should encourage people to be less wasteful and we hope it will be more economically sound."

The bags are sold in rolls of 10, and come in two sizes; the 15-gallon bags are 50 cents a bag, and the 30-gallon bags cost $1. Bags are available at Cohasset Hardware, Cohasset Food Mart, Leo Fiori's Exxon Station, Joseph's Hardware and at the town Department of Public Works building at 90 Cedar St.

Haddad said it costs nothing to dispose of recyclables.

Cohasset pays $100 a ton to dispose of regular trash and $15 a ton to get rid of paper. It costs the town nothing to get rid of glass. The town receives $25 a ton for plastic, $30 a ton for corrugated cardboard, and between $80 and $125 for office paper.

Stickers are now available at Town Hall and will be so until the second week of July, said Haddad. They will then be available at the DPW on Saturdays and Sundays and the Town Clerk's Office. Cost of a sticker is $50, and it also serves as a parking sticker for Sandy Beach. Residents can buy just a Sandy Beach parking sticker for $7, and a second all-facilities sticker for $20.

Haddad said residents are able to throw as much away that can fit into the PAYT bags. The RTF will still accept small plastic bags, such as bread bags, filled with household garbage only.

"People do want to recycle and protect the environment, and will see this as a good thing," MacDonald said. "It involves some change in lifestyle, but environmentalists like us think it's for the better."

Lunch service seeks to balance the books

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Representatives from Chartwells — the school dining service in town that just completed the second year of its current contract — told the School Committee last week the lunch program was going to finish out the 2000-2001 school year about $4,700 short. That's because the food service company based its projections on receiving a $7,500 commission from vending machines sales, which was diverted to the school activities revolving fund.

With the vending machine money, Chartwells would have been able to realize a small profit of $2,800 — money that could be put aside for equipment upgrades and the like.

School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo said the food service is not a profit center but should break even.

Steve Berzansky, vice president of Chartwells Northeast, explained the budget was prepared by carrying the soda machine receipts as a "receivable."

Supt. Edward Malvey explained high school administrators opted to divert the "kick-back" received from the soda machines to the school activities revolving account instead of the lunch service. The money pays for events such as "breakfast with the principal," ice cream for National Honor Society events, and the like.

Malvey told the School Committee the money needed to cover the shortfall could be redirected to Chartwells from the vending machine sales or come out of the school budget.

DeGiacomo asked Malvey to give the School Committee — which renewed Chartwells contract — a firm number at its July meeting and come up with a few suggestions on how to cover the cost. The committee was supportive about establishing a line item in future budgets to cover the student activities fund.

Chartwells reported $240,714 in revenue for the 2001-2001 school year with total expenses of $245,414.

Malvey said Tuesday the numbers Chartwells presented did not include the month of June. The June recap will reveal if the school department needs to transfer $4,700 from the vending machine sales to Chartwells to balance the books or something less than that.

What's for lunch?

School catering company tries to attract students

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Sandwich Central, Out Takes and Menutainment may sound like a promotion at the corner deli — not the school cafeteria.

But creativity is critical to making the school lunch program succeed today when the competition for children's palates is tougher than ever.

The price of school lunches will go up 15 cents per meal in the fall to help the bottom line next year. But Chartwells – the lunch service company – hopes promotions and improvements will attract more students to the lunch line. That coupled with the price increase would mean more revenue coming in. With the increase, a school lunch will cost about $2.

"Due to the open campus at the high school, we're not capturing the people we should be," said Steve Berzansky, vice president of Chartwells Northeast. "Participation at the high school is extremely low when compared to the other schools.

"But it's great when it's rainy or there's snow," he said.

Seniors at the middle-high school are allowed to leave school grounds during lunch.

Chartwells will plan an array of new promotions aimed at student eating habits. Middle-high school students can look forward to deli-style sandwiches and wraps made to order; freshly made salads and sandwiches packaged attractively for "grab and go" service; a monthly "Menutainment" featuring taco bar, carving station, potato bar or stir-fry specials; and balanced-choice meals.

Elementary schoolchildren will experience "Pyramid Pete" — promotions encouraging balanced diet — that include posters, beanies and fruit-cup giveaways.

School department hires new business manager, secretary

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The school department has hired Dr. Ivan Klinko as its new business manager, and Jean Callahan as its administrative secretary.

Klinko's hiring is an upgrade from the part-time business manager position and reinstates a position lost to budget cuts more than 10 years ago. Callahan will replace long-time administrative assistant Debbie Greenwood, who is retiring.

Supt. Dr. Edward Malvey said Klinko will manage the "nuts and bolts" of the town's three schools. He will be responsible for accounts receiveable and payable, all personnel in terms of salaries and benefits, school maintenance, custodians, and most importantly budget development.

"He brings a wealth of knowledge to the school system," Malvey said.

Klinko held similar positions in California and Kansas, and most recently was the business manager for Hudson Public Schools.

He said Klinko, who has a MBA from the University of Connecticut, is knowledgeable in state laws regarding public school business operation and has been involved in school construction projects in other districts.

"He has a very well-rounded background," Malvey said.

Klinko, whose annual salary is $79,000, has already started, and is busy working to convert the current accounting system to the new state-mandated system.

The school business office had operated with a part-time business administrator for the past few years, at an annual cost of $42,000.

Malvey said the full-time position is an essential part in the future of the school system.

"It is definitely needed in Cohasset," he said. "The district is growing and the budget is growing incrementally."

Callahan comes to Cohasset from the Hingham Public School system, where she worked in the superintendent's office. The Scituate resident also spent many years working in the Scituate school system before going to Hingham.

"She has a lot of school experience, and central office experience" Malvey said.

Her duties include keeping school records and personnel files, overseeing the superintendent's correspondence, communications and schedule, and other secretarial duties. She will also take the minutes for the school committee meetings.

"She also has a personality second to none," Malvey said. "She has excellent people skills, is very pleasant to be around, has a wonderful demeanor.

"She'll be a tremendous asset to the office."

The position pays $40,000, plus a $2,000 stipend for attending the school committee meetings.

Greenwood, a familiar sight at school committee meetings, is retiring as of July 1.

"I want to wish her the best," Malvey told the school committee at its meeting last Thursday night "It didn't take me long when I came on board to realize what a cracker-jack she was. She has been an excellent secretary."

Cardinals claim Little League crown

By Bill Grimm
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

After losing the series opener last week, the Cardinals won back-to-back games against the Rangers Sunday and Monday nights to capture the Cohasset Little League championship.

The Cards got strong pitching from Michael Grimm and Tim Smith throughout the series. The Cardinal bats came alive in the second game and they used their speed at the top of the order to keep pressure on the Rangers. The Cards got significant contributions from every player on their roster in an outstanding team effort. The Rangers, tough competitors to the end, pushed the Cards to the limit.

Rangers 2 - Cardinals 1

The Rangers' Tommy Chase dominated the first game from the pitching mound. Chase surrendered only two hits and struck out 10 in his six inning complete game effort. Chase kept the Cards batters off balance all night, effectively changing speeds with his array of moving fast balls and off speed deliveries. Tim Smith's home run blast just over the center field fence and Alex Hunt's bunt single in the bottom of the second were the only blemishes in Chase's pitching gem.

The Rangers tied the game in the third. With one out, Chase doubled to the gap in left center. After stealing third, Chase scored on a grounder to short by John Harrington. The Rangers took the lead in the fifth on a clutch two-out rally. Chase doubled again, this time to right center. Fletcher Smalzel followed immediately with a line drive which one-hopped the fence in left center. The Cardinals avoided further damage when Alex Hunt robbed Harrington of a sure double with a beautiful diving grab in right. The Rangers played outstanding defense behind Chase, particularly Fletcher Smalzel behind the plate and Owen Stevenson, who tracked down a number of Cardinal drives in center field.

Cardinals 14 - Rangers 7

On Sunday night, the Cardinals established quickly that they were determined to push the championship series to a final game, plating a pair of runs in the first inning. Ben Libby reached on an error and Michael Grimm singled. A double steal put runners on second and third. Alex Hunt walked to load the bases. After Libby scored on a past ball, Conor Holway lined a clutch single up the middle, bringing home the second run.

The Cardinal lead was short lived, however, as the Rangers scored three runs in their half of the first. Tommy Chase walked and Fletcher Smalzel and John Harrington lined singles to plate one run. A fielder's choice and a throwing error resulted in two unearned Ranger runs.

The Cardinals regained the lead for good in the second. After two quick outs, Libby walked and Grimm singled to left. Alex Hunt drove a double over the left fielder, scoring Libby. Tim Smith followed with a tape measure shot— a 260-foot three-run homer out of Barnes Field.

The Cards added three more runs in the third. Justin Hollis doubled and scored on an RBI single by Josh Lambert. After Lambert stole second, Mark Flibotte lined a single to left, scoring Lambert. Libby followed with an RBI single.

Michael Grimm pitched the complete game victory for the Cardinals. After a shaky start, Grimm settled down in the middle innings, allowing only single runs in the second and third and shutting the Rangers down in the fourth.

The outstanding play of catcher Conor Holway helped. Holway threw out two would-be Ranger base stealers and blocked the plate beautifully while making a great tag to prevent another Ranger run. Nick Simonds also flung some leather around, making a few great plays at third base, including a back hand stop of a sure double down the line, to squelch potential Ranger rallies. Grimm worked out of a jam in the fifth, stranding John Harrington at third after a lead-off triplewith some help from right fielder Kevin Lewis, who chased down Peter Ernst's long fly.

The Cardinals put the game away in the fifth. Will Harper walked. Ben Libby laced a triple down the right field line. After Grimm walked and stole second, Hunt and Smith hit back to back doubles to cap the four-run rally.

The Cards added an insurance run in the sixth on singles by Libby, Grimm and Hunt. The Rangers rallied for two in the sixth before falling.

Cardinals 11 - Rangers 3

The Cardinal bats remained hot in the championship game Monday night.

The Rangers started strong, scoring twice in the top of the first. After Fletcher Smalzel singled, John Harrington smashed a double to right center. Kenny Muir and Ian

Cohasset's O'Brien, Straughn chosen among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see mentioned here as second team selections were serious candidates for first team honors, just as many who received "Honorable Mention" recognition were considered for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

One of the most difficult omissions from the top two teams by far was Cohasset's junior catcher Tim Straughn, who led the team in hitting (.426) and RBI (18). When not gunning baserunners out from behind the plate, the strong-armed Straughn, who's now starting for the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team, was preventing them from even reaching, compiling 27 strikeouts in 28 innings on the mound for the Skippers with a 2.56 ERA.

After consulting with area coaches, however, these are the choices we made for our 2001 All-Scholastic baseball team.

First Team

Doug O'Brien - Senior (Capt.)
Centerfield - Cohasset

A three sport standout and captain for little Cohasset High in his senior year, soccer and basketball being the other two…was selected as a South Shore League All-Star in both soccer and baseball…Doug was second on the Skippers in hitting this season with a .370 batting average and was a perfect 16-for-16 in stolen base attempts…Also had an outstanding on-base percentage, drawing several walks…an outstanding defensive outfielder with a near unparalleled ability to track down anything in his vicinity…a former member of the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team…led soccer team that made it to semi-finals of state sectionals in scoring… an honor roll who was an early acceptant this past fall to Trinity College where he will play baseball and possibly soccer, as well…is leaning towards a major in international business or economics and plans on studying abroad in Italy for a semester… Cohasset Athletic Director/boys basketball coach Ron Ford: "Doug is a great natural athlete who probably could put up big numbers or stand out more if that's what he wanted, but that's not what he's about. He does the little things that don't show up in box scores any where, but that make the difference between winning an losing. And he's a phenomenal leader, just as you'd expect from a three sport captain."… Cohasset head baseball coach Bob Knurek: "When the ball was hit in the air anywhere near centerfield this year, it was the next best thing to an out. That's how good Doug was out there."

Doug O'Brien

Pat Young - Senior (Capt.)
Shortstop/Pitcher -
Silver Lake

A two time Old Colony League All-Star…Led the Lakers in hitting this season with a .406 average (26-for-64) and in stolen bases (11)…added 11runs, 10 RBI and five doubles…also took the mound for two relief stints… his greater values, though, according to coach Bob Rodgers, were as a defensive stalwart at the busiest spot on the diamond (shortstop) and as a team leader…Also a standout soccer player, Pat scored both of the Lakers goals in their first round tourney win over Needham this fall…Also an All-Scholastic selection by the Brockton Enterprise...Headed to Suffolk University in the fall, where he is slated to play baseball…claims he may also give collegiate soccer a whirl…Silver Lake head baseball coach Bob Rodgers: "Pat is everything you want in a ballplayer. He's smart focussed, a hard worker and, obviously, a very talented ball player. And he's a great kid too."

Frank Cronin - Junior
Pitcher - Rockland

Finished an impressive 2001 campaign by leading Rockland to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney…The talented lefty won two tournament games for the 13th seeded Bulldogs (13-10), including the stellar 1-0

Four C.H.S. laxers named to Bay State games regional squad

By Terry Kahn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For the first time, Cohasset is playing host to the Bay State Games' Southeast regional boys' lacrosse team. The proximity paid immediate dividends as four members of the Skippers' state finalist squad – Kyle Weber, Paul Previte, Curt Kahn and Nick Spirito — were named to the team.

Under the direction of the Cohasset High School coaching staff, the team – a collection of all-stars from a sprawling geographical area stretching from the island of Nantucket to New Bedford, west to Hopkinton and Ashland and north to Weymouth – will practice on the Skippers' home turf before competing in the annual four-day event, which starts on Thursday, July 12 at Wentworth Institute's athletic complex in downtown Boston.

Eighty-four players, by far the largest contingent to try out among the state's four regions, registered and participated in the team's three-day tryout, which concluded on Sunday, June 24.

"This was as impressive a group of players as I've ever seen together on one field," said Cohasset Head Coach Kevin Orcutt. "We have been forced to cut players who, in my opinion, could have formed a team that would have finished no worse than third, and possibly as a medallist, in these Games."

Orcutt's staff – which included Cohasset Assistant Coach Terry Kahn, Scituate High School Head Coach Chris Weber, Emerson College Head Coach Stew Curran, and Needham High Head Coach David Roche – announced a final squad that featured some of the Pilgrim Conference's best sophomores and juniors, as well as selections from Scituate, New Bedford and Nantucket, the first time those high schools have been represented in Bay State Games lacrosse.

Heading the team are 13 selections from four schools rated among the top ten in Massachusetts by the national "laxpower.com" – Needham, number-one-ranked Duxbury, Div. 2 state

Connelly gem propels Cohasset-Scituate legion past first place Weymouth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Scott Arnold has been telling his players since Day 1 they had the ability to beat any team in their league. The Cohasset-Scituate Legion coach continued to push that message Monday night even though he would privately admit later that he had a few doubts going up against the defending champion and current first place Weymouth team without three of his starters.

Apparently, the message still reached a resonant chord within his charges, as they went out and pulled out a thrilling 1-0 win behind a complete game two-hit effort on the mound from Jason Connelly that moved the George H. Mealy Post 118 team back to .500 on the season (3-3-1).

"Jason was just on," said Arnold, in his seventh season of coaching the Coh-Scit team. "The ball was really moving for him tonight and he pitched a very solid and efficient game."

With the game moving last minute from Cohasset's Milliken Field to the Scituate High School park, Connelly was back on the friendliest of grounds, having compiled a 4-1 record and 2.62 ERA with the S.H.S. team this spring.

shutout of No. 4 Norton and a 3-2 decision over Patriot League foe and No. 5 seed Middleboro in the quarterfinals…Rockland won 13 games this season, and Cronin was on the mound for 11 of them…Cronin finished the year at 11-3, pitching 98 innings, striking out 67 batters, recording six shutouts, for a 2.20 ERA…Is also a talented student, as he ranks within the top 10 of his class at RHS…Still only a junior, Cronin will be among the Bulldogs' top returning players next season. Rockland coach Rick Fredericks: "He's got a great changeup and he just keeps the batters off-balance. They don't get many good swings at his pitches. Our strength this year was our defense and Frank did a great job of keeping the ball on the ground for the infielders. He's just a great kid, very coachable."

Nick DeVito - Sophomore
Shortstop/Pitcher - Hingham

After injuring his leg in the first at-bat of last year's Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, the 6-foot, 5-inch DeVito made some noise at the plate this time around going 2-for-3 with three RBI in the team's 7-6 loss to Franklin in the first round…DeVito also pitched four innings in relief, allowing just one run…At the plate, DeVito was the one of the team's best hitters with a .400 average…DeVito scored 18 runs, hit a homer, walked seven times and drove in 9…DeVito became the team's number two pitcher this season and struck out 31 batters for a 2.80 ERA…DeVito will spend his summer playing American Legion baseball for Hingham, which he wasn't able to do until late in the season last summer due to his injury…Just a sophomore, he will be on the top returnees next year. Hingham coach Dan McHugh: "He's the best athlete on the team so I wanted him in the middle and I expect big things from him pitching wise. He's a strong hitter, who has good command of the strike zone. He's a lot of fun to work with and I'll be counting on him for the next two years."

Jon Hollis - Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher/Centerfield -
Marshfield

A four-year varsity player and Atlantic Coast League All-star, Hollis made noise this year on the mound and in the batter's box…As the team's top hurler, Hollis was called on to pitch "all the tough games," according to coach Bill Battis…In doing so, Hollis pitched 51 innings, striking out 44 and boasted a 2.09 ERA…When he wasn't on the mound, Hollis could be found in centerfield…At the plate, Hollis was equally as threatening, boasting a .409 average from the lead-off spot…Hollis recorded 23 hits, 10 RBI and 10 stolen bases for Marshfield, which missed qualifying for the post-season tourney by a game…Had the honor of beating the ACL's Player of the Year, Duxbury pitcher Tim in a 2-1 decision…Was also the star quarterback on Marshfield's football team in the fall, which earned him an honorable mention to the Mariner All-Scholastic team…Hollis will attend University next year. Marshfield coach Bill Battis: "He's just a bulldog. He did what he had to do all year. On the mound, he challenged hitters with his best stuff. He's a four-year starter, who knows how to lead, and he played hard every game."

Jesse Cole - Junior
Pitcher/Infield - Scituate

The Patriot League's Most Valuable Player this season led the league in both hitting (.500) and ERA (0.84)…Also hit two home runs this season…Not surprisingly, the junior has already drawn the attention of several prominent colleges— including Harvard, Yale, the University of Maine and Wake Forest…he would prefer to play ball in the south…Also has upcoming Major League auditions with the Atlanta Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates…Has been selected to play for the New England team in the upcoming Blue-Gray All-Star tournament in North Carolina, which will be attended by scouts from all major league teams and many top colleges…being looked at primarily as a pitcher, not surprising considering his outstanding strikeout to walk ratio (73 strikeouts/17 walks) in 53 innings pitched this season and a fastball that's been clocked in the high 80s…Plays baseball year round as a member of the South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham…Also pitches and plays third base for the Cohasset-Scituate Legion team… used to run track in the fall and winter for Scituate High but gave that up this year to concentrate even more on baseball…hired a personal trainer last summer, and has added 30 pounds to his 6-foot-1 frame since, explaining "I needed that extra bulk for strength on the mound…Scituate head baseball coach Kevin Greer: "Jesse is Mr. Baseball. It's just his thing, and he's extremely devoted to it. He's also got a lot of talent for it too. Obviously, any coach would be blessed to have him on their team."

Jason Connelly - Junior
Shortstop/Pitcher - Scituate

The Patriot League All-Star shone all around for the co-league champion 17-3 Sailors this season…Compiled a 4-1 record on the mound with a 2.62 ERA and 32 strikeouts in 33-1/3 innings of work…Batted .407 (24-for-59) with a team high 23 RBI…His greatest value, though, may have been on defense as the team's regular shortstop…Also pitches and starts at shortstop for the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team…Also a standout defensive back and wideout with the football team this past fall, he has already been named a co-captain for this fall's squad along with Dave Butterworth… Scituate head baseball coach Kevin Greer: "Jason's a very intense competitor, but he does it quietly. I think he's got that football mindset of controlled intensity. He's just a good, solid all around baseball player. At shortstop, anything he gets to is usually going to be an out because he's got a cannon for an arm."

Tim Duggan - Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher/Outfield - Scituate

The unquestioned leader of the 17-3 co-Patriot League champion Scituate baseball team…The Patriot League All-Star was named the team's Outstanding Pitcher this season by the coaching staff…Put together an excellent 6-0 season on the mound with a 1.81 ERA and 60 strikeouts in 42-1/3 innings…Started the season with a prolonged slump at the plate, but finished up strong to raise his average to .333…led the team in home runs with four…. Also an outstanding defenseman for the Scituate High hockey team, Duggan was the captain of this season's surprising 12-6-2 hockey squad and was named to his second Patriot League All-Star team…Also an All-Scholastic hockey honoree by the Mariner and Patriot Ledger…Is the fourth or five Duggans to play baseball and hockey for Scituate High, with little brother Joe (class of '03) the last in the line…Also plays baseball for the Cohasset-Scituate Legion team…Tim will attend Bryant College this fall, where he intends to play baseball… Scituate head baseball coach Kevin Greer: "Tim obviously did a lot for us on the field, but his leadership is what really helped make us the team we were. You couldn't have asked for a better leader than Timmy. We have a lot of talent coming back next year, but he's leaving a big hole—no doubt about that."

Bob Savoy - Junior
Pitcher/Shortstop - Norwell

Savoy is a two-time South Shore League All-Star who made it as a sophomore center fielder and a shortstop this time around, something Norwell baseball coach Al Kassatly said is more a testament to his work ethic and team-first-attitude than his considerable athletic ability…Was also the team's number one pitcher, shaking off early season arm troubles to help lead the Clippers into the state tourney with a winning record and an ERA around 2.5…Despite missing the first few weeks of the season, Savoy hit exactly .400, with five doubles, three triples, 17 RBI and a perfect 11-for-11 in stolen base attempts…Also an outstanding basketball player who led the Clippers in steals and assists this season as their starting point guard...has been named a basketball co-captain for next season…Norwell head baseball coach Al Kassatly: "I've had a lot of great athletes as a coach who I'd say 'boy, if only he worked a little harder, he might really be something. That's one thing I don't think you'll ever hear anyone say about Bobby, because he goes all-out all the time and he absolutely gets the most out of his abilities."

Second Team

Bryan Butterworth - Senior
Centerfield - Scituate

Bryan was the offensive catalyst for the Patriot League's most explosive team this season, hitting .333 (20-for-60) out of the leadoff spot and leading the 17-3 Sailors in both runs and stolen bases (a Patriot League best 23)… Also had a home run this season…A Patriot League All-Star…Not bad, considering baseball is his "hobby"…Bryan is heading to Canisius on full football scholarship in the fall after quarterbacking the Patriot League's most high powered offense last fall. He compiled 1,794 yards of total offense (1,014 rushing, 650 passing and 130 receiving) this past fall on the gridiron for the Sailors… Scituate head baseball coach Kevin Greer: "We were a different team anytime Bryan was getting on base. First off, singles were just about as good as doubles for him, and it made all our hitters behind him that much tougher because he really drew the attention of (opposing) pitchers."

Mark Stimpson - Senior
Centerfield - Rockland

Was the Bulldogs' leading batter this season, helping Rockland (13-10) advance to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional, going 4-for-10 with an RBI in tourney games…Finished the season with a .432 average to lead the team, while also earning the squad's top stats in RBIs (20) and runs scored (16)…Was also the team's leading hitter during his sophomore season…Stimpson's quickness on the bags also earned him the lead in stolen bases (9)…In 23 games played, Stimpson recorded 19 hits…He started every game in centerfield for Rockland this season and did not record an error…Stimpson made a crucial play in the Rockland's 1-0 decision over Norton in the first round by throwing a runner out at the plate…Stimpson will be attending Massassoit Community College, where he plans to continue his baseball career. Rockland coach Rick Fredericks: "He's going to be tough to replace at centerfield. He's very quick and gets a good jump on the ball. If there was a ball going out to centerfield, I'd bet my paycheck that he'd catch it."

Sam Moores - Senior (Capt.)
Catcher - Hanover

A two-time South Shore League All-star, Moores is hailed by many as being the best catcher in the league…A defensive stalwart behind the plate, very few balls got by Moores…His great arm and accuracy made it difficult for opponents to steal bases, as Moores only allowed two all season…For the last two years, Moores has also been one of the team's top hitters, boasting .350 plus averages each year and multiple extra-base hits…Coach Fran Coyle says Moores will be very tough to replace on such a young team…Moores will attend Wentworth College next year, where he plans to study architecture and continue his baseball career. Hanover coach Fran Coyle: "He's just one of those kids that blocks everything. He's got a great arm and people didn't test it. He's kept us in a lot of games. Sam will be a loss."

A.J. Qualtieri - Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher - Hingham

A talented senior captain, Qualtieri was Hingham's top hurler…In 48 1/3 innings, Qualtieri went 4-2 with a save…He allowed only 15 earned runs on the season and finished with a 2.18 ERA…Qualtieri also had a decent year at the plate for the Harbormen, ending with a .280 average…But it was Qualtieri's fastball that had most opponents talking this season…As to be expected from the number one pitcher, Qualtieri was called on to pitch all of the team's bigger games and was also known as the team's biggest motivator, always getting his team up…Qualtieri will spend his summer playing American Legion baseball for Hingham. Hingham coach Dan McHugh: "I just can't say enough about him. Behind the scenes, he does what I ask and more. His whole identity is baseball. Kids like him don't come along too often. He's a quality kid both on and off the field. You can't replace someone like that."

Ed O'Neil - Senior (Capt.)
Catcher - Rockland

One of those classic defensive stalwarts, O'Neil was brick wall behind the plate for the Bulldogs…Coach Rick Fredericks called O'Neil his second coach on the field…Was largely responsible for calling most of the pitches for Rockland, and could always be relied on by Fredericks…Was a two-year starter for the Bulldogs (13-10), who made a surprising run in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, making it to the semifinals…O'Neil also had a solid year at the plate for Rockland with a .279 average with two homeruns, two triples and 11 RBI…O'Neil is making his second appearance on a Mariner All-Scholastic team as he earned a spot on our wrestling squad last winter…O'Neil will be attending . Rockland coach Rick Fredericks: "In my 15 years of coaching, I've never had a catcher as good as him. He's got a great arm and is just unbelievable behind the plate. I never had to worry about what he was doing out there. He's an outstanding leader and really took control with the kids. He was always very positive. He'll be tough to replace."

Chris Martin - Junior
Pitcher/Shortstop - Marshfield

As the Rams' everyday shortstop, Martin also wanted to try his skills on the mound and had a great year…Martin pitched six games for Marshfield, all of which were complete…In 41 innings, Martin was 4-2 with 40 strikeouts for a 2.89 ERA…Last season, Martin pitched nine innings in long relief, and took lessons over the winter to improve his skills…At the plate, Martin was the team's second leading batter with a .370 average, 17 RBI and two homeruns from the second and third spots in the lineup…His terrific arm and range fueled the Marshfield defense, as he made only two errors all season…Martin is also a talented quarterback on the Marshfield High football team…Martin will spend the summer playing for the Duxbury American Legion team…Only a junior, Martin will be among the top returnees next year. Marshfield coach Bill Battis: "He's a tremendous athlete and has one of those can do attitudes. He's so focused on baseball and always gives his best. He's always the first person on the practice field and the last one off. I told him last year he had superstar potential, and he reached it this year. He's the best example of a Marshfield High School baseball player."

CJ Hillyer - Freshman
Pitcher/First base - Abington

Had a standout season in his first varsity year for the Green Wave as the ace of the pitching staff…Hillyer pitched 59 innings, striking out 57 batters, while walking only 11…A lefty, Hillyer finished with a 5-3 record and a 2.85 ERA…When he wasn't on the mound for the Green Wave, Hillyer saw time at first base and recorded only two errors…Hillyer was also among the top batters on the team, boasting a .365 average with 23 hits and 17 RBI…A South Shore League All-star, Hillyer will be spending his summer pitching on Abington's American Legion squad and for the South Shore Baseball Club's AAU team…Hillyer is also working at coach Tom Graham's instructional youth baseball camp…He will also be among the team's top returnees next season. Abington coach Tom Graham: "CJ did a great job for us pitching wise and was also a very good hitter. He had great control and didn't walk many batters so he rarely got into trouble. To have a freshman come in and play the way he played is quite a surprise. It really shows what kind of player he's going to be in the next three years."

David Butterworth - Junior
Catcher - Scituate

The younger Butterworth's main value to the 17-3 Sailors this season was behind the plate…He was a virtual impenetrable wall with the pads and mask on, a plaudit made all the more impressive by the fact that he was catching two fireballers in Tim Duggan and Jesse Cole and another hurler with great movement in Jason Connelly…In addition, the cannoned-armed backstop was the was the Patriot League's premier "steal's stopper"…David was far from a one-dimensional player, though, as attested to by his .344 batting average and 12 RBI… A Patriot League All-Star…As is the case with big brother Bryan, football is number one with David as well…He rushed for over 1,200-yards and went over the 100-point plateau this past fall for the Sailors…Also like Bryan, he should be heavily recruited for football in his senior year…A former member of the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team… Scituate head baseball coach Kevin Greer: "People just didn't run on us this year. It didn't take long for them to figure out that it was real tough to beat one of Dave's throws to second base. That, plus the way he handled our pitching staff, made Dave as valuable as just about anyone on our team."

Jason Kustka - Junior
Centerfield - Norwell

The junior speedster was a catalyst extraordinaire for the Clippers this season, batting a team high .420 with 10 extra base hits, and also leading the team in runs (26) and stolen bases (a perfect 18-for-18), playing a huge part in the Clippers late season push that earned them a state tourney berth…A South Shore League All-Star…Far from a one-dimensional threat, Kustka was also lauded by SSL coaches for the job he did patrolling centerfield…Also a standout on the soccer field, Jason played stopper for Norwell High's 21-1 Eastern Mass. Sectional finalist team this past fall and has been voted a tri-captain for next year's squad…Norwell head baseball coach Al Kassatly: "Jason was the guy who really kept us going offensively most of the year, and he was also one of the guys who helped keep things loose on the bench. He was sort of the team funny man. His sense of humor got us through some tough times, especially early in the year when we got off to that rough (1-6) start. He was just a big contributor in every way."

High Honorable Mentions

the fourth inning, but surrendered a one-out double to cut short that flirtation with history. The Scituate High senior-to-be also gave up a two-bagger in the fifth, but that was all he'd allow on the evening. He walked none through his seven innings of work, while striking out six.

"The key for Jason was that he came right at hitters," said Arnold. "He was up in the count just about every at-bat tonight: oh and one, one and two, he was still coming at them, not messing around at all."

In other words, he was pitching precisely the kind of game a defense loves. And his teammates showed their appreciation.

There were 15 chances in the field behind Connelly, and all were turned flawlessly—12 groundouts and three snared flies to the outfield.

Of course, Coh-Scit didn't have much more luck against Weymouth ace Drew Locke, finishing with just four hits and two walks for the game. Fortunately, the home team was able to capitalize on its biggest blow of the game, a leadoff smash to left-center off the bat of Jesse Cole (2-for-3) that one hopped the fence and placed him on second base. A groundout to the right side moved Cole to third, and a walk to catcher Brian Signorelli set up first-and-third with one out.

Mike Gulinello then hit a chopper to second base that Weymouth's middle infielders tried to turn into an inning-ending double play. However, Gulinello crossed first just ahead of the throw at approximately the same moment Cole touched home, providing all the support Connelly would need.

The hard throwing right-hander finished strong, sandwiching a groundout between a pair of Ks to close out the game.

This was the first in a string of five nights of consecutive games for the Post 118 squad that Coach Arnold believes should prove "extremely telling" for his team. Already scheduled to play Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week— against Weymouth, Milton, Weymouth again and Braintree, respectively— Coh-Scit has now been slated to makeup a rain-out with Braintree on Tuesday.

Generally, Arnold wouldn't feel too rankled with this type of slate, given his team's noteworthy pitching depth. However, with relief pitchers Greg Smith and Chris Carr out of town for the week on their Appalachia Community Service tour, the veteran coach probably wouldn't mind another rainy evening.

"I think we have the talent and depth to play with just about anyone in our league, but this is going to be a real test for us over the next few days," said Arnold after Monday's big win. "So far, though, it's been kind of tough to getting everyone together at the same time, though."

In fact, Arnold has had his team intact only once this season. He didn't have his three talented B.C. High players through the first three games this season due to their prolonged run to a state championship. Since then, there's been a myriad of conflicts preventing his team from getting to the same place at the same time.

"I look at the hitters on this roster, and I see the potential to have a real 'Murderer's Row' from top to bottom," said Arnold. "As long as the pitching holds up, I think we could really make some noise. We just need to get everyone here at the same time."

Arnold expects to pitch B.C. High's Tom Fitzgerald on Tuesday, Scituate High's Tim Duggan on Wednesday, Cohasset High's Tim Straughn on Thursday and staff ace Jesse Cole on Friday.

"Hopefully, these guys will all get us deep into the game, because we don't have a lot coming out of the bullpen right now," said Arnold. "With the (hot and humid) weather in the forecast, that's not going to be easy."

Cundall followed with singles. Cardinal ace Tim Smith prevented further damage by striking out two Rangers to end the threat.

The Cards came right back in their half of the inning. With one out, Michael Grimm legged out an infield hit. Alex Hunt doubled to right center and Grimm raced all the way around to score. After Smith walked, Conor Holway and Mark Flibotte followed with clutch RBI singles and the Cardinals took a lead they would never relinquish.

Will Harper singled to open the Cardinal second. After Libby singled, Grimm laid a perfect bunt down the third base line for a hit. When the throw sailed into right field, two runs scored and Grimm ended up at third. Hunt walked and stole second. Smith plated Grimm and advanced Hunt to third on a long sacrifice fly to center. Justin Hollis followed with a big two-out hit to drive in the fourth run of the inning.

The Cardinals continued to pour it on in the third. Kevin Lewis started the rally with a single to left, the first of his two hits for the game. Libby lined a single up the middle and Grimm grounded an RBI single between short and third. Tim Smith cleared the bases with a double to the fence. The Cards added their final run in the fourth. Gabriella Flibotte walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch, and Kevin Lewis brought him home with an RBI single to right.

Smith got stronger and stronger on the mound as the game progressed. He struck out six Rangers for the game and started a unique 1-3-2 double play in the third. With John Harrington on third, Kenny Muir hit a sharp grounder up the middle. Smith stabbed it, checked the runner and threw to first for the out. When Harrington broke for home, first baseman Justin Hollis threw a strike to catcher Conor Holway, who blocked the plate and made the tag for the double play.

The Rangers got a run in the fifth on a double by Tommy Chase, but Smith shut the door the rest of the way.

When the final out settled into Alex Hunt's glove in center field, the Cardinals and their fans celebrated their second Little League championship in the last three years. After a brief celebratory "pig pile" at the mound, the Cards and Rangers shook hands and congratulated each other on a championship series well played and hard fought. As the other players lined the baseline, the twelve year olds who were finishing their Cohasset Little League careers ran the bases at Barnes Field for the last time in a traditional rite. The Cardinals then took off for the town pool for a full-uniform swim. This year Cardinal coaches— Bill Grimm, Dick Holway and Chip Barnes— took the plunge with their team.

Four C.H.S. laxers named to Bay State games regional squad

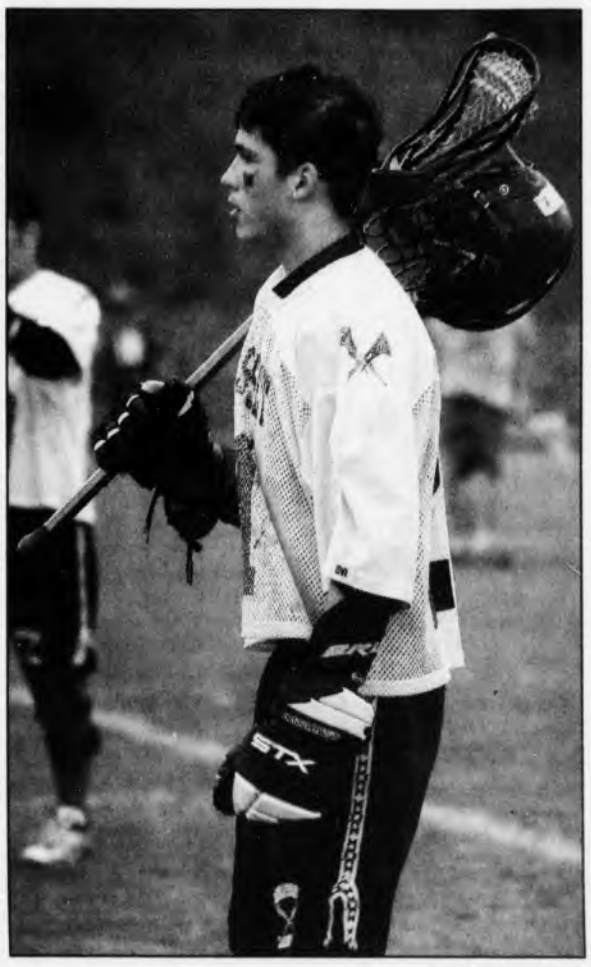
champ Hingham and Div. 2 championship finalist Cohasset.

Needham's representatives include attackman Brad Luckhardt, defensemen Adam Maxwell and Scott Farquharson, and midfielder Brendan Reardon. From Duxbury come goalie Pat Kelley and middie Ben Fuchs. Hingham's members are all-star attackmen Patrick Lenhart and Conor Fitzgerald, and junior All-American defenseman Greg Sowyrda.

Pilgrim All-Conference goalie Kyle Weber and attackman Paul Previte, both of whom earned silver medals a year ago in the Games, lead the Cohasset contingent. They're augmented by sophomore attackman Curt Kahn, who finished the season with 25 goals and 20 assists, and classmate Nick Spirito, who will lead the Skippers' defense in 2002.

The final Pilgrim representative is Steve Williams, Norwell's all-everything midfielder, who's headed to Deerfield Academy next year. Williams, missed most of this, his junior season at Norwell High, with mononucleosis after leading the Clippers in scoring as a sophomore.



Weymouth and Milton High Schools each contribute a pair of players. From Weymouth come defenseman Ed Melville and all-league midfielder and faceoff specialist Tony MacDonald. Milton's two are all-star midfielder Kevin Lynch and defenseman Gerard Dhooge.

New Bedford, Scituate and Nantucket each boast a first-time finalist team member. Mark Rossi, a midfielder, represents New Bedford. Matt Erisman, an attackman, carries the Nantucket flag. And Steve McDevitt, the Sailors' top scorer, comes from Scituate.

Three private-school all-stars round out the team. Hingham's Brian Voccola, who'll captain Phillips Exeter next spring, will be on attack, as will Norwell's Russell Chase, who led Thayer Academy's offense this year. Justin Marks of Teaticket, who anchored Salisbury Prep's midfield as the Connecticut school finished with a top-20 New England ranking, completes the squad.

"We've got great depth, college-level skills at every position, and real toughness," said Coach Orcutt. "The practices are going to be fun to watch."

The team will practice on Thursdays and Sundays leading up to the Games, with scrimmages set for Sunday, July 1 and Sunday, July 8 at 3 p.m.

POLICE BRIEFS

Ten minors arrested on alcohol charges

Cohasset police arrested 10 minors over the past week for various alcohol offenses.

At about 1 a.m., Friday, police saw a motor vehicle allegedly being driven erratically southbound on Route 3A and followed the vehicle as it made a left turn onto Pond Street. Police said the dark-colored SUV turned into the driveway of the 100 Pond St. condos and stopped in the middle of the lane. Police alleged the occupants of the vehicle were all visibly intoxicated. Further investigation revealed several open containers of beer in the vehicle. Placed under arrest at the scene were the driver, Joseph Michael Palone II, 19 of 258 S. Main St. and passenger, Justin S. Langham, 18, of 100 Pond St. Catherine Wenmark, 18, of 27 Riverview Drive fled the scene but turned herself in later at the police station, Sgt. Robert Jackson said. The youths were arraigned on the charges on Friday at Quincy District Court.

Palone was charged with operating under the influence of liquor; minor transport alcohol, having alcohol in an open container in the motor vehicle; speeding; marked lanes violation and having a forged drivers license. He has a return court date set for July 25.

Langham and Wenmark were charged with minor transport alcohol and having alcohol in an open container in the motor vehicle. Langham was also charged with illegal possession of Class D (marijuana). Police said Langham was in possession of a green substance thought to be marijuana. Wenmark was charged with resisting arrest. Langham and Wenmark's charges were continued without a finding for three and six months, respectively, meaning if they stay out of trouble, the charges will be dismissed at that time, Jackson said. Langham had to pay $85 in court fees and Wenmark was required to pay $135. The charge of resisting arrest against Wenmark was dismissed, Jackson said.

At about 11 p.m., Friday, police arrested four minors at Sandy Beach. Jackson said police observed the youths with containers of beer by the lifeguard stand. Further investigation revealed more beer in a backpack at the scene, and in the youths' car a quantity of beer and vodka were discovered. Arrested and charged with minor in possession of alcohol were Elan Morales, 19, of Willow Street in Hull; Joanne Malley, 19, of Porazzo Road in Hull; Linda M. Donehey, 19, of Samoset Road in Hull and Tracy A. Mann, 20, of Wetland Street in Brockton. Morales, Malley and Donehey were put in a diversion program, during which they must attend a Mothers Against Drunk Diving workshop and pay a $50 fee to MADD. The charge against Mann, who also was arrested on a traffic warrant, was continued without a finding for three months. She was required to pay $85 in court fees.

At about 12:15 a.m. Sunday, police arrested two minors and a juvenile near the Mobil Mart on Route 3A, after seeing an argument in the parking lot of the convenience store, Jackson said. Subsequent investigation revealed several cans of beer and a soda bottle filled with what police believe to be vodka in the youths' motor vehicle. Arrested and charged with minor transporting alcohol were Michael Kyle, 17, of 53 Scituate Ave., Scituate; Matthew Lynch, 17, of 92 Turner Road, Scituate; and a 16-year-old juvenile. The minors were arraigned Monday in Quincy District Court and the juvenile was arraigned yesterday after the Mariner went to press. Kyle was placed in a diversion program and Lynch has a return court date of Aug. 9.

All that jazz

Kingston's Johnny Souza riding a wave of success

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Johnny Souza uses his trumpet to convey his energy and emotions. His growing number of fans on the South Shore and beyond discover that every time he plays it.

The Kingston musician is celebrating the success of his jazz band's first album called "My Shining Hour,"which is literally flying off the shelves at local CD retailers including Borders Books and Music.

But the CD isn't the only thing that has Souza jazzed up. His Sunday jazz show at Ricky T's Blues club at Cordage Park in Plymouth is packing 'em in with Souza bringing in a variety of renowned jazz musicians weekly to play with him and his five-piece band — the Johnny Souza Ensemble.

And North Plymouth is by no means the only gigs, Souza's getting. He said he's had opportunities to play all over the country —Los Angeles, New Orleans, and Chicago. This week, Souza's on his way to Florida to do a live show on radio station WUCF in Orlando.

"I also play around Boston with different folks," Souza said. "But for the most part, I've been doing a lot with my own band."

Souza said he started playing the trumpet in the third grade. He said he picked the trumpet because it was the loudest instrument he could find. As he grew up, he started developing an affection for jazz music.

"I just love the music itself," he said. "It allows me to be creative, and to really interpret a song in a number of different ways. There's lots of constraints in other types of music."

Souza said the style of jazz he plays with his band can be labeled in many ways.

"Some would call it mainstream jazz, some would call it straight-ahead jazz, some would call it classic jazz, and others would call it great American storybook jazz," he said. He added examples of jazz musicians falling into those categories are people like Cole Porter, George Gershwin, and Duke Ellington.

"We also do some be-bop, some jazz standards, and we also write original pieces," he added.

Souza said his new album boasts nine different tracks consisting of eight popular jazz songs of the past and also one original song which he wrote. Some of the popular favorites he and his band cover on the CD include "My Funny Valentine," "Fly Me to the Moon, and "My Foolish Heart."

Souza said he has plans to record another album, but he said it's going to be a while.

"We're still concentrating on our first album," he said. "I'd say we won't have another album out for another year."

Souza said he loves playing jazz, but he said while he was going to school at the Berklee College of Music in Boston years ago, he incorporated a lot of funk, rhythm and blues, and top 40 styles of music into his playing. But that's what gives him a unique sound.

"When you dabble in top 40 and a style like funk, they're bound to sneak into your playing," he said. "Basically, I've been influenced by all the people I listened to over the years."

> "There are only two types of music - good music and bad music. It takes a good melody, and it also takes good musicians to play it. The bottom line is that I like lots of kinds of music...as long as it's good."
> Jazz musician Johnny Souza

And now, all of his hard work and dedication to the trumpet has paid off, and he said he's been having a great time doing the gigs at Ricky T's.

"We always have different guests at those shows, and I think that's one reason why the crowds have been building there on Sundays," he said. "It's not the same band every week, so people kind of walk in and they never know what to expect."

Souza said in addition to his regular routine of practicing his music, he's also watching his two children get better at their respective instruments. His son John, 16, plays trumpet, and his daughter Leah, 19, plays the saxophone and sings. They are both in the same band.

When it comes to what Souza likes in a given jazz piece, he said "There are only two types of music—good music and bad music. It takes a good melody, and it also takes good musicians to play it. The bottom line is that I like lots of kinds of music…as long as it's good."

For more information on Souza or his shows call Ricky T's at (508) 732-9700 or visit www.johnnysouza.com. An upcoming show on July 1 will feature musical guests like Dick Johnson, Ray Santisi, and another show on July 8 will feature Jerry Cecco, Steve Marvin, and Cassandre McKinley. To purchase Souza's new album, visit local Border's Books locations or order it from Amazon.com.

Jerry Vale will perform in concert at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset July 5.

Behind the Vale

Legendary singer makes South Shore concert stop

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Singer Jerry Vale has received a lot of television exposure recently, thanks to his commercials for the CD-compilation "Mob Hits." The veteran entertainer knows the project's title may offend some people, but Vale believes that the music is more important than any moniker.

"It's just beautiful music, sung by people like Paul Anka, Rosemary Clooney, Julius LaRosa, Dean Martin, Al Martino and me," Vale explained by telephone last week from his Los Angeles home. "I didn't invent the word Mob, but in this case it works. People who love mob movies will love this CD."

> "I always thought by the time I was 70, I would be retired. Even at that, I never thought I would have such a long career in show business. It is absolutely fantastic to be able to do something that people really appreciate."
> Singer Jerry Vale

Mob movies and their music are familiar subjects for the Bronx-born vocalist. In the 1990 Martin Scorcese film, "Goodfellas," Vale portrayed a character close to his own heart — a Las Vegas headliner. "I enjoyed doing that movie very much. I performed 'Pretend You Don't See Her,' with words and music by Steve Allen."

Vale, who brings his own night-club act to the South Shore Music Circus next Thursday, has made a career of singing Italian music as well as classic pop standards.

"I'm a very proud Italian-American," says Vale who recorded some 50 albums on the Columbia label. "There are very few of us left still singing the great Italian songs."

Born Genaro Louis Vitaliano in 1932, Vale's high-tenor voice graced some of the best-known pop songs of the 1950s and '60s including "Innamorata," "Volare," "Amore, Scusami," and his signature song, "Al Di La."

It was while shining shoes in a local barbershop, as a preteen, that Vale began singing for customers. He was soon sent to a vocal coach, where he studied piano as well as voice. School productions led to paying gigs and, before long, stints at Manhattan supper clubs.

Signed to a Columbia recording contract by the legendary Mitch Miller, Vale had his first hit in 1953 with "You Can Never Give Me Back My Heart," which was followed by "Two Purple Shadows," "I Live Each Day," and "You Don't Know Me."

It was during the 1950s that Vale met another Italian-American male vocalist, Frank Sinatra. The pair began a friendship that would last some 40 years, until Sinatra's death in 1998.

"I was a pallbearer at Frank's funeral," says Vale. "He was a great man, really the best, and a true gentleman. You could have no finer friend than Frank Sinatra."

It was Sinatra who first brought Vale to Las Vegas in the early 1960s.

"Frank was a partner in the Sands Hotel and Casino and he invited me to perform in the lounge. I thought I'd be there for a few days or maybe a week. That engagement ended up lasting 22 weeks, and I played the Sands regularly for the next 10 years."

The Sands is gone now, but Vale still appears in Vegas at least a few times every year along with other concert dates around the country. He is pleased, if a bit surprised, at the longevity of his career.

"I always thought by the time I was 70, I would be retired. Even at that, I never thought I would have such a long career in show business. It is absolutely fantastic to be able to do something that people really appreciate. It is very gratifying to perform for appreciative audiences," explains Vale. "I am very content doing what I'm doing, because I'm still performing great music like I did 40 years ago. It still works today."

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

The Man Who Cried (B-)

Some movie images you can't chase out of your mind, like Boris Karloff in monster roles. When he played other characters, this gentle fellow couldn't shake what made him famous and trapped him forever. Christina Ricci, no Karloff, also lingers in memory as Wednesday Addams in "The Addams Family" and its sequel; nothing she has done since has erased those creepy scenes, maybe because unlike other child starlets — Drew Barrymore, for instance, who jumped from adorable to slutty in an eye blink — Ricci still looks like her first big role.

Here, in the mysteriously titled "The Man Who Cried" — mysterious because we barely know to whom the title refers, not that it matters — she is a Russian Jew, Fegele, rescued from a pogrom, unlike her luckless grandmother, who perishes, or her father, who has already gone to America with promises of sending for his daughter and mom. Suzie she is called in England, where in 1929 she is taken in by well-meaning, rigid locals, and Suzie she remains, wandering off to France as a chorus girl, of sorts, this an odd detour on her way, she hopes, to America to find daddy.

The undersized, unglamorous Ricci makes an unconvincing showgirl. As her counterpart, we've Johnny Depp in another gypsy gig, here a minor performer in operas in which beautiful he and his beautiful white stallion beautifully ride in and look beautiful. He is Cesar, she his would-be Cleopatra, perhaps, and periodically he gallops (well, his horse gallops, but they merge in the mind) to the semi-squalid yet picturesque gypsy camp — might Paula Jones be somewhere, lurking? — where, he says, all the kids are his children and all the parents are his parents. His rhetorical flapdoodle expresses, we're to believe, family values, Gypsy-style.

All of this is strange enough, cringe-worthy, but the movie has its salvations: Dante, a blowhard, exuberantly fascistic opera star (John Turturro, in his over-the-top peacock-of-the-month incarnation), and Suzie's bosom bud Lola, a gentile Russian dancer (Kate Blanchett) who knows that whatever Lola wants, Lola gets, as long as Lola lets the gentlemen get what they want first. This includes Dante, who has his fling with Lola and glory in Paris, playing up to the Nazis, and then hasn't such a good time after all. Fame is fleeting in wartime.

The film is lovely to look at, save for puggish Ricci. Depp need only smolder, Turturro is hysterical, Blanchett is terrific — the latter two stand out more than the ostensible leads, like Jack and Karen trumping "Will and Grace" — and it is exceptionally lovely to listen to — not the screenplay, but the music, by Argentine composer Osvaldo Golijov. New to me but I hope not a one-trick pony in the movies, Golijov makes many of the problematic ... scenes bearable, more than that: memorable and moving. Not a music critic, I don't know how to describe the syncretic quality of his score, which so transcends any other aspect of the film but Blanchett's and Turturro's work that you won't be surprised if an Oscar nod comes Golijov's way. Though inexpensively made, this muddled movie's box office take will make its distributor cry.

Secrets of salmon teriyaki

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Salmon Teriyaki is salmon marinated, cooked, and then finished with a simple teriyaki-style sauce. ("Teri' means shiny and foods prepared in this manner have a shellacked appearance.) The problem is, no two cookbooks agree on ingredients or methods. Some marinades include apple juice and maple syrup, other more authentic versions use soy sauce and mirin, and some use only sake. The marinating times vary greatly and so do the finished dishes — some taste over salted while others have little flavor.

To find the best method of making Salmon Teriyaki, I started with the salmon itself. I chose center-cut fillets over steaks — the latter do not cook evenly plus they include skin and bones. (Center-cut means cut from the center of the salmon fillet where the meat is of a relatively even thickness. I wanted fillets in the 6 to 8 ounce range with a thickness of 1 to 1 1/4 inches.)

For the marinade, I tested a handful of recipes and found that sake by itself did not add much flavor whereas a soy sauce based marinade was best. I ended up with a combination of soy sauce, mirin (a sweet rice wine used for cooking), and sake and then I set out to determine how to use it.

The first question was whether the fillet should be skinned. The answer was yes because it was easier for the marinade to be absorbed. Next I tried adding a bit of sugar to the marinade (1/2 teaspoon) and thought it balanced the flavor nicely. I wasn't happy about having to use mirin, although it is available in larger supermarkets, but rice wine vinegar was a poor substitute.

The last issue was marinating times. I tested times from 15 minutes to 3 hours and found anywhere from one to two hours was best since quicker times did not add enough flavor and longer times compromised texture.

The next question was the sauce. Many recipes simply use the marinade and then reduce it through cooking but I found this produced a very salty, intense sauce which overpowered the salmon. The simple solution was to use a light soy sauce. Other ingredients such as garlic and ginger were unwelcome and unnecessary.

The salmon fillets are best grilled over medium high heat — you should be able to hold your hand 5 inches above the grill for 3 to 4 seconds. The salmon will stick so clean the hot grates using tongs holding paper towels soaked in a bit of vegetable oil. The fillets are just cooked through after 3 minutes on each side. Thicker fillets may take 30 seconds to one minute longer.

You know they are done when they are firm, but not hard, when the sides are pinched. (The fillets do cook a bit more on the way to the table so the fillets are best pulled from the grill when the center is still translucent.) In a pinch, you can use the tip of a small, sharp knife to check for doneness.

If you want to cook this dish in a skillet, a heavy-duty 12-inch skillet works best for 4 fillets — you can also use cast iron if it is well-seasoned. One teaspoon of oil is necessary to prevent sticking and peanut oil was the winner. The fillets should be placed into the pan without touching each other (or it will affect the evenness of cooking) and then sit undisturbed for 4 minutes, lowering the heat to medium-high after 1 minute. The fillets are then flipped and cooked on the second side for another 4 minutes. (Be sure to check the salmon for doneness after 2 minutes.) After the fillets are removed from the skillet, add the sauce ingredients and reduce until thickened, about 1 minute. Spoon over the fillets and serve.

GRILLED SALMON TERIYAKI

Be sure to purchase center-cut fillets that are one to 1 1/4 inches thick for best results.

For the Salmon:
4 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons mirin
2 tablespoons sake
1/2 teaspoon sugar
4 6 to 8 ounce salmon fillets, each about 1-1/4 inch thick, skin removed

For the Sauce:
4 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons mirin
2 tablespoons sake
1/4 teaspoon sugar

1. For the salmon, combine the soy sauce, mirin, sake and sugar in a medium baking dish (the salmon can sit in one layer) and stir to dissolve the sugar. Add the salmon and allow to marinate in the refrigerator for 1 to 2 hours, turning occasionally.

2. For the sauce, combine the ingredients in a small skillet or medium saucepan and allow to cook over medium heat until the mixture is reduced by half and the sauce is slightly thickened, 1 to 2 minutes Set aside.

3. Ignite grill. When fire is medium-high (you can hold your hand 5 inches over the flame for 3-4 seconds) rub cooking area with a wad of oil soaked paper towels using tongs. Place fillets on the grill and allow to cook for 3 minutes. Turn the fillets and cook for an additional 3 minutes or until both sides have dark grill marks and the salmon feels firm but not hard when pinched on its sides. (You may peek with the tip of a small knife; the very center should remain translucent.) Remove the fillets from the grill onto a warm platter, spoon the sauce over each and serve immediately.

PAN SEARED SALMON TERIYAKI

Do not prepare the sauce ahead of time. Instead, heat a large skillet over high heat for 3 minutes. Add one teaspoon of vegetable oil and swirl to make an even coating. Arrange the salmon fillets in the skillet so they are not touching and cook for 4 minutes, reducing the heat to medium-high after 1 minute. Turn each fillet and cook for an additional 4 minutes or until firm but not hard when pinched and well browned on each side. (See above recipe for tips on doneness.) Remove the fillets to a warm platter and combine all sauce ingredients in the skillet. Cook until the sauce thickens and is reduced to about 3 tablespoons, about 1 minute. Spoon the sauce over the fillets and serve immediately. Serves 4

Carefree hostas provide beauty spring through fall

Green thumbs up

Part I

By: Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

With a week of steamy, sticky, hot weather predicted for the coming, the shady borders are likely to be only sensible place to spend quality time in the garden. Mention the word shade and many gardeners envision dark problem areas under massive, dense trees, or gloomy, dank corners shaded by their home, fence or walls. While some areas under decks or beneath especially large maple trees present serious challenges, many shady spots offer ideal opportunities to create a cool, tranquil retreat. The temperature differential in these shady nooks is a welcome relief from the stifling heat and just the appearance of the lush green foliage of hosta leaves and ferns has a cooling effect.

Full sun dominated my landscape many years ago which provided the ideal setting for establishing a vegetable garden and mixed perennial borders but as the trees and shrubs matured, shade began to infiltrate many of these areas necessitating the introduction of plants which could tolerate lower light conditions. When fellow gardening addicts suggested the addition of hosta, I had severe reservations, for after all, hosta were just a bunch of green and white leaves which everyone in suburbia used to line their walkways. Being somewhat of a plant snob, I considered these commonplace plants to be too ordinary to deserve a space among my collection of slightly more unusual plants, but I quickly discovered their incredible diversity and a new passion was kindled.

While this season's unusual weather patterns have taken their toll on some plants, the handsome hostas seem to be prospering, their attractive, full-formed leaves creating majestic mounds of sensational proportions. A few of the leaves which emerged early in the season were damaged by the late frost but the new foliage has quickly replaced and dominated the leaves injured by the cold, which I have since removed. From May to frost, these low-maintenance plants provide an elegant display of glorious foliage which cannot be surpassed for their diversity of leaf color and shape, plant habit, size and texture. Given these glowing attributes, it is not surprising that hostas currently rank as the most popular, best-selling perennials in the country.

The genus Hosta originated in Japan, Korea and China where it can be found growing on rocky cliffs, in moist woodlands, or in alpine meadows. Adaptable to a wide range of growing conditions, these elegant foliage plants prosper in shade, although many varieties grow well in half to full sun. Remarkably drought tolerant and capable of thriving even beneath thirsty maples, assuming you can excavate a hole among the dense, fibrous roots of these greedy trees, hostas may reach dramatic dimensions when given moisture-retentive soils. A shady border which receives morning sun or filtered sunlight throughout the day is ideal for most varieties. A summer mulch is beneficial for retaining moisture.

Hundreds of hosta cultivars have been introduced in recent years having a broad range of foliage sizes, textures and colors. Leaves vary in shape from round or heart-shaped to elongated or strap-like. Leaf size may be barely larger than a dime in the miniatures to a full 18 to 24 inches across in some of the very large varieties. Miniature plants produce perfect, tiny mounds of foliage only four to six inches tall, ideal for the rock garden or the front of the border. Many of the giants resemble elephant ears with mature clumps reaching a dramatic stature of up to four feet tall which can serve as a focal point or backdrop for the rear of the border.

Hosta leaf color ranges from vibrant gold, yellow-green and lime-green to deep, dark, green, to shades of blue-green with every conceivable combination of variegation possible in white, cream or gold. These white or gold markings may be in the center of the leaf, around the outer margin, or splashed across the leaf. Variations in the textural quality of the leaves further broaden the overall appearance of established clumps. Members of the Ventricosa family exhibit smooth, satin-like finishes while Tokudama hybrids tend to be cupped and puckered, creating a seersucker effect. While some varieties form perfectly symmetrical mounds of foliage, others demonstrate an elegant, vase-shaped form, their leaves having particularly long, upright stems. A few varieties are stoloniferous and spread quickly to form a dense ground cover. The diversity available in recent years is truly incredible.

In your quest for these hardy, carefree perennials, be advised that a hosta growing in a pot at your local nursery barely resembles its garden-grown counterpart. Many container-grown hostas tend to be diminutive in both leaf and plant habit and reading the label is imperative to determine the potential of your selection. It may take two or three years for a container-grown plant to develop and realize its ultimate size, particularly for the larger cultivars. Take advantage of garden tours or display gardens to assist you in making your choices. There are many varieties that are difficult to distinguish from one another making it easy to substitute one for another but making equally challenging to identify unlabeled plants. Be sure to label, map or in some way identify your purchases should you wish to have this information available to you in the future.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JUNE 28

The planet Mercury begins direct travel at 1:49 a.m., 21-degrees of Gemini. Generally this is a time when the green light goes on for new beginnings across the board. However, if you are planning to launch large-scale enterprises, it is best to wait until July 20, when Mars turns direct and the new moon culminates. The next Mercury retrograde period will occur in October. The moon continues its travel in Libra today. Make a lunch date with friends, colleagues, lovers. Surf, chat, network. Enjoy a romantic evening with the love in your life.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29

An applying Venus/Uranus alignment takes center stage because the moon travels in Venus-ruled Libra. People may be restless, changeable, impatient. Be open to new experiences and ideas; however, this is not a favorable time for making long-range promises or decisions. Keep it light, and don't take anyone too seriously. The Libra moon becomes inactive at 11:07 a.m. until 4:28 p.m., when it enters Scorpio.

SATURDAY, JUNE 30

The combination of a Scorpio moon and full moon buildup promise an intense, eventful weekend. Ninety-degree alignments of the moon/Neptune and Venus/Uranus can make for a hectic morning. Take extra time out for yourself. Pursue activities that help you to relax and maintain a positive attitude. Don't be too hasty in your judgments or too keen to commit yourself. You can be productive if you focus on jobs that need redoing, repair, restoration. Plan a quiet evening with the love in your life.

SUNDAY, JULY 1, 2001

The first few days of July are action-packed, because a lunar eclipse/full moon culminates July 5. The planet Mars will continue to travel in retrograde motion until July 19. It is best to postpone launching major ventures until the light side of the new moon on July 20. Today the moon continues its travel in serious Scorpio, active until 3:25 p.m. Spend time alone; lighten up, mellow out. The moon enters Sagittarius at 11:13 p.m.

MONDAY, JULY 2

A Sagittarius moon sets a fast pace today and tomorrow. You can be productive, if you carefully organize your time and stick to your game plan. A lunar opposition to Saturn at 4:26 p.m. may bring a lull period, when energy is deflated. Stay upbeat; go with the flow. A lunar alignment to Pluto this evening warns you to avoid emotional thunderstorms. Know when it's time to call it a night.

TUESDAY, JULY 3

Start this day with an upbeat, easy-going attitude. Don't get caught up in morning hassles or the blues. A lunar alignment to Mars warns you to slow down and pay attention. It may be difficult to focus on practical matters; organization and efficiency take a back seat today. It is best to handle a variety of odd jobs, errands rather than one project that requires mental concentration. People may be restless, distracted. Get back in the swing of favorite sports, exercise routines.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 4

The Sagittarius moon opposes Jupiter and becomes inactive at 4:36 a.m. The final windup to the full moon begins at 8:21 a.m., when the moon enters Capricorn. This month's full moon is accompanied by an eclipse, further intensifying its influence. Full moon periods can go either way, bringing breakthroughs or breakdowns. Energy and emotions run high. Maintain a balance. Don't overdo on any level. Be more expressive and sensitive to loved ones on the ropes. Your kindness can turn the tide in a favorable way.

THURSDAY, JULY 5

Yesterday's advice applies to today. Wake up in a good mood. The full moon/lunar eclipse culminates at 11:04 a.m., 14-degrees Capricorn/Cancer. At this time the moon becomes inactive. Don't rock the boat in business or romance. Stay alert and use common sense. If you are working, you can be most productive. Finish projects already begun rather than starting new ones. The planet Venus moves into Gemini at 12:44 p.m., remaining there until August 1 and prompting you to explore new horizons and develop new alliances.

FRIDAY, JULY 6

A harmonious alignment of Mercury and Uranus saves the day. Its influence may bring new inspiration, ideas, solutions. The focus is on communications, new techniques, technologies. This is a great time to take on new studies or to troubleshoot and brainstorm. The Capricorn moon continues inactive travel until 7:33 p.m., when the moon enters Aquarius. A lunar alignment to Venus makes this evening prime for social activities, romantic rendezvous. Take a walk on the wild side.

SATURDAY, JULY 7

An Aquarius moon sets the stage for an exciting weekend. Take a vacation from routine and responsibilities; relax, unwind, enjoy life. The Aquarius moon forms easy contacts to Neptune, Saturn, Pluto and Mars. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can get them out of the way in short time. Gather with friends and let the good times roll this evening.

SUNDAY, JULY 8

This is a wonderful day for letting off steam, partying, recharging your batteries. The Aquarius moon prompts you to be more spontaneous, adventurous. Avoid making rigid plans or commitments. Follow your intuition. At 8:22 p.m. the moon aligns with Uranus, the planetary ruler of Aquarius, amplifying the freedom-loving, 'do your thing' theme.

MONDAY, JULY 9

The Aquarius moon becomes inactive at 6:28 a.m. until 8:05 a.m., when a laidback Pisces moon arrives. The next three days are prime for vacationing. Take extra quiet time out for yourself. Renew your spirit through time spent in solitude, meditation, art or nature.

TUESDAY, JULY 10

Storm clouds move in today. The Pisces moon forms challenging 90-degree alignments to Saturn and Pluto in the morning, Mars in the afternoon. Others may be moody, hypersensitive. Don't overpersonalize. The best way to channel today's influences is to express yourself creatively. Photography, music, art, poetry get the green light.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11

Take advantage of relatively quiet astrological influences today. Meditate, play music; take some soul time. The moon continues to travel in Pisces, and Venus prepares to form a harmonious contact to Neptune, the planetary ruler of Pisces. Do something that brings beauty into your life or the life of another. Pay attention to your intuition. At 8:09 p.m. the Pisces moon becomes inactive until 8:36 p.m., when an Aries moon takes over.

THURSDAY, JULY 12

Planetary action runs fast and furious, making this an exciting, 'anything can happen' kind of day. The moon travels in energetic Aries forming harmonious contacts to Venus, Neptune, Saturn and Pluto. Venus and Neptune align at 4:49 p.m. Mercury and Jupiter conjoin at the last degree of Gemini at 6:29 p.m. Mercury moves into the sign Cancer at 6:47 p.m., remaining there until July 30. Jupiter moves into Cancer at 8:03 p.m. Jupiter travels in the sign Cancer until August 1, 2002 bringing new opportunities to Cancerians.

FRIDAY, JULY 13

The moon travels in pioneering Aries. However, Mars, the planetary ruler continues retrograde travel until the July 19. It is best to sleep on new ideas and postpone taking action for another week. The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 2:45 p.m. This month's new moon will culminate on July 20, bringing an ideal time for new starts across the board. At 752 p.m. the moon aligns with Uranus and becomes inactive. Forget your troubles and go for the good times this evening.

FLY AWAY HOME

Clinic director Matt Laing realseases an American Kestral into the wild last week at the New England Wildlife Center.

Fit enough to fly away

Wildlife center releases birds of prey

By Timothy Llewellyn
CORRESPONDENT

Long days and tense nights of hard work paid off for the New England Wildlife Center as it released eight birds of prey back into the wild. The released birds were five Screech Owls and three American Kestrels, which were found orphaned and injured throughout the greater Boston area.

"When we release an animal its a very rewarding experience for the whole staff," said Mathew Laing, wildlife hospital director. "The point is not to keep them in captivity, they are not dogs and cats, they are much happier in the wild."

Before releasing birds, the center's staff takes final wing and weight measurements and fits the birds with a metal band with a unique identification number. Laing likened this number to Social Security number that can be used to track the birds progress in the future. This band also becomes a measuring stick for the center's success.

"If we find a bird dead the next day, that's not good," said Laing. But he explained that many of the rehabilitations are extremely successful, and there have been cases of geese that had been released from the center found as far north as Canada.

Most patients are common wildlife — up to 4,000 annually — brought into the center by the general public to be taken care of until they are deemed fit to be released. The rehabilitation process varies from just a few days to a whole year. The birds released last Wednesday averaged a rehabilitation period of four to six weeks before they were fit to fly.

This latest release was especially gratifying because the wildlife center was able to rehabilitate and release a large group of relatively rare birds of prey.

"This is the pay-off for all the work that we have been doing for months here," said Laing.

The wildlife is an 18-year-old organization established to rehabilitate and release sick, injured and orphaned wildlife as well as to educate the public about wildlife issues. Running on roughly six acres of land across from the South Shore Country Club, the center is staffed by a combination of full-time staff, part-time volunteers and students.

Another important function of the wildlife center is promoting wildlife awareness, especially to local schoolchildren. The center runs several educational programs and works closely with the South Shore Charter School in Hull to give children hands-on wildlife education.

"The goal is to get the public to understand and know wildlife better," said Roberta Hershorn, director of pubic relations for the center.

The organization's hard work has not gone unnoticed. In fact, 12.4 acres of commercially zoned wooded land on Columbian street in Weymouth has recently been donated to the wildlife center. The donation was made by the Curtis family of Hingham in memory of the late Thomas E. Curtis.

Now the center faces a different kind of problem. That of raising enough capital to build an effective facility at the new Weymouth location. To do this, the wildlife has launched a capital campaign with the hopes of raising five million dollars.

The move is a necessary one according to Hershorn.

"They need more room, they just don't have enough where they are," Hershorn said.

The center would retain its Hingham facility for the use of its students, volunteers and for continuing educational programs, and use the Weymouth facility to build a new wildlife hospital and significantly increase its staff size. Hershorn believes that this move would help the center stay at the forefront of wildlife care and education.

Music Circus for children

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the Music Circus registration for "Jack in the Beanstalk" on Tuesday, July 3 from 9 a.m. to noon at the recreation office in the Town Hall. There will be no evening registration for this performance because Town Hall will be closing early.

Music Circus registrations for children involved in The Playground Program is held every Tuesday at the recreation office from 9 a.m. to noon and from 5 to 7 p.m. for the remaining three performances.

Music Circus registrations are held two weeks prior to the actual date of the show. Registration on July 3 for "Jack in the Beanstalk" is for the performance that is on Thursday, July 19. Please consult the summer fliers or The

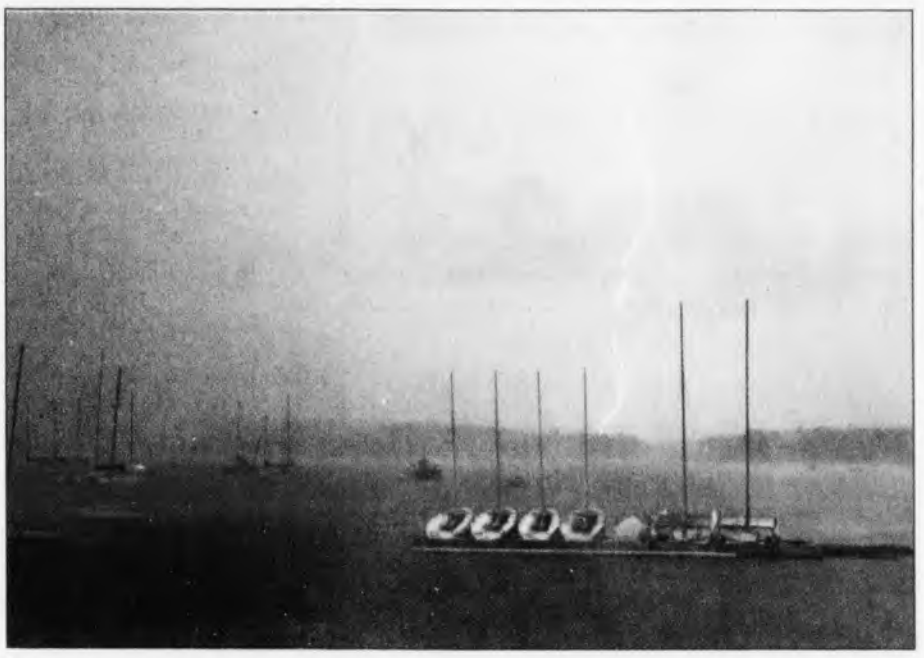
Lightning's fireworks set stage for Fourth

Emergency workers have a hectic night



By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Saturday evening, when the lights went out in Cohasset — restaurants closed their doors, the emergency dispatch center at the police-fire station was flooded with calls and the Music Circus had to cancel its season opener featuring Wynonna.

But Mother Nature put on a show of her own that night, lighting up the dark sky with enough Fourth of July explosives to rival the most elaborate pyrotechnics display anywhere.

"It was unbelievable," said Joseph Campbell of Atlantica, where he was overlooking the harbor. "It was the greatest light show — the skies were lighting up. It was pretty spectacular."

Changes loom in affordable housing law

Accessible dwellings would count toward a town's total

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The state House of Representatives voted a number of changes to the Chapter 40B "anti-snob zoning" laws Tuesday that could have an impact on Cohasset. The amendment would allow accessory dwellings, federally-subsidized housing and mobile home parks to count toward a town's "affordable housing" stock.

The accessory dwelling issue is interesting because in the spring, Cohasset residents tabled a Town Meeting article that would have allowed accessory dwellings under town bylaw. Town officials hope to bring back a similar version of the article at a special fall Town Meeting.

Under the House's plan, led by House Minority Leader Fran Marini, R-Hanson, those accessory dwellings would be counted toward a town's affordable housing stock; something that could help a town like Cohasset, where less than 3 percent of its housing is "affordable" and therefore, is a prime candidate for the comprehensive permit process.

"I think that's a great part of this amendment."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

"If the town goes back in the fall and supports the senior housing committee's proposal for accessory dwellings, I think that would put us in great shape," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "I think that's a great part of this amendment."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said the change would help spur the creation of new housing units which is the whole pur-

Hingham lumber yard eyeing Route 3A move

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Hingham Lumber has filed plans with the town that would move the 54-year old business to Route 3A in Cohasset.

The proposal is to build two commercial buildings on the 13.4 acre parcel, owned by Crocker Realty Trust. The main building would be a 24,000 square-foot building with retail space, a showroom and offices. The second building would be a large 60,000 square foot drive through warehouse and storage facility, where customers would be able to drive into to pick up lumber, plywood, doors, windows and masonry products, and also contain 40 parking spaces. It would also be used as storage room for deliveries and a small shop for custom orders.

Although plans have been filed with both the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals — the business would need two special permits to deal with flooding and parking issues — owner Thomas McNulty wouldn't comment on the plan at this time.

"I'd like to see it. It would be a great catch for the town of Cohasset."
—Paul Barry, landowner

If plans go forward McNulty, who owns the lumber yard with his brother, John, would move the business to the vacant site located to the north of the new Cohasset Collision Center, on the former site of a driving range. Paul Barry, owner of the land, said he and the McNultys are still discussing the possible move.

"The issue hasn't been satisfied yet, we're still working on it," Barry said.

He said "final arrangements have not yet been made" but was "pretty certain" the move would happen. Barry also couldn't say whether the McNultys would lease the land or buy it outright.

"I'd like to see it, it would be a great catch for the town of Cohasset," Barry said in an earlier interview. "It's a great operation."

A July 16 zoning board hearing has been scheduled to discuss the special permit requests. One permit is needed because approximately 200 square feet of the main building and parking lot would be located in a flood plain.

The other permit is to deal with

Light turnout on first day of trash program

Many flocked to dump before PAYT started

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The onslaught of residents slipping in Saturday the last day before "Pay As You Throw" started, resulted in a quiet day Sunday at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

"It was a madhouse all day yesterday," RTF worker Charlie Guarente said Sunday about the day before the start of the "buck a bag" program. "There were cars lined up all the way down Cedar Street."

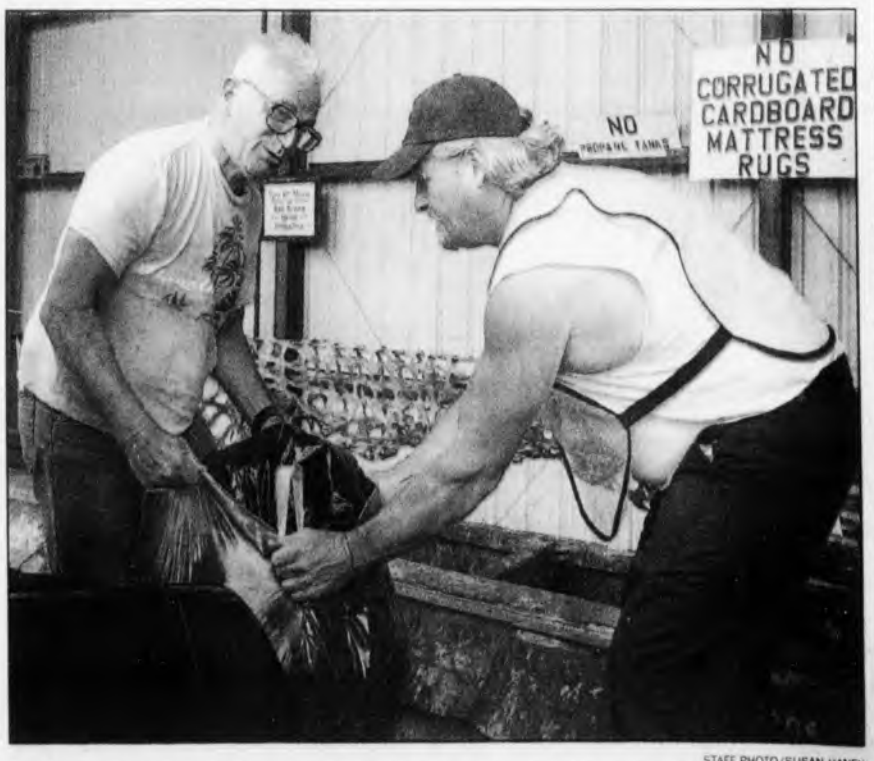
The frantic Saturday crush by Cohasset residents to dispose of as much trash as possible under the old dumping rules, gave way to a more subdued atmosphere by Sunday afternoon.

"We're a bit off today," said Bob Goyette, owner of Crown Security, who was busy checking stickers as the occasional car and truck rode through.

Goyette, who was monitoring the RTF and checking for dump stickers, and said there haven't been too many incidents of "dump-rage."

"It hasn't been too bad, not as bad as the past few years," he said. "We've had a few complainers, but they've all acted pretty well."

The PAYT program is designed to force Cohasset residents to recycle more, and was approved by a Town Meeting vote in 2000.



Town residents aren't allowed to dump unless their trash is in either an official blue — 15-gallon or 30-gallon trash bag. The bags cost 50 cents for the 15-gallon bag, and $1 for a 30-gallon bag.

For the past year, the town Recycling Committee has published informational brochures on the July 1 changeover, but that didn't stop some residents from forgetting about it.

Guarente had a few stories about a few residents pulling up and getting very upset when he wouldn't allow them to dump.

"It's not my fault," he said.

Town legal budget in the black

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Despite dozens of legal cases involving town boards, the town legal budget finished fiscal year 2001 in the black by about $15,000.

As of July 2, the town had only been billed for $185,000 in legal services, and had budgeted $200,000.

"I think that's pretty good considering how much is going on in town," said Town Manager Mark Haddad.

Finance Director Michael Buckley said the town has another bill of approximately $10,000 coming in, but because it will be received after the end of the fiscal year, it will be paid through a fall Town Meeting article.

The surplus is impressive considering selectmen were worried at this time last year that town counsel Paul DeRensis's request for an increase in his hourly rate and retainer fee would lead to the legal budget becoming a budget buster.

DeRensis, asked for – and received – a $10 raise in his hourly rate to $150 per hour, and $500 a month in his retainer to $4,500 a month.

"I think that's pretty good considering how much is going on in town."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Haddad said the retainer covers the work DeRensis does regarding Town Meetings, coverage at any board meetings, and legal opinions on issues.

The hourly rate kicks into effect during litigation, collective bargaining, or appraisals.

As of December 31, 2000, Cohasset was entangled in 33 claims and lawsuits ranging from property appraisal disputes, to a physical education class injury.

Haddad said the number of lawsuits is about average for a town of its size, and is to be expected.

"It's just the nature of doing business," he said. "A lot of town boards are conscientious about what they do, and try to make a decision in the best interest of the town that may not be in the best interest of the developer.

"But I compliment all those boards. All they're trying to do is make decisions in the best interest of Cohasset."

Some of the lawsuits involving the town are major, such as the four lawsuits surrounding Cohasset Heights Limited, and the state lawsuit against the town that resulted in the Second Amended Agreement for Final Judgment which spurred the recent $14 million sewer con-

Town water quality report is released

The Cohasset Water Commission has released its 2001 Water Quality Report, which was mailed to all Cohasset residents June 29. EPA requires all water suppliers to prepare and distribute this report by July 1 each year.

"We are pleased to report, again, that Cohasset drinking water is in compliance with all applicable water quality standards," said John McNabb, chairman of the Water Commission.

"We have taken many significant steps in the past year to preserve and protect the quality of Cohasset's public drinking water," McNabb said, "such as the new Scituate Hill water tank, the flushing of the water pipes in April, the taking by eminent domain of the Wolf Pits to protect it from development, the revisions to the Water Resource District bylaws at the March 31 Annual Town Meeting, and our continued improvements to the distribution system."

EPA regulations require all water suppliers to report all regulated contaminants which are detected in the drinking water.

The Water Quality Report also included a large scale map of the watershed for the sources of Cohasset's water supply, Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir, which shows seven potential sources of contamination.

"The Water Commission is in the process of completing a comprehensive Water Supply Protection Plan which will fully assess all potential sources of contamination and to establish a schedule for purchase of lands in the watershed to provide further protection," McNabb said.

Copies of the Water Quality Report are available at Town Hall, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant.

- Planning Board, July 18, 8 p.m.

The School Building Committee meets every Wednesday night at 6 p.m. in the selectmen's office.

Senior Housing

Senior Housing Committee chairman Jim Lagrotteria has resigned from the committee. He cited a "complicated family matter" which required his undivided attention as the reason for his departure.

However, the Advisory Committee did approve $3,000 for the Senior Housing Committee to look into developing two parcels of land into affordable senior housing. The parcels are town-owned property located off Pleasant Street and Route 3A, adjacent to the Stop & Shop.

The committee is meeting with the Cohasset Clergy Association to discuss a joint venture to develop the housing.

Chatterton fund

Committee members of the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund are sponsoring "An Evening with the Beach Boys" on Sunday, August 19 at 9 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus. Cost of the concert is $60 per ticket with $30 going to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

For tickets, contact Ron Ford at 781-383-6103; Linda Bolster at 781-383-6148; or Linda Schultz at 781-383-0597.

Some good news for commuter boat users

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Long-awaited and much-needed MBTA commuter boat improvements are in the works.

Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan has earmarked $500,000 to widen access ramps, improve lighting and provide a custom-built lift for the disabled at the commuter boat terminal at Hingham Shipyard.

"This is good news. The bottom line is we've been pushing for improvements for a long time," said Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth. "They're long overdue but welcome."

The covered walkway, which will shield commuters during inclement weather, will run from the corner of the ticket office to the boat and will be lit both on the inside and outside.

Widening the ramp from six to eight feet will alleviate congestion when passengers, who now must exit the boat in single file, disembark.

The upgrade could begin as early as this fall. Some improvements may be completed as soon as December in the best-case scenario, according to Hedlund.

Money was earmarked for commuter boat terminal improvements six years ago, but the funds were never released.

Hedlund was instrumental in securing those funds by amending the 1995 Seaport Bond Bill to include $750,000 specifically for improvements to the Hingham commuter boat. The 1996 Transportation Bond Bill earmarked $1 million for the facility.

This time around, though, the $500,000 will be worked into the MBTA's capital spending plan.

"I'm happy we're on the same page with the MBTA in releasing funds for this project."

— state Sen. Robert Hedlund

"The Hingham commuter boat is a great success story," Hedlund said. "More and more commuters use this service."

The MBTA directors are expected to sign-off on the agreement the first week in July.

"I'm happy we're on the same page with the MBTA in releasing funds for this project," Hedlund said.

Last week, Hedlund, state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and local officials met with Assistant Secretary of Transportation James Scanlon at the shipyard to tour the commuter boat facility to discuss ways to make improvements.

Hedlund, Bradley and Hingham officials are also encouraging the MTBA to build a deck over the commuter boat parking lot to provide more spaces as part of the shipyard redevelopment proposal. The demand for parking now far exceeds the present capacity.

"The fact that the parking lot is always full is an illustration of how successful the commuter boats are," Hedlund said. "As the commuter boat continues to rise in popularity, the parking will only get worse. It's an issue that's become a priority."

Additional improvements, including moving the parking area closer to the commuter boat facility, are also slated as part of that plan.

In the meantime, the most recently funded improvements will become a reality.

The senator doesn't expect much disruption while the work is taking place.

"There may be a short window of time during which an adjacent Department of Environmental Management pier will be used," he said.

Volunteers are heart of the Senior Center

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

With all the good the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs does, it can't be done without the help of volunteers. Whether it's senior luncheons, to rides to the doctor, to weekly bridge games — a small army of 100 volunteers of all ages help keep the CEA vibrant and successful.

But the council is looking for more helpers and has brought on a part-time volunteer coordinator to help with the effort.

Patricia "Tish" Clark, is the newest face in the South Shore Community Center. Clark — a long-time Norwell resident, and former head of the Hingham Visiting Nurses Association — started last week.

"She brings a lot to Cohasset with her experience," said CEA director Kathy Bryanton.

Clark will be in charge of scheduling the volunteers the CEA currently has, as well as helping to recruit new ones.

Clark said although she was unsure if she wanted to go back to work, albeit for 15 hours a week, she said the Cohasset CEA is a "wonderful organization that has some very good programs."

More than a quarter of the Cohasset population is 55 or older. Of that 25 percent, one-third is older than 75, said Bryanton. Last year, 37 percent of the town's people over the age 60 used the CEA, a large jump from the 4 percent when the group started in 1985.

Tish Clark is the new volunteer coordinator at the Senior Center.

Although the number of seniors involved in the CEA's activities has increased, the number of volunteers has decreased in recent years.

"What we have seen is through attrition, people moving and illness, we've lost a lot of the group we originally started with," Bryanton said.

The CEA started in one room in the South Shore Community Center, and has now grown to be an anchor within the building.

"Our mission was to bring all senior services — the Social Service League, town elder services, Council on Elder Affairs — under one roof, and provide outreach to the very population that has lived here all their life, and possibly may need something," she said.

Along with coordinating the volunteers, Clark also hopes to be able to help identify and organize new volunteer programs and opportunities.

"We have a real good foundation of volunteers," she said. "But we need more."

Some of the programs CEA volunteers coordinate include organizing the group's newsletter, stuffing envelopes at town hall, a knitting program, office administration, a spelling-bee challenge against high school students, and the Chantileers, a men's-only weekly breakfast group.

Bryanton and Clark said they hope to attract people that can help organize more CEA outings, such as picnics and trips to historical places such as Plymouth.

Lightning's fireworks set stage for Fourth structures in town that were hit by lightning during Saturday's three-hour electrical storm. None of the strikes caused major damage, police said.

Campbell said Atlantica was hit twice. The first time early in the storm, lightning struck the waterfall with the compass rose on top at the entrance and the second time, it struck the roof, shaking the building, setting off the alarms and knocking out the phone system.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling said the thunder and lightning began around 7 p.m. and was the first of three individual storms. Lightning continuously ripped through the sky down to the ground every few seconds, he said.

Almost exactly 24 hours later, Sunday's repeat performance paled in comparison to Saturday's thunderstorm. But the less dramatic encore was a relief to all those in town who didn't want to experience another power outage and to the emergency workers coping with dozens of calls.

"It's the busiest night I've had since I've been here," said long-time dispatcher David Weeks, who said more than 100 calls came into the station during Saturday's storm that knocked out power to most of Cohasset, including the traffic lights on Route 3A. Power was restored in about five hours to all but about 250 homes, which were still without power the next day.

Weeks said the simultaneous calls coming from Cohasset and other towns stretched emergency resources. Hull and Scituate each had fires and Hingham had three house fires going at the same time.

Kristin Curran, 289 Beechwood St., said she and her family heard a crack and a loud bang. Lightning struck a tree and several other spots in the back yard, sending electricity up the gutters of the house.

"We lost our satellite dish and TV," she said.

Lightning, police and fire officials said, also struck the homes at 14 Nichols Road, 185 Jerusalem Road and a structure on South Main Street.

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia said the fire department responded to 12 calls between 7:21 and 11:39 p.m., Saturday.

"They ranged from alarm activations due to power surges to wires down and lightning strikes," he said. "Hingham called for mutual aid and we had to tell them we had none available."

"It was a crazy night," Silvia said. Sunday, the fire department conducted three investigations resulting from the storm the night before. That night, the department responded to four more calls during that line of thunderstorms that passed through.

Campbell of Atlantica said there was still some daylight when the restaurant lost power, so those patrons already served could finish eating by candlelight.

"We moved anyone out without fork in hand," he said. At about 10:30 p.m. with power restored, the staff was sorting over what had happened with the registers and had the plates lined up for the dishwasher — when the second jolt hit. The power surge burned out parts of the computer system. "It was wild," Campbell said.

The power outage necessitated canceling the Music Circus concert by Wynonna, a country western star, who was slated to open the theater's 50th anniversary season.

Vince Longo, general manager, said it was the first time in his nine seasons he had to cancel a show. But, he said, many of those who bought tickets stayed home.

"It was funny, we weren't even near half a house," Longo said. "There were all kinds of warnings out – but we didn't lose power until 8 p.m., so I don't know if people stayed home or turned back in their cars."

He said those who did make the trek in the darkened skies handled the power outage and resulting cancellation in stride.

"Mother Nature dealt us a pretty big blow," Longo said. "But I was happy with the way the public responded. There was still enough light for everyone to get to their cars and they left in an orderly fashion.

"No one complained," he said. Longo said the Music Circus does have emergency power that will illuminate aisle lights but the generator does not have enough amperage to run a show.

He said the remainder of Wynonna's schedule and the theater's 50th anniversary season don't mesh, so the show won't be rescheduled. However, Wynonna has promised to come back next year. Longo said ticket holders to Saturday's show will get their money back.

FIREWORKS

Hello Cohasset. I am sure that all of you are talking about the ways you spent your Fourth of July this year. Who would have thought that we would have our very own set of "fireworks" this past weekend with those amazing storms. I am hoping that all of you were safe and sound over the weekend and also on the Fourth and all enjoyed the celebrations, parades and fireworks wherever you were. Please send in some news about it as well as any photos of friends, family or other Cohasset people to share.

SAFETY DAY

I just wanted to say a huge thanks to all of the wonderful men and women in uniform who came to the Cohasset Recreations Safety Day last Friday. I was very happy to see so many wonderful people coming together to show the children so many wonderful rescue vehicles and then provide lunch for them all. The kids were all having a great time and for them to be able to see everyone working together in a non-threatening environment and climb all over the equipment really gave them a great sense of who and what these people are all about. Great job to all of you who helped plan this great day and make it a day for all the children to remember!

MUSIC RECITAL

COLBY HONORS

Colby College wanted us to know that Jessie L. Zerendow and Caitlin E. Slodden were named to the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement during the spring semester of the 2000-01 school year.

Jessie, a member of the Class of 2004 is the daughter of Donald and Victoria Zerendow, and her major is international studies. Caitlin, also a freshman, is the daughter of Henry and Karen Slodden, and has a major in anthropology and a minor in women's studies and science, technology and society. Great work, ladies!

COOKIE SELLER

Marie Gilman, a first grader from Cohasset, was the top cookie salesgirl in our town. Marie sold quite a lot of cookies! Great job, Marie!

BABSON GRADUATES

We have two new graduates from Babson College from our town. Karen D. Niessink, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jan Niessink and Mark E. Whitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Whitman both graduated in May, 2001 with bachelor of science degrees in business administration. More great news for us all to see, congratulations to you both!

OFF TO HARVARD

The St. Paul School of Concord, N.H. held its graduation exercises recently and Nicholas "Carter" Noon of Cohasset was among the students. Carter, son of Nick and Connie Noon, received his diploma magna cum laude with distinction in languages. He was awarded the Charles and Benjamin Cheney Goodwin Prize for excellence in the classics. Carter enrolled in the school in the Fourth Form.(tenth grade.) Carter has received many awards and will attendHarvard University in the fall. All that hard work sure paid off Carter. Fantastic news.

UMASS DEGREES

At UMass Boston, we had several Cohasset students receive degrees at the 33rd Commencement Exercises held on June 2, 2001. Paul J. O'Leary received a bachelor of arts degree and Mary Ann Cushing, Angela K. Walsh and Maureen E. Jerz received graduate degrees. Great job to you all and the best of luck in your futures.

PROUD PARENTS

Christy and Andrea Mihos are two very proud parents who had some great news to share about their children. Their daughter Ashley, graduated from St. George's School in Newport, R.I. and has been admitted to Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Ashley played ice hockey, field hockey and lacrosse at St. George's and hopes to play varsity ice hockey at Colby.

Christy and Andrea's son, also Christy, graduated from Derby Academy last month. Christy was awarded the Derby Academy Pin, Derby's highest honor which is awarded by the faculty. He was also awarded the Latin Prize, the William Russell Ice Hockey Award and The Coach's Award in Lacrosse. Christy served as captain of the varsity ice hockey team and varsity lacrosse team and captain of the Derby Darks, also as editor of the Derby Spirit, the school newspaper. He has been admitted to St. George's School in Newport in the Fall. What a great list of accomplishments!

St. Paul Headmaster Bishop Craig Anderson and Carter Noon, who heads to Harvard in the fall.

Richard and Dyan Kurtz completed the Kona Hawaii marathon to raise money for diabetes research.

Marie Gilman, was the top cookie seller.

MARATHON EFFORT

Congratulations to Richard and Dyan Kurtz! Dyan, winner of the female division of the Cohasset Road Race, and Richard, a cancer survivor, completed their first marathon in Kona, Hawaii to raise money for diabetes research. They both finished in about four hours. A few days later on a beach at sunset, they exchanged vows and are returning home as husband and wife. Congratulations – your family, friends and all of Cohasset is proud of you!

Cohasset professor wins Harvard teaching award

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

When Ubaldo DiBenedetto was a young college student in Italy in the mid 20th Century, European universities hadn't progressed much over the last few hundred years.

"Universities in Italy and the U.S. were so different it was like night and day," he remembered of the contrast when he came to Boston as a foreign exchange student. "It was still a very medieval approach where the professors are on a pedestal and very few can reach up and touch them. Here in the U.S., we called them by their first name. It was very informal, and in so doing, you have a better way of reaching the students, you can talk to them, find out what they know, what their aspirations are."

It was those differences that made DiBenedetto take a personal pledge.

"I decided that if I ever reached teaching at the college level that I would never bring with me memories of my days in an Italian university," he said.

The pledge worked.

This past May, DiBenedetto received the "Excellence in Teaching" award from Harvard University, for his work in the institution's continuing education department.

"I never imagined this," he said recently after receiving the award at Harvard's 350th commencement exercises. "I never thought it possible that one day I would be chosen, but there it is. The dean called me up and told me personally. That was quite an honor."

Since 1980, the Jerusalem Road resident has taught myriad courses focusing on Italian culture and studies. His most recent course — taught completely in Italian — concentrates on Italian art of the Renaissance and its links to literature and philosophy.

"We look at a particular painting not only from its artistic merits, but from the various point of views illustrated, such as landscape," he explained. "For example, landscape is important because it goes back to one of the Italian poets, Virgil, who idolized the landscape."

Over the years, his courses have counted art majors, graduate students, Ph.D.s, and fellow professors in their ranks – most of whom give DiBenedetto rave reviews.

"In this business you have to stay busy or you won't stay for long."
— Ubaldo DiBenedetto

He said his evaluations have averaged 4.2 points out of a possible five, and this past year, he received a perfect score.

"My last group of students did write a letter to the Dean telling them what they experienced in the class," said DiBenedetto. "That must have been some letter."

He served in the U.S. Army during the Korean War as a meteorologist in order to stay in the country after graduating from Northeastern University. He subsequently collected master's degrees from Bridgewater State College in education, Middlebury College in Spanish, and a doctorate from the University of Madrid in comparative literature.

DiBenedetto started out teaching high school Spanish and Italian in Hull, but soon moved up to teaching college courses. "I had ideas for articles and books and teaching college gave me the opportunity and the time to research," he explained.

He moved on to teach college courses at the College of the Sacred Heart, Boston College, University of Massachusetts, and finally Harvard, during which time he has written three books on the Renaissance, nine essays on Renaissance poetry, a Spanish/English dictionary, and just recently published a novel called "Polar Day 9," with Berkeley Press. He said the book is about a meteorologist, who finds a way to reroute the Gulf Stream to save the world from darkness after an earthquake releases sunlight-blocking gasses.

"In this business you have to stay busy or you won't stay for long," he said.

DiBenedetto said it was about 10 years ago, while teaching a class on Italian short stories and current events, that Dean Raymond Comeau approached him about creating a class exploring the synthesis of all Italian art movements.

He said he was given the time to go to Venice and study the great Venetian works of art.

"I started teaching it about five years ago and it's been very successful."

In between the constant work and travel, DiBenedetto, who recently returned from another trip abroad, found time to become a familiar face in the Cohasset arts circle since moving to town in 1958. He served as president of the South Shore Arts Center from 1981-1984, and helped raise the initial funds to move the gallery to the current building on Ripley Road. He also has been involved with the Cohasset Dramatic Club, as a past-president, director and make-up artist.

DiBenedetto, a flutist, was also an original member of the Rusty Skippers, the town band. "There was a conflict with rehearsal time, and I had to leave," he said. "I miss them very much, and hope to join with them again next year."

His wife, Delia, taught at the Osgood School for 36 years until her recent retirement. "We could hardly go outside without someone with gray hair coming up to us, saying 'Hi, Mrs. DiBenedetto, you were my teacher,'" he joked.

They had no children, but said he's fed a crow named Fred for a long time. "For 15 years he's been a friend of mine," he said.

DiBenedetto's next project could be writing a tourist guide for Cohasset, as he gushes over the beauty of the town.

"I don't think I've seen a better looking town anywhere in the world," he says unprovoked. He quotes from a New York Times travel section story that called the stretch of water-front road from the end of Forest Avenue to Central Cemetery on Jerusalem Road, the most beautiful stretch for jogging in the country.

"When I go for a walk, I look at the sky and say 'Thank you for this gift,'" said DiBenedetto. "Its unreal to be surrounded by this beauty and the civility of the people. It's just incredible."

Lightning safety

Saturday evening's electrical storm and a repeat performance Sunday provided us with a spectacular display of lightning in the dark sky. But while "fireworks" were going off all around us — we also rightly feared the awesome power of lightning with its thousands of volts of electricity.

What you may not know is lightning is the number two storm killer in the country, killing more than hurricanes or tornadoes on average, according to lightning expert William P. Roeder of Patrick Air Force Base in Florida. Only floods kill more. But, Roeder says, the real story of lightning isn't the deaths — it's the injuries. Only about 10 percent of those struck are killed — survivors often suffer severe injury and disability. Lightning also causes about $5 billion in economic losses each year.

If you can see lightning and/or hear thunder, you may already be at risk. Louder and more frequent thunder means that lightning activity is approaching, increasing the risk or injury or death. If the time delay between seeing the flash and hearing the bang is less than 30 seconds, you should be in, or seek a safer location.

A good time to go over lightning safety is while the weekend storms are still fresh in our minds. The safety tips provided here are from the National Lightning Safety Institute, an independent, non-profit, consulting, education and research organization, based in Louisville, Colo.

- If you are planning to be outside, watch or listen to the weather forecast beforehand to ascertain if thunderstorms are likely.
- Plan in advance your evacuation and safety measures. When you first see lightning or hear thunder, activate your emergency plan and go to a building or a vehicle. Lightning often precedes rain; so don't wait for the rain to begin before suspending activities.
- If outdoors, avoid water, avoid the high ground, avoid tall isolated objects, and avoid open spaces. Avoid all metal objects including electric wires, fences, machinery, motors and power tools. Unsafe places include canopies, small picnic or rain shelters, baseball dugouts, flag poles, light poles, bleachers, metal fences, convertibles, cars with fiberglass shells, golf carts and trees. Where possible find shelter in a substantial building, such as a typical house or public building, or in a fully enclosed metal vehicle such as a car, truck or van with the windows completely shut. Avoid contact with metal or conducting surfaces outside or inside the vehicle.
- If lightning is striking nearby when you are outside, you should, crouch down, put your feet together and place your hands over ears to minimize hearing damage from thunder. You should avoid proximity (about 15 ft.) to other people.
- If indoors, avoid water. Stay away from doors and windows. Do not use the telephone. Take off headsets. Turn off, unplug, and stay away from appliances, computers, power tools and TV sets. Lightning may strike exterior electric and phone lines, inducing shocks to inside equipment. Avoid taking a shower, washing your hands, doing dishes or having any contact with conducive surfaces such as metal door or window frames, electrical wiring, telephone wiring and plumbing.
- Suspend activities for 30 minutes after the last observed lightning or thunder.
- Injured persons do not carry an electrical charge and can be handled safely. Apply first aid procedures — CPR and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation — to a lightning victim if you are qualified to do so. Deaths from lightning are from cardiac arrest and stopped breathing at the time of the strike. Call 911 or send for help immediately.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Festival thanks!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the South Shore Art Center and its Board of Directors, we would like to thank the hundreds of people who made the 46th Annual Festival on the Common a huge success.

We had more than 200 volunteer hours coordinated by Marianne Lynner and Andrea Giroux—and filled by over 100 area residents—thank you all. Special thanks to Beth Myers West of Springbrook Toys who put together a terrific art program for kids on Sunday and Linda Bolster who single-handedly runs the kids activities each year.

We can't possibly thank everyone without starting our own publication, but we'd like to thank the people who help us pull together the countless details that ensure a great success: Vince Longo, South Shore Music Circus; Mary Foley; Mark Haddad, Ellen Weir, and Joe Godzik at Town Hall; Chief Noonan and Sergeant Jackson; Rod Hobson at the First Parish Church; Cohasset Greenery, Reeds Country Way; Steve Biagini and the "not-so" Rusty Skippers; Margo Euler and the Broad Cove Chorale; Hingham Woodwind Quintet; Wallace St John; Pat Cannon; Glenn Pratt; Cohasset DPW; Debbie and John Flanagan, Edward Jones Investments; Andrea and Joe Kinnealey, Kinnealey Meats; Anthony and Lydia Everett; Lorraine Bachman/Catering on the Rocks; Sarah Roche; Scituate Boy Scouts, Troop 5; Dan Belz and Atlantic Bagel & Deli; Ronnie Goodwin at Goodwin Graphics; Graham Waste Services; Mullaney's Fish Market; Cohasset Brownie Troop #4774, Susan Butler and Tracy Fredey. Thanks also to Hingham Institution for Savings; Megan, Caroline & Chris Pratt; Peapod; and Plymouth County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The Festival principal sponsors—Atlantica Restaurant, Matrix2000, Community Newspaper Company, and Fleet—make it possible for the Art Center to present a Festival that not only showcases great art, but also celebrates the process of making art and the wonderful community of the South Shore. A million thanks to everyone.

CRC says thanks for helpful letters

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, I would like to thank the various officials, town boards and organizations that wrote letters in support of two recent grant applications submitted in reference to Cohasset Common. The CRC assisted the town in the submission of these applications to the Department of Environmental Management and the Massachusetts Historical Commission for the purpose of developing a Landscape Preservation Plan for Cohasset Common.

Under the direction of the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, the grant will provide financial resources to hire a landscape preservation architect to develop a preservation plan to address such items as tree and greenspace re-planting and maintenance; enhancement of walkway conditions and accessibility; and the development of a public parking approach which protects the integrity and walkway accessibility of the common landscape. In addition, the preservation plan will coincide with preliminary planning efforts by the CRC to bury the overhead utility lines around the commons edge.

Letters of support from the following officials, town boards and organizations were submitted with the grant applications.

Senator Robert L. Hedlund, Representative Garrett Bradley, Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, David Wadsworth - Curator of the Cohasset Historical Society, Historical Commission, Board of Selectmen, Department of Public Works, Planning Board, Open Space Committee, Village Revitalization Task Force, Cohasset Elder Affairs, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Community Garden Club of Cohasset, South Shore Community Center, First Parish, Second Congregational Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church

Though these grant programs tend to be very competitive, this level of support helped to convey the value the town places on preserving and protecting this community treasure.

'Coincidences' are part of the plan

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

They say there are no coincidences and I really do believe it — "coincidences" are part of a big plan. Here's today's.

Being Wednesday, and like most of us finding it a long time from Sunday to the middle of the week when we're still trying to come to grips with the typically-American problem of waste, today meant a trip to the RTF — after buying some PAYT bags from Tina at Cohasset Hardware and hearing her say she had run out and had to obtain more and my wishing her well with this new endeavor.

'Compost Happens'... for some time I've thought that phrase would be an excellent bumper sticker.

We have a three-compartment lazy susan under the kitchen counter for recyclables, but of course we really need a total of six compartments to handle things. We'll eventually get fully organized. At any rate, I sorted my recyclables in the driveway. Times I have gone to the RTF without having stuff organized beforehand, have not been good. It dawned on me that it would be sensible to put sorted recyclables in black gold (compost) containers.

As I was shoveling my compost, another citizen backed up his truck and mentioned to me that he was wearing the right T-shirt for the job. It said, "Compost Happens." I exclaimed and exclaimed, because for some time I've thought that phrase would be an excellent bumper sticker. Needless to say I was quite jealous and I'm going to be on the lookout.

When the mailman arrived, I found I had received a letter from an alert and caring friend. In the envelope was the June 17 New York Sunday Times article, "A Land Rush for Compost in the City," replete with photos of people eagerly scooping up "30-gallon gifts from the sanitation department." The article is fascinating. Latecomers who heard about the giveaway, but found the black gold all gone when they arrived, actually cried. I'm running out of space, but I will include the Web site listed in the article: www.soilfoodweb.com. The article concludes by saying "Some municipalities offer free compost." See you next time.

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer programs

The first of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's summer programs enjoyed a packed house with an unexpected double performance by Betty Green, The Music Lady, and Big Ryan, the Teller of Tall Tales. More than 50 children and adults sang and accompanied the two professional performers.

Look for future library programs beginning Monday, July 9, at 7 p.m. when the New England Opera Theater performs the Lyrical Library Tour. This program will feature songs from well-known stories for children.

Matt Tavares joins the line-up Tuesday, July 17, at 7 p.m., as he talks about how he wrote and illustrated his book, "Zachary's Ball." Copies of his book will be available for purchase and author signing.

Then come in later in the month of July for Burt the Raccoon Puppet Show July 24, an exhibit July 31 presented by New England Reptile, and Aug. 7 Magic for Muggles. More to follow on these programs. Call the library at 781-383-1348 to sign up or for more information.

Puzzle Club

A summer tradition continues with the Puzzle Club conducted by Deer Hill School librarian, Marge Murphy. This fun-loving group is open to children in grades 3 to 5 Monday nights at 7 p.m. beginning July 16. All are welcome.

Goodbye party

A wonderful combined retirement and farewell party was held for Susan Watrous, librarian at the Paul Pratt for 31 years and Suzanne Terry, children's librarian for 15 years, at the home of Friends of the Library President, Linda Wakeman, Friday, June 15.

Rep. Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham) presented both librarians with commendations for their years of service. Watrous was given a gift of a kayak and paddle all purchased through funds of the Friends and Trustees of the library. Terry was presented with a framed picture of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library painted by local artist JoAnne Chittick, also provided by the Friends of the Library and Trustees.

Many friends, family and community members attended the late afternoon party on a beautiful sunny afternoon with a stunning Atlantic Ocean backdrop. Many thanks to all who contributed to the hors d'oeuvres and festivities.

We wish two of our favorite librarians best of luck with their new endeavors be it a new job or messing around the Gulf River. We'll miss you.

HEALTH NOTES

Some thoughts on train's health effects

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A few years ago, at the funeral of his father, Eddy Bursk, a longtime resident of Cohasset, in his eulogy, mentioned a trip to Greenbush he had made with his father in his youth. Few of us remember the old Greenbush line, but the spirit of Greenbush pervades the town, and few are neutral about Greenbush.

What, you may say, has the Greenbush issue to do with health?

After several years on the Board of Health, one could conclude that there are few issues in town which don't in some way affect the health of its citizens. There will be those who say that the diesel smoke, or the noise are health issues, but the greatest contributors to the brown haze (smog) we see when we look out over Mass Bay on windless days comes from vehicles and power plants.

The suggestion has been made that electrified rails would reduce diesel emissions. Hypothetical calculations go something like this: A suburban diesel train is a 2500 to 3000 HP vehicle. This is equivalent to ten 300 HP trucks or about 30 cars with working emission controls. Assume the train has four cars, each carrying 80 passengers or 320 people. According to the MBTA, without trains, 20 percent of the ridership would otherwise be driving into town, 64 people in cars. Using two people in each car, emissions from trains would be about equivalent to emissions from cars. By a similar series of calculations, electrifying the rails would save about half the emissions if natural gas were used in the most efficient power plant available to generate the electricity. I leave it to the reader to figure which is healthier: car or train.

Rails with Trails

A more interesting potential health benefit would be use of the right of way along the tracks as a site for a bicycle and foot path. We know we are an over-weight nation. A so-called Rails with Trails plan is gathering interest in 20 states nationwide and would be a real public health plus.

Mark Fenton of Scituate has proposed such a program to the MBTA, and despite an initial cool reaction, he says (Scituate Mariner, June 24) "There is reason to believe the T may be more responsive to this idea than ever before. The trail, properly patrolled by police and allowing no access to the rail bed itself, could serve as a buffer between the rain line and the surrounding residential areas."

The trail, according to Fenton, will reduce traffic and parking requirements in Greenbush and North Scituate because more potential riders will be able to get to the station following the path on foot or bicycle." Continuing the trail into Cohasset is a logical extension that would allow safe travel on foot on a bicycle between the two Towns. Something not available today.

Fenton also believes that safety along the stretch of tracks will increase with the trail as well. "Now you can allow surveillance (along the tracks)," he said, noting that the trail will prevent kids from hanging out along the tracks because there will be police supervision. "You can encourage lawful use and increase the safety."

More on beach odors

It seems that the more one learns about a subject, the more complicated it gets. After numerous calls and conversations about odors, blaming birds for the smell at Sandy Beach, (Mariner, June 28) was probably a bad idea. One long-time resident near the beach is certain that the smell comes from the seaweed buried at the beach. The day after a winter northeaster seaweed as high as three feet has been observed at the southeast end of the beach, which many say is the origin of the smell. Normally, the prevailing southwest winds should recover much of the beach with sand from the dunes behind the beach during the summer, a process which has been impeded by the road and parking lot. It is therefore necessary to artificially redistribute the sand, a chore done by the DPW.

This year the beach cleanup was delayed because a complaint to the Conservation Commission prohibited a cleanup until a Notice of Intent was filed with the State at considerable cost to the Association. According to Robin Lawrence, president of the Sandy Beach Association, and valued member of the BoH, the seaweed is required to be buried because of environmental regulations. It could well be that the delay in cleanup, followed by appropriate weather conditions permitted the release of odors from the seaweed. Incidentally several people have indicated that the beach seaweed is good for gardens. Perhaps after each northeaster, we could issue a seaweed alert.

Adams' rightful place in history

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Now you might think that after a life in the political trenches that included helping to design the Declaration of Independence and the U. S. Constitution and negotiating alliances with friends and peace treaties with enemies, John Adams, the old lawyer from Braintree, would be allowed to rest in honored peace.

And you might think that, some 200 years after he retired to his home in Quincy, leaving not a trace of his presence behind in Washington, a move by Congressman Bill Delahunt and Senators Ted Kennedy and John Kerry to memorialize the second president in stone in the nation's capital would be greeted with unanimous acclaim.

But no . . .

Last week, the lone dissenter, in the person of columnist Tom Oliphant of the Globe — the Boston, not the National — appeared to challenge a proposal had been enthusiastically received by everyone to the right of William McKinley and to the left of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin.

Tom's gripe with the Founding Father is something called the Alien and Sedition Acts, which were passed in 1798 during John's watch over the federal government, which was then only 11 years old if you count the time from the passage of the Constitution.

"This 1798 offense against freedom, the Constitution, and political morality is a disqualifying action by any historical figure for whom the political equivalent of beatification is being sought," fumed Tom. "It is especially so in the absence if accomplishment of such surpassing and enduring value that they place such reprehensible behavior in acceptable context."

Why, you'd think that old John had raped the maid, murdered the butler, and fled to Brazil with the U. S. Treasury. (On second thought, only the rape is a capital crime any more.)

Actually, the Alien and Sedition Acts were laws aimed at French revolutionaries that made immigration difficult, permitted the president to deport or imprison dangerous aliens and lock up anyone who committed "scandalous and malicious writing" against the United States government.

They were never enforced.

Now, I'm not a conspiracy freak, although I do think that Abe Lincoln was shot from that grassy knoll in the second balcony at Ford's Theater, but I think that Tom, who is known to be a friend of Bill and Hillary, was actually directing his fire at George H. W. Bush — or "George 41," as he is known to those who count the presidents.

The similarity of the Adamses, father and son, to the Bushes is phenomenal.

Both Adamses and both Bushes followed presidents who were larger than life. George Washington had a state, several cities, and thousands of streets named after him. Ronald Reagan, only 13 years after he left office, already has an airport and an aircraft carrier named for him, and his idolaters even now are checking on what else is available.

Both George 41 and John 2 were rusticated by the voters after one term and succeeded by men whose lives would have to be heavily edited before they appeared in the Open Road for Boys. Tom Jefferson liked to dally among the slave girls, and Bill Clinton liked to dally with anyone who wore skirts.

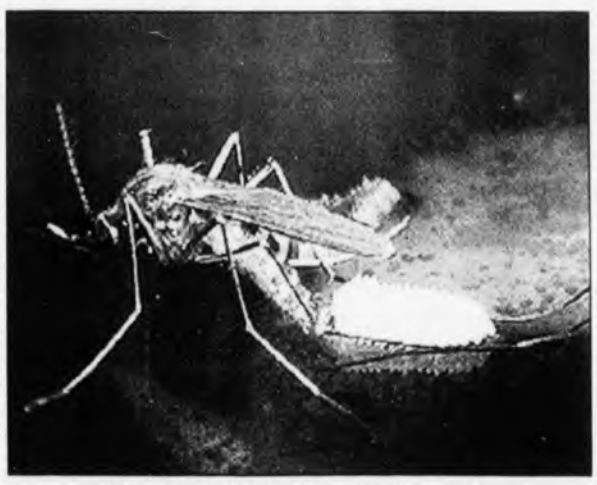
Their sons, George 43 and John Quincy 6, were elected president over men who got more votes than they did. George was named by a partisan decision of the Supreme Court, and John Quincy was named by a partisan vote of the House of Representatives. John Quincy served only one four-year term.

Maybe that's what Tom Oliphant had in the subliminal recesses of his mind when he attacked John Adams.

Avian health hazards - medical, man-made, and mosquito-borne

A BIRDERS EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON



Humans succumb to disease, die accidental deaths and experience a range of hazards in their lives. The same thing happens to birds. They become ill with a variety of bacterial, viral and fungal diseases. Although healthy birds can safely carry some parasites, very heavy infestation can be a serious problem. Predation, flying into windows to chase a reflection mistakenly thought to be a competitor, pesticides, oil spills, fishing lines, and plastic rings from drink cans are all threats.

The US Fish and Wildlife Service estimates 40 million birds are killed annually nationwide.

Aspergillosis is a very common fungal disease of the respiratory system, which is contracted through contaminated food and dirty bird feeders. Botulism, a form of food poisoning causing paralysis, is one of the most deadly bacterial diseases to afflict birds, especially waterfowl. Most research on avian diseases has been done on poultry, because of the economic consequences. More needs to be done on wild birds.

Outbreaks of an intestinal disease called salmonellosis occasionally occur, particularly where large flocks of birds feed together on the ground. There was a significant outbreak among songbirds in the northeast in 1998. There are some 2000 strains of bacterial salmonella, which gets its name from Daniel Salmon who identified the pathogen and was the first graduate of Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine in about 1876. Any time you notice sick or dying birds around your feeders, it is a good idea to clean them out with soap and water, then rinse with a 10 percent bleach solution. It may be necessary to remove the feeders temporarily to break the cycle. Since humans can be infected by salmonella as well, be sure to take precautions when cleaning dirty feeders.

In recent years, a bacterium called mycoplasma gallisepticum has caused a respiratory disease with accompanying conjunctivitis in House Finches. Goldfinches and a few other wild birds also get this disease, but it is not a threat to humans. The Cornell Lab of Ornithology has a continent-wide network of volunteer birdwatchers collecting data on feeder birds every year between November and April, giving it an excellent means for studying this disease. Their data have recently been published, showing that when dense colonies of House Finches became infected, their populations dropped, then stabilized at approximately 40 percent of their original total numbers. To see maps showing the incidence of this disease nationwide, or to find out how to report birds at your feeder with crusted or swollen eyes, visit the web site http://birds.cornell.edu/hofi/.

Culex mosquito laying eggs. Infected culex mosquitoes are known to transmit the West Nile virus.

The proliferation of cell phones, pagers, and digital television is well recognized. These devices require communications towers for transmitting signals. In the year 2000, there were 77,000 towers in the US, most of which are lighted as required by the FCC for towers over 200 feet. These lights attract and confuse birds migrating at night, causing them to collide with towers, guy wires, and even other birds. A report released by the American Bird Conservancy last year documented the deaths of hundreds of thousands of birds, involving 230 species. Over 50 of these species are either endangered or threatened. The US Fish and Wildlife Service estimates 40 million birds are killed annually nationwide. Bundling multiple antennae on a single tower, building shorter towers, and using white strobe lights instead of continuously burning red lights are a few suggestions for mitigating this hazardous situation. The FCC regulates towers, but has nothing in its environmental review process concerning the effects of towers on migrating birds.

In 1911, Calbreath Rodgers was the first pilot to fly across the United States from the East Coast to the West Coast. After this historic flight, he was killed in a demonstration flight when his plane collided with a flock of gulls. Fatal crashes between birds and airplanes over the years have been rare, but tragic. More common occurrences are BASHes, or Bird Aircraft Strike Hazards, which cause physical damage to aircraft. Airports go to great lengths to discourage birds from congregating on its fields. Noisemakers, distress calls broadcast over loudspeakers, routing planes away from migration flyways, and even falconry where falcons are released to chase blackbirds, are all methods that have been employed.

Periodically, there are news reports about West Nile virus infections and Lyme Disease. The West Nile virus causes West Nile encephalitis, a disease of the brain. Infectious mosquitoes of the Culex type transmit the virus through blood-drawing bites to humans and to birds and other animals. The virus can only be transmitted is by the bite of an infected mosquito, never directly from person to person. The West Nile virus first appeared in the United States in 1999 in New York City where a number of people subsequently died from encephalitis. Last year in Hingham the West Nile virus was found in 13 dead crows, but not in any humans. So far this year there have been no reports of West Nile infection, according to the Board of Health.

Lyme disease is caused by a spirochetal bacterium called Borrelia burgdorferi, which is carried by deer ticks. The hosts for deer ticks, which are no larger than the head of a pin, include mice, deer and birds. Tick bites transmit the infection to humans who may develop flu-like symptoms, a circular area of red rash, or muscle or joint pain.

These symptoms are not necessarily unique to Lyme disease, making the diagnosis very difficult. Lyme disease is treatable with antibiotics. Without prompt therapy, serious arthritic problems, or even cardiac or nervous system disorders may develop.

Birders eventually end up walking through tick-infested grass or going places where mosquitoes reign. It therefore makes good sense to wear long sleeves and pants for protection. Wearing white socks outside your pants makes it easier to find ticks. Of course, if mosquitoes become too obnoxious, you can resort to bug repellent. It does not need to be a matter of always staying inside, just a matter of using appropriate defenses and a little common sense.

Joanne Norton is a licensed bird-bander, avid birder, and a member of the Hingham Water Resources Task Force.

Town legal budget in the black

struction projects.

Cohasset Harbor Marina also is a familiar litigant with the town. The marina is involved in four lawsuits, mainly surrounding its 1999 expansion in Bailey's Creek. It also sued the town for allegedly installing town moorings in its part of the creek.

Other litigation includes a matter regarding the eminent domain taking on Bear Hill for the new town water tank; a denied permit to expand a business on Hull Street; whether a retaining wall in considered a structure and requires a setback; a counter-suit regarding the attempt to develop the former Eastern Edison site on North Main Street; the seating allowance at the Olde Salt House; planning board approval of a development of Jerusalem Road; and town damage to private property.

A few cases have either since been resolved, or will be shortly. However, a new batch of lawsuits have been filed since town counsel compiled the list in January as part of its annual report.

The town spent $265,000 in legal fees in 1999, and $175,000 in 2000.

Changes in affordable housing law

pose of Chapter 40B.

The controversial changes were widely supported by suburban representatives whose towns had been handcuffed by comprehensive permits. If a community has less than 10 percent of its housing stock "affordable," then a developer can file for a comprehensive permit which allows him to skirt that community's zoning and density laws, provided that 25 percent of the proposed housing units are deeded "affordable housing." The state uses a formula to determine the what constitutes affordable housing.

Bradley said the approved amendments would help deal with some of the problems suburban towns have experienced.

"What urban representatives don't understand is that if a developer is turned down, they come back with a comprehensive permit which the town's infrastructure can't handle. So the town has to back off, and no affordable housing units get built," explained Bradley. "It's really used more as a threat."

He added, "Suburban communities aren't against affordable housing, but the statute isn't being used as it was intended."

Also in the passed amendment was a bill Bradley supported that would set up a committee consisting of members from the House, Senate and housing advocates that would reexamine how affordable housing is defined under the law. The joint committee would also require the state Housing Appeals Committee, which rules over comprehensive permit disputes, to explicitly state what regulations it takes into consideration when debating a case. The joint committee will then rule whether those regulations are appropriate and report back to the legislature.

He said he has asked Speaker of the House Thomas Finneran to be placed on that committee.

The house also voted to ease the burden that would be placed on towns with less than 3 percent of their housing affordable.

Bradley said the initial amendment would have required a town like to Cohasset to raise its amount of affordable housing by two percentage points in two years, and up to five percent within four years. If the town failed, it could be faced with state sanctions.

He said, as originally written, it would have punished towns under the 3 percent mark, but not the towns between the 3 and 5 percent mark.

The revised amendment requires all communities below five percent to raise their affordable housing stock by a total of two percentage points in three years. If not, the state will make recommendations as to how to help the town get above the mark.

"Rather than sanction arbitrarily, they come back to the legislature with suggestions how to help them move," Bradley said.

Other passed amendments include one that would require a longer "cooling-off" period for a developer denied a building permit. Instead of being able to come back six months after being turned and filing a comprehensive permit, the developer has to wait a year. Also, any housing units deeded as "affordable housing" have to remain so for 40 years, instead of the 10 or 15 now required. Bradley said towns also have the ability to negotiate to have the houses deeded affordable for perpetuity.

The changes must first be approved in the Senate and then by Acting-Governor Jane Swift before becoming law.

Bradley said he received a lot of help and input from Haddad and his district's planning boards.

He also reiterated that the changes aren't meant to gut the "anti-snob zoning laws," but instead make them work better.

"We're not opposed to it, but urban legislators have to understand that Chapter 40B works differently out here, than it does in Quincy and Lowell and Boston," he said. "Some people might call it anti-affordable housing but I don't agree. Any law that's 32 years old and involves developing land should be relooked at.

"We're trying to remove the element of suing Chapter 40B as a threat, and instead making it work as the original bill intended."

Although Cohasset doesn't currently have an comprehensive permits before the zoning board, Avalon Bay Communities has had an informal meeting with town officials to discuss a possible 250-unit apartment complex off Route 3A, at the former Norfolk Conveyor site (across from Atlantic Bagel). A parcel of land on top a granite ledge off Beach Street has also been rumored to be eyed for a large development. Two comprehensive permit projects came before the zoning board in 1989 and 1990, but neither were built.

the number of parking spaces on the property. Town bylaw requires one parking space for every 100 square feet of retail space.

Zoning board chairman Woody Chittick expects Hingham Lumber will argue that its drive-through parking spaces should count toward its stationary space count.

The plan calls for a total of 210 parking spaces on the property; 170 around the retail and showroom building, and 40 inside the drive-in warehouse, as well as eight employee spaces. There will also be room to expand the parking lot of 53 spaces, if needed in the future.

Chittick said he didn't expect the plan to become a big issue with the zoning board.

An impetus for the move is that the current Hingham Lumber site on Summer Street in Hingham is being eyed by the MBTA for the Nantasket Junction station as part of the Greenbush commuter rail restoration project. Although the project hasn't even reached the 30 percent design completion mark, all current plans show for a 400-space parking lot and station on the site.

The MBTA is able to grab the land by eminent domain, but has to pay fair market value for the taking.

Light turnout on first day of new town trash program

A number of rebuffed residents returned a few minutes later after purchasing the bags at the Department of Public Works building around the corner.

"This is ridiculous," said one upset resident.

Guarente, a Cohasset resident, backs the PAYT plan, because of how people abused the old system. He said he once found a guy trying to dump a refrigerator into the trailer instead of paying the $10 fee to get rid of it, and has also found a complete bay window lying in the trailer. He said the town usually has to haul away two or three full trailer trucks full of trash to the incinerator. This Sunday, the blue bags didn't even half-fill the trailer.

Some residents found humor in the new system by trying to fill the blue bags as compact as they can.

"They should have a contest at the next town fair to see who can put the most trash into one of these bags," said one resident, hoisting a heavy bag into the trailer.

Joe Curley of Pond Street, said the PAYT system is an equalizer for those who have been recycling all along.

"It's an incentive to people to start recycling. It really levels the playing field," he said. "I'd take half an hour to separate everything, and someone would be down here just throwing everything away."

The new system will cost Andrew Quigley a few more dollars, thanks to his infant daughter Kate's diapers, but he doesn't mind.

"It will encourage people to recycle," he said. "It's a good thing for the town."

Bags can be purchased in packs of 10 at Cohasset Hardware, Joseph's Hardware, Cohasset Food Mart, Leo Fiori's Exxon station and at the DPW building on Cedar Street.

POLITICAL NOTES

GOP events

GOP Cohasset town chairman Janet Fogarty announced the Cohasset Town Meeting will hold a meeting Tuesday, July 17, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall to make plans for the annual cookout to be held Sunday, Aug. 26, at the seaside home of Ted and Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Rd. Special guest will be Peter Forman of Plymouth.

State Committeewoman Polly Logan will accept reservations for those who want to hear author of "John Adams" David McCullough, Thursday, July 19, on the lawn of the Plymouth Public Library at 8 p.m. Tickets which will benefit the library are $50. For private reception at 6 p.m. in the library garden, $250 a couple or $150 for single, and allow entry also to lecture.

Logan also added that those who wish to hear White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card, who will speak at benefit luncheon Friday, July 27, for the Quincy Historical Society, may call her at 781-383-0031 or president, Joyce Baker at 617-471-5439. The $100 luncheon will be at noon at State Street South's John Adams Building, 1776 Heritage Drive, off the Newport Avenue Extension in North Quincy.

Fogarty encouraged all members and voters to attend the 40th birthday party of Sen. Bob Hedlund (R-Weymouth) to be held Sunday, July 29, at the South Shore Country Club from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. All events are open to the public but reservations are required.

The truth about 1-4-3

By David Wadsworth
HISTORICAL SOCIETY CURATOR

The true story about the origin of the 1 - 4 - 3 signal of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse tells us that the U.S. Lighthouse Service itself originated the distinctive pattern of flashes. During the 1890's that Federal agency decided to assign a distinctive signal to each lighthouse, to aid in identification of its location. The project was abandoned shortly after it was begun, but Minot's was one of the first to be given an identifying signal, and when the project was canceled, it simply retained the random selection pattern it had received. The legend imputing some sentimental reason for the 1 - 4 - 3 pattern is pure fiction, invented and repeated by shore-side sentimentalists ignorant of the real facts of the case. No love-struck keeper invented the signal, just a large government agency in Washington.

Minot's was one of the first to be given an identifying signal.

Maritime Museum is open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum located at Elm St., Cohasset Center, is open for its summer season. Open times are Tuesday through Sunday, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission, and donations are accepted. The museum itself is an old Ship Chandlery, or marine supply building, built in the 1700's by Samuel Bates and originally located at Cohasset Harbor. It is the sole remaining 18th century maritime-related building in near-original condition found in Cohasset today.

The Maritime Museum is devoted to preserving and presenting Cohasset's history as a seafaring community during the latter 1700's and the 1800's. During the "Age of Sail" the town's principal maritime occupations were fishing and shipbuilding and its maritime activity centered around its harbor, then known as "Ship Cove." Peak years for Cohasset's fishing industry were the mid-1800's, when family owned schooner fleets fished for mackerel in Canada's Gulf of St. Lawrence. Cohasset youths often went to sea on the mackerel schooners by the time they were 10 or 11 years of age. Some went on to become crew members of large ocean-going merchant vessels sailing from Boston, and a few became "Deep Sea Captains" commanding clipper ships sailing to all parts of the world. The Maritime Museum preserves and presents that part of Cohasset's own history with ship models, carvings, dioramas, documents and pictures relating to the town's "Age of Sail". Shipwrecks, navigation and lifesaving were an important part of this story and are represented in the museum's exhibits; as is the story of the two Minot's Ledge Lighthouses off our shores.

Additionally the museum holds numerous unique exhibits on general historical subjects relating to Cohasset's early years. Currently the Museum's building is in process of being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. The Historical Society's telephone is 781-383-1434.

WBZ-TV's Wahle in kids' concert

Channel 4 New Anchor, Scott Wahle will be on hand for a mysterious musical adventuring during the "Not for Kids Only" concert at the South Shore Conservatory's Evenings Under the Stars summer performance series. The opening concert is Thursday morning, July 12 at 11a.m. in the Jane Carr Amphitheatre at the conservatory's Hingham campus.

Wahle, a native of Hingham, will take part in this interactive family event, playing the role of "roving reporter," and turning the concert into late-breaking news, broadcast live on large screens hanging above the amphitheatre stage. Interviewing South Shore Conservatory's Summer Wind Ensemble and conductor Malcolm Rowell, Jr., Wahle will uncover the secret behind the unusual activities taking place on the stage.

Audience members see the action close-up on the large screens, taking a peek behind the scenes to get a glimpse at how much fun making music can be, and listening to lively music guaranteed to entertain adults and children alike.

All summer concerts take place in the Jane Carr Amphitheatre. Parking is at the Hingham Bus Depot at 19 Fort Hill St., opposite South Shore Country Club and next to Thomas Auto Body where shuttle buses will be ready to provide transportation to and from the concerts.

"Not for Kids Only" tickets are $5. This novel approach to family concerts is expected to be popular and advance tickets are recommended. To order tickets or for information on other SSC summer concerts, call 781-749-7565, Ext. 14.

Boys lacrosse future looks bright

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

How do you wrap up the season the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team just enjoyed?

First and foremost, you have to mention the fact the Skippers made it to the State finale, better known as the championship game, where they lost to Hingham, 9-3.

There's a little known fact about that game, but what's done is done and that's the way it will remain, little known, at least as far as I'm concerned.

How about the team's overall record of 15-6, which should have been 15-5. Cohasset had to forfeit a game because of an ineligible player that the school discovered long after the fact.

Then of course, there's the fact, Cohasset finished ranked 212th in the country, according to its first year coach Kevin Orcutt.

Then there's Coach Orcutt himself, who turned in one heck of a debut as Cohasset's head lacrosse coach. By the way, coach Orcutt will also be coach of Quincy High boys soccer next year. He was recently named to the post by Quincy Athletic Director Ed Miller, who was once the AD at Marshfield High.

Now, you think there would be enough to talk about with all of the above. But that's not really the case.

There's coach Orcutt's favorite game of the season, the State semi-final clash with Mashpee.

"That was quite a game," said the coach. We won 12-11, but with seven minutes remaining, we were down by six goals, 11-5.

"The kids scored six goals in seven minutes to tie the game, two of the goals in the last 50 seconds, and then won in quadruple overtime. Now that was a game. It truly showed the makeup of the team."

That was this past season. What happens next season, coach?

"We lose most of our defense," said the coach. "And, then there's the biggest loss of all: we lose Ronan Buick to graduation."

A three-year all-Conference midfielder, Buick led the Skippers in scoring this season with 90 points. He did all that despite missing five games.

Buick will be attending Providence College next year, according to the coach.

Then the coach got to the good stuff.

"We will have all our attack men back next year plus a lot of midfielders, and our All-Star goalie, Kyle Webber."

Kyle made 236 saves this past season. The senior had a 70 percent save percentage.

"We will also have a good junior class next year. And, some of our freshmen players got some good experience."

All-in-all, the future looks pretty good for Cohasset boys lacrosse, especially after having completed its best season ever in the school's 10-year lacrosse history.

Even with the loss to graduation of players like hard-nosed captain Geoff McWilliams (#24), the Cohasset High boys lacrosse program appears well on the way to becoming established as one of the elite programs on the South Shore.

Astros enjoy another great season

Girls' softball celebrated its second year as part of Cohasset Little League, and evidence of improvement showed strong through the five-team league.

This year, "windmill" fast-ball pitching was introduced and both pitchers and hitters responded.

The league provided weekly clinics for pitchers. The level of play has improved in all areas, including pitching, hitting and fielding. Also introduced this year was a summer softball league that competes with teams from other towns.

The Astros finished the regular season in second place and battled the first-place Diamondbacks for the championship.

Team leaders Christina Pinkus, Casey Cavanaro and Tessa Leahy provided the core strength during the playoffs as they did throughout the regular season. Their pitching, fielding and hitting led the way.

The team's "Most Improved" players, Colleen Richardson and Sheelah Scott, added pitching support as well as fielding and hitting strength.

Key plays came from Megan Sacks, who won the game ball in the final game of the pre-championship playoff series with the Blue Jays, and provided a spark atop the batting order during the final game of the playoffs.

Kara Wilcox threw out any batter that dared to hit the ball to her at second base and, as a right fielder, she prevented extra bases on overthrows by religiously backing up first base on throws.

Rookie Stefi Belz filled slots as pitcher, second base and right field throughout the season and reached base in every at bat during the three-game championship series.

Rookies Paige Strecker and Charlotte Glick improved significantly during the season and, along with Belz, will return next year as the core group of the Astros.

Post 188 gets back on winning track

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset-Scituate Legion team put together an extremely efficient 5-1 win over District 6 rival Quincy Monday night, making it difficult for anyone who watched to figure out how this team is now just 4-7-1 on the season.

"A bad break here and there, and the inability to get everyone to the field at the same time," offered sixth year head coach Scott Arnold.

The win snapped a four game losing streak for the George H. Mealy Post 118 squad, with those losses coming on consecutive nights last week, two by just one run and another by two.

As was the case in the last win, a 1-0 thriller over Weymouth last Monday, Jason Connelly was the hero for Coh-Scit. The hard-throw-

Cohasset's Weber, Buckley named High Honorable Mentions

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see here as with "Honorable Mention" recognition were seriously considered for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Among the more difficult omissions was Cohasset freshman Gilian Weber, who opened a lot of eyes with her sixth place finish in the state Class D 800-meter race. With three years ahead of her, however, it seems pretty clear that there are a few All-Scholastic teams in her future.

"We're going to hear a lot from Gilian over the next few years," assured Cohasset High coach Al LAFontain. "She's got a lot of natural ability as a runner, and she just kept getting better as the year went on. I'm sure that progress will continue in to next season."

After consulting with area coaches, these are the 10 choices we made for our 2001 All-Scholastic girls track and field team:

Daviann Brown - Junior
400 meter/4 x 400 - Silver Lake

Made it a clean sweep to become the uncontested top 400-meter runner in New England, grabbing first in the event at the South Shore Principal's Meet, Class A's, All-State and New England Championships on successive weekends...Broke her own school record with her time of 56.9 to win the New England Track and Field 400 Championship...Old Colony League All-Star...took third in New England in the indoor 600-meters...joined cross country for the first time this school year to maintain conditioning for the winter and spring track seasons, and wound up the team's solid number two runner...Would like to continue her running career in college, and is likely to be heavily recruited…a high honors student…Silver Lake girls track coach Joe Darche: "Daviann is an extremely hard worker and is extremely focussed. But she's also a terrific kid, and that makes it so easy to root for her."

Erin Catarius - Freshman
100/Long Jump - Marshfield

Went undefeated in the 100 meters in the Atlantic Coast League, posting a league best time of 12.5…Was an ACL All-star…Also scored consistently in the long jump for Marshfield, and placed fifth in the event at the Class B Meet (16' 7 1/4," a personal best), just missing a shot at All-States…Qualified for the Class meet in the 100 meters, but was unable to run…Won both the 100 and long jump at the ACL All-League Meet…Ran the first leg on Marshfield's highly-successful 4x100 meter relay team, which finished fourth at the New England Championships (49.77) after taking fourth at the All-States (50.61) third at the Class B's (51.3)…The relay team was undefeated in league competition…Catarius will be among the young Marshfield team's top returnees. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "Erin works extremely hard to get the best out of what she can do. She's very competitive and has a track person's attitude. She wants to win. She took up the long jump this year and did a great job. We expect big things from her over the next few years."

Allison Donovan - Junior
Two-mile - Hingham

Had a solid outdoor year in the distance events for Hingham…The Patriot League All-star finished fifth in the two-mile at the Class C Meet (11:42.2), just missing a trip to the All-States…Donovan won the South Shore Principal's Meet this year in the two-mile in 11:39.21, breaking the meet record held by Falmouth's Laura Hutchinson…Donovan went undefeated in PL competition this year in the two-mile…Also runs cross country and indoor track…During the indoor season, Donovan qualified for the New England Championships…Also had a consistent year in the mile, as Donovan often doubled up on the distance events meet-to-meet…Donovan runs year-round and is the two-time defending champion at Hingham's annual 4th of July road race…Still a junior, Donovan will be among the team's top returnees next season. Hingham coach Paul Manganello: "She's a tenacious worker. She trains really hard. She doesn't have the natural physique of a distance runner but she makes that up with hard work."

Christine Fay - Sophomore
200/High Jump - Marshfield

Was a solid point-getter in two events for the Lady Rams all season long…The multi-event athlete was an Atlantic Coast League All-star selected to the league's Super Six team…Provided a terrific one-two punch in the 200 meters with teammate Ashley Hubbard, finishing second at the ACL All-League meet (27.1)…She and Hubbard both scored in the 200 at this year's Class B Meet, Fay taking fifth in 26.9, a personal best time…Also finished sixth in the high jump at the Class B's (5 feet)…Ran the third leg of Marshfield's talented 4x100-meter relay team, which finished fourth in New England (49.77)…Fay will be among the top returnees next season. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "Christine spent some more time on the high jump this season and it paid off. She takes things in stride. If she doesn't perform in a meet, she's able to shrug it off and work harder at it. She had a good year."

Melissa Murphy - Sophomore
100 - Rockland

This speedy sophomore was Rockland's top point-getter, consistently scoring in four events…But the 100 meters is where the Patriot League All-star made her presence most known, finishing second at the Class D Meet in 12.68, just one one-hundreth of a second off the top spot. Also qualified for the Class D's in the long jump, triple jump, and 200 meters…Murphy went undefeated in the PL in the 100 and 200 meters and is the two-time defending PL champion in the 100 meters and went undefeated in league competition in the event…Also scored consistently in the long and triple jumps for Rockland. She also works with a speed coach twice a week…Murphy is making her second appearance on a Mariner All-Scholastic team as she was selected to the girls basketball squad last winter…The speedy guard was the leading scorer on the team and was a member of the Div. 3 State Championship squad…Murphy will be among the top returnees next year. Rockland coach Peter Woodward: "She's a very good athlete. She's a very fierce competitor. When she steps on the track, she wants to win. She's a great corner runner and I think she could be a great 200 or 400 runner. The more she wins, the more she wants to."

Kayla Halloran - Junior
Mile - Norwell

Capped off a phenomenal junior campaign of running for Norwell with a first place finish in the mile at the State Class D championships with a time of 5:11.4…Also a standout in cross country and on the indoor track team…Won the South Shore 800 meter title with her record time of 2:22…Is the little sister of 2-mile specialist Lydia Halloran, a 2001 Norwell High graduate and a fellow member of the South Shore League spring track All-Star team… Kayla is spending the summer on the cape with her family. She's planning to run in her third Falmouth Road Race next month and hopes to improve on last year's time of 51:43, which placed her near the top 10 percent in the field of 9,000-plus runners… Norwell girls track coach Chuck Martin: "Lydia just keeps getting better and better. She's a natural distance runner, but hard work has helped set her apart."

Aquila Judge - Junior
Long Jump/100 hurdles - Scituate

Arguably, the state's most dominant two-event athlete…After notching first place victories in both the long jump and 100-meter hurdles at the State Class D Championship, Judge won her first ever state title in the 100 hurdles and took second in the long jump…She followed that up with a pair of second place finishes at the New England championships: running a 15.23 in the hurdles and recording a long jump of 17-11.25…Also finished second at the state heptathlon championship… recorded personal bests of 18' 2 1/4' in the long jump and 14.8 seconds, in the 100 meter hurdles… Voted the Outstanding Athlete at the State Coaches Invitational, the South Shore Invitational and the Weston Invitational, all of which she won the long jump and 100 meter hurdles… 5:19.7 Had a best of 2:24.8 in the 800 meters…missed most of the winter season after emergency gall bladder surgery…Also named a Globe, Herald and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic in track…Would like to be a physical therapist and attend a school in the Boston area, such as Northeastern or B.U....Of course, it's anticipated she'll receive quite a few attractive scholarship offers, so stay tuned.

Jane Thies - Senior
Triple Jump/High Jump - Scituate

Another Scituate High two event standout…The senior capped off her phenomenal career, which included Patriot League All-Star selections in each of her eight seasons (winter and spring track), in grand fashion, winning the Class D Triple Jump championship (35"3-3/4"), followed by a fourth place finish at the All-State championship (36' 2-1/4"), and eighth place at the New England's…also took sixth at the Class D meet in the high jump, barely missing qualification in two events for the All-State's…won the Triple Jump at the South Shore Principal's Meet and took second in the long jump… Jane has also been a regular point-getter in the 100-meter hurdles (a 16.2 best), the long jump (16'2"), 300-meter hurdles (51.8) and high jump (5'2")… Jane will attend Mary Washington College in Virginia this fall, where she will study geology and dance, and hopes to continue running track.

Emily Tansey - Junior
Mile/800-meters - Scituate

The talented and versatile year-round runner notched her eighth Patriot League All-Star selection in nine seasons with a spectacular outdoor campaign this spring that saw her take third place in the State Class D state championships with a season best time of 5:19… Patriot League Champion in the 800, going undefeated this season in dual meet action…runs cross country and indoor track for Scituate High…Her personal best in the mile is actually 5:17, a mark she says she is determined to surpass next season…Also finished third in the mile at the Weston Twilight Invitational…Was a member of both the 4x800 relay and distance medley teams that finished second and fourth, respectively, at the Class D Championships…Also ran the 400, 800 (personal best of 2:13), 1,000 (P.B. of 3:05), and 2-mile for the Lady Sailors… an Honor Roll student and member of the National Honor Society and French Honor Society…would like to continue running in college, preferably, she says, at a smaller New England school… Scituate girls track coach Bill Smith calls Emily "the hardest worker" on his team.

Janet Veracka - Senior
Javelin/discus - Silver Lake

This four year varsity standout helped the Silver girls track team to an unprecedented five straight first place finishes in the javelin at the annual post-season State Relays…Veracka took sixth place in javelin at the state Class A Track and Field Championships with a high throw of 101-5, narrowly missing out on a trip to the All-State Championships…personal best in the javelin was 114 feet…took seven of nine first places in league meets in javelin this season…also distinguished herself in the discus, taking several first places this season and placing in all nine league meets…best mark in the discus this season, 91-feet-11-inches, easily qualified her for State's…Old Colony League All-Star…also a four year member of SL's field hockey team…was a two year member of the gymnastics team and one year member of the indoor track team in the winter…took her first high school sports season of this winter after undergoing surgery to repair a cracked knee cap suffered in field hockey…will attend Nichols College in Dudley, Mass. this fall, and is presently leaning towards majoring in education and playing field hockey for the school…Unfortunately, Nichols has no interscholastic track programs…Has played summer league field hockey for years and is presently preparing to play in her second consecutive Bay State Games….Silver Lake girls track coach Joe Darche: "Janet is a true craftsperson when it comes to throwing. She takes it very seriously. She's turned herself into a great thrower with hard work and attention to detail."

4x100-meter relay team -
Marshfield

Erin Catarius, Kristen Lake, Christine Fay, Ashley Hubbard

Two freshmen and two sophomores make up this talented quartet, which sped its way to a fourth-place finish at the New England Championships…Erin Catarius, Kristen Lake, Christine Fay and Ashley Hubbard's time of 49.77 marked the first time they had broken 50 seconds and broke a 25-year-old school record in the event…Before getting to the New Englands, the girls took third at the Class B Meet (51.3)—running with senior co-captain Brittany Heitzman in place of Lake—and took fourth at the All-State Meet (50.61)…All four sprinters will be back next year. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "They were just tickled about how far they got. I think they caught a few teams by surprise this year. I think the girls see that now that they're on top, they've got to work harder to stay there."

4x400-meter relay team -
Silver Lake

Megan Dart, Morgan Blanchard Michelle Woodford and Daviann Brown

This talented group seemed to get better every week as the pressure mounted, taking second at the State Class A championship (4:05.5), third at All-State's (4:03.08) and finally a fifth place at the New England Track and Field Championships with a new school record time of 4:02.74. This group shaved an incredible 11 seconds in all off of their previous best mark over these final three weeks of the season….Silver Lake girls track coach Joe Darche: "I can't say enough about the work of these four girls. Each step of the way they each took it up a notch. They're all competitors in the truest sense of the word."

Baird awarded M.A.S.F. scholarship

Cohasset High senior-to-be Tim Baird has been named a recipient of a 2001 Future Leaders Scholarship.

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation (M.A.S.F.), the organizing arm of the Bay State Games, along with Verizon, awarded six $2,000 Future Leaders Scholarships in all. The other five recipients are David Bartels (Williamstown/Mt. Greylock Regional H.S.), Elaine Fisher (Winchendon/Gardner H.S.), Dan Lentz (Andover/Andover H.S.), Rachel Ross (Nantucket, Nantucket H.S.) and Nicole Zarba (Beverly, Beverly H.S.)

The scholarships were presented by Dr. Arthur Pappas, the team doctor and part owner of the Boston Red Sox, and honorary chairman of the M.A.S.F., and Bob Mudge, president of Verizon-Massachusetts at Bay State Games Night at Fenway Park.

In its 13 years of existence, this scholarship program has awarded more than $160,000 to soon-to-be senior scholar-athletes who have demonstrated excellent leadership qualities through their dedication to academics, athletics and community service.

A two-sport athlete (soccer and track), Baird has participated in numerous community service and leadership programs and has traveled to Costa Rica, Belize and Guatemala to study tropical wildlife and ecology.

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation is a non-profit organization that works year-round to promote fitness, education, teamwork, personal development and sportsmanship for athletes of all ages. The 2001 Summer Games will kick off July 12. For more information or to register, log on to baystategames.org. For many the Bay State Games are a highlight of a young athlete's career and for a few the games are just one stop along their path of athletic success.

ing righty went the distance, scattering three singles for the game while striking out four and walking none.

Connelly, a senior to be at Scituate High, had great movement with his two and four seam fastballs all night, leading to a number of ground balls on the evening. In fact, two of the three hits off him came on well placed choppers. Combine that command with his penchant for working quick and coming right at hitters, and it's easy to see why his infielders love playing behind him.

"There's not a lot of standing around when Jason's on the mound," said Arnold after the hour and twenty minute seven inning game. "He makes batters swing at his pitches, and that movement gets them to just miss hitting it square."

It was also Connelly who knocked in the game's first run. After second baseman Alex Knight led off the bottom of the third with a double to the gap in right-center for the game's first hit, and moved to third on a passed ball, Connelly bounced a ball to deep second that allowed Knight to race home. Jesse Cole followed that up with a one bouncer off the centerfield fence that brought home Greg Levin, who had walked between Knight and Connelly, to make it 2-0.

Post 118 would go on to score one run apiece in each the fourth, fifth and six innings. RBI blows were delivered by Knight (2-for-3), cleanup hitter Greg Smith and Mike Carrison.

With the win, Coh-Scit moved into a tie with Canton for sixth place among the 10 teams in District 6 with eight games remaining. The fifth place team is Quincy at 5-7, just one point ahead of Post 118.

"If we play the rest of the way like we did tonight, I really like our chances of making the playoffs," said Arnold. "In fact, if we keep playing like this, I like our chances against just about anyone in our league."

Of course, if last place Randolph (0-10-1), which has forfeited several games this season, is declared ineligible for league play the rest of the year, an option which has reportedly been entertained, there is the possibility that one of the District 6 playoff spots would be withdrawn. That would change prospects dramatically for Coh-Scit, with Milton (7-4-1) holding a comfortable cushion in fourth place at the moment.

"That's not a situation we can control," said Arnold. "All's we can do is go out and play the best we can, and (Monday night) was a pretty good indication of what we can do when we've got everyone here and playing to their potential."

Post 118 gets back into action after the holiday with three games in three nights on the road, beginning with a trip to Canton on Friday. After that, the boys are in Randolph on Saturday and in Brockton against Morissette on Sunday.

Mary A. (Ready) Pennie, 45, of Hanson, executive director of Sunrise Assisted Living, Cohasset, died June 18, 2001, at Brockton Hospital after a short illness.

Mrs. Pennie was a member of the Cohasset Rotary Club and South Shore Chamber of Commerce. She made many contributions to the elderly and local community. She enjoyed watching her son play basketball and her daughter perform on stage.

Born in South Carolina, Mrs. Pennie was raised and educated in Hanson and graduated from Whitman-Hanson Regional High School. She received a bachelor's degree in sociology from Bridgewater State College.

She leaves a son, Matthew S. Pennie of Hanson; a daughter, Kelly C. Pennie of Hanson; her father, Roger Ready of Murells Inlet, S.C., four sisters, Christine Ives of Colorado, Julie Mulvey of Halifax and Martha Murphy and Kathleen Dayan, both of Plymouth; her former husband, Stephen A. Pennie of Hanson; a close friend, Joseph McFarland of Holbrook; and many nephews and nieces. She was daughter of the late Carolyn M. (Moore) Ready.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Joseph the Worker Church in Hanson. Interment was in Fern Hill Cemetery, Hanson.

Arrangements were by the Sullivan Funeral Home, Hanson.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Pennie Children's Educational Fund, c/o Rockland Trust Co., Liberty Street, Hanson, 02341.

William Higgins

Navy veteran of three wars

William Paul "Bill" Higgins, 75, of Hull, a veteran of three wars who served in the Navy for 29 years, died Thursday, June 14, at home. Mr. Higgins served during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. During World War II, he participated in the D-Day invasion at Normandy. After retiring from the Navy in 1969, he worked as a welder at the Quincy shipyard and as a maintenance worker for the Weymouth School Department. Born and raised in Weymouth, he was a longtime resident of the town. He coached Weymouth Little League for many years. He was a volunteer at South Shore Hospital for more than 15 years and was a member of the Weymouth Elks and the East Weymouth VFW.

He is leaves his wife, Joan (Amirault) Higgins; a son, Patrick J. Higgins of Franklin and his wife Terri; two daughters, Joan M. Conte and her husband John C. Conte and Mary E. Higgins of Cohasset. He also leaves 10 grandchildren, Caitlin, Michael, William and Kerin Kearney, Jenna and Jack Conte, all of Cohasset; Maura Fitzgerald of Cohasset; and Brian, Patrick and Michele Higgins of Franklin.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at Immaculate Conception Church, East Weymouth. Burial was in St. Francis Xavier Cemetery, Weymouth. Donations may be made to South Shore Hospital, 55 Fogg Road, South Weymouth 02190, or Hospice of the South Shore VNA, P.O. Box 9060, Braintree 02184.

Eleanor J. Dacey

Eleanor J. (Granahan) Dacey, 92, of Duxbury, an accomplished musician, formerly of Quincy and Cohasset, died June 20, 2001, at the Newfield House in Plymouth after a brief illness.

Mrs. Dacey was born in Boston, daughter of the late Daniel J. and Mary A. (Drinkwater) Granahan. She was raised and educated in Quincy. A Duxbury resident for 20 years, she formerly lived in Cohasset for 30 years.

She was self-employed as a musician and teacher for 70 years, retiring several years ago.

She was very active later in life with the St. John the Evangelist Church Choir and was a benefactor of the South Shore YMCA for more than 40 years.

She was wife of the late Daniel J. Dacey and mother of the late Elizabeth Dacey.

A funeral service was held at St. John the Evangelist Church in Duxbury. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Norwell and Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy, 02169.

Waves of inspiration

Local painter displaying work at Marshfield library gallery

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

I love painting outdoors around here. You can find all the right elements like marshes, boats, the sea, and bright light. It's easy to go out and find places to paint around the South Shore."
Artist Richard O'Brien

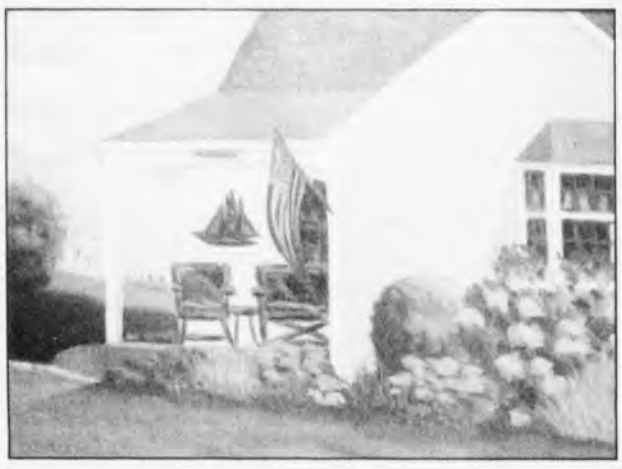
While he's only been at it for a decade artist Richard O'Brien has managed to become very skilled in the medium of oil painting. He'll tell you living on the South Shore provides plenty of inspiration for his work which is currently on display in an exhibit titled "Mostly Humarock" through July 27 at the Ventress Library in Marshfield.

The exhibit is being presented by the North River Arts Society, of which O'Brien is a member.

O'Brien said he loves doing all kinds of paintings, from landscapes, to seascapes, to paintings of old cottages, houses, and even boats.

"The show features some of everything," O'Brien said. "I tried to pick a good variety of paintings. So far, the turnout has been very good, and I've even gotten some good feedback on the show."

O'Brien said the exhibit includes 23 oil paintings, 75 percent of which highlight areas like the North and South rivers, Scituate Harbor, Humarock, and other scenic South Shore locations. O'Brien loves to use local influences in his works.



"I love painting outdoors around here," he said, noting he spends all of his summers in Humarock. His full-time residence is in Chestnut Hill. "You can find all the right elements like marshes, boats, the sea, and bright light. It's easy to go out and find places to paint around the South Shore."

But sometimes, O'Brien likes going beyond the South Shore to other coastal towns. It is a common occasion that he visits places like Gloucester, Rockport, Block Island, and Cape Cod. He said he has taken a couple of painting workshops in Gloucester.

"I've had some good teachers over the years," he said. "But one of my main influences is nature, and that's why I love painting outdoors. You can just put your easel out in public, and you do what you want."

O'Brien said he never really had any plans to become a painter, but when he retired at age 55 a decade ago, he began taking some painting courses at the Massachusetts College of Art. O'Brien fell in love with art almost immediately, and he hasn't stopped since then.

"To this day, I continue taking workshops because I can just keep adding onto the things I've already learned," O'Brien said. "I think I've made a lot of progress since I started. The bottom line is that it's a fun thing to do."

On top of taking workshops and practicing his work, O'Brien is a member of local art organizations like the North River Arts Society and the South Shore Art Center.

Over the years, O'Brien has participated in a variety of shows including exhibits at the Newton City Library and a show in Connecticut. But for the time being, he is enjoying the one going on at the Ventress Library.

"I hope people will come away from the show with some good feelings," O'Brien said. "Everyone has a certain style that they can relate to, so I hope everyone will be able to see a painting they like."

For more information on O'Brien's show, call the North River Arts Society (781) 837-8091. Most of the paintings on display at the exhibit are for sale.

A rootin' shootin' good show

Showstoppers' 'Annie Get Your Gun' opens July 12

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

The staff and actors at Showstoppers summer youth theater program always aims to put on great shows, and this time, they have really hit their target with a production of "Annie Get Your Gun."

But the company is putting on the most recent production for another reason as well—to benefit a scholarship created in the memory of the late Johanna Butler, a member of Showstoppers who died in 1997. The scholarship is given out every summer to a Showstoppers graduating senior.

On July 12, 13, and 14, the theater company will present the classic show, a musical play based on the life of sharp-shooter and gunslinger extraordinaire, Annie Oakley. The show will be held during three nights at the 360 Pleasant Street Campus of Weymouth High School. All performances begin at 7:30 p.m.

"The show is based on a true story," said Doug Trudeau, co-director of the play and also the director of Showstoppers. "(Annie) Oakley was a woman who lived back in the late 1800s who could shoot. The interesting thing is, most women in those days did not even know how to use guns."

Trudeau said there are 85 cast members in the production, the youngest person is six, and the oldest is 21. He said the play is a fun-filled with some of the most wonderful music ever composed by Irving Berlin. Some of the more popular songs include "There's No Business Like Show Business, They Say That Falling in Love is Wonderful, Anything You Can Do, and The Girl That I Marry."

"The show is a classic," Trudeau added. "Berlin has given us some of the greatest music in the history of American musical theater. You could compare him to someone like Andrew Lloyd Weber. It's just a lot of fun, and there are definitely plenty of songs that will be familiar to the audience."

Trudeau said on the night of the closing performance of "Annie Get Your Gun," the scholarship will be given out. Trudeau said his theater group traditionally presents an $8,000 scholarship each summer.

"People should come to the show not only because it supports a good cause, but because it's extremely entertaining," he said. "And the other great aspect of going is that you'll be able to see our young people doing something beneficial for our community."

But getting ready for the show took a lot of hard work from the many cast members, Trudeau, co-director Joe Doniger, musical director Vickie Schlosser, and choreographer Michelle Hayes. Rehearsals for the production began right after Memorial Day, and typically, rehearsals were held every week from Sunday through Thursday.

"The cast is just great," Doniger said. "It was a learning experience for everyone."

Trudeau said the cast members all seemed to learn very fast, and that could've been because the show's story line is so engrossing.

"The show is a classic."
Doug Trudeau of Showstoppers

The story centers around Oakley falling in love with a man named Frank Butler, who was supposedly one of the fiercest gunslingers in the world during that time. Butler is a man who travels around with a wild west show with the legendary Buffalo Bill, showing off his skills.

"Because (Oakley) is so good with a pistol, competition eventually arises between her and Buckley," Trudeau said. "(Oakley) turns out to be better at shooting than Buckley, and he gets extremely jealous."

Hayes said aside from picking up the plot very quickly, the cast members also learned a lot of the choreography in a speedy fashion as well.

"A lot of the choreography in the show is fairly complex, but they learned fast," she said. "I think they surprised themselves."

Schlosser said no matter what, people will love the music in the show.

"These are all songs that will stand the test of time," she said. "Some of the lyrics are hilarious. I think the cast did a great job of learning the songs, because sometimes the music can be a bit of a challenge. But everyone sounds fantastic."

Trudeau said when all the elements are mixed together, the result is a great family show.

"It's always great to see a given child's talent blossom and develop," he said. "And it's exciting to see all of it work."

Pork chili

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Chili has become the stuff of regional flag-waving. "Real" chili means one thing to Texans and something completely different to a denizen of Chicago. But most everyone agrees that chili should contain neither tomatoes nor beans. Having tried more than my share of these manly concoctions, I have to admit a retrograde weakness for chili recipes with both of these unfashionable ingredients. And, just to be even more persnickety, I prefer to use chili powder for most of my heat since I prefer that my chili not bring tears to my eyes.

So I started with a basic pork chili recipe and did a taste test of chili powders, including McCormick (in both plastic and glass bottles), Morton & Bassett, Frontier, and Penzeys Medium (a mail-order chili). Penzeys was the clear winner, with its deep, authentic chili flavor. Frontier, which is usually found in natural food stores, took second place, and McCormick in the glass bottle wasn't half bad. (The stuff in the plastic bottle wasn't nearly as good.) I also discovered that pork can't handle the same amount of chili powder as beef, so I used only a bit more than 2 tablespoons. I also decided to add 1/2 teaspoon each dried oregano, ground cumin, and a couple of bay leaves.

Next, I moved on to the meat. I tested pork loin, boneless spareribs, and pork butt (cut from the shoulder of the pig) and found the pork butt to be the juiciest and most flavorful. Boneless spareribs were a close second, while the loin was the driest, stringiest, and least flavorful of the lot. I cut the pork into 1-inch pieces, seasoned them with salt and pepper, and browned them for most flavorful results.

As for other ingredients, bacon was overwhelming in a pork chili, lime juice (a common ingredient in "authentic" chili recipes) was a non-starter, 1 cup of canned crushed tomatoes was a winner, a modest one-half fresh jalapeño added plenty of heat for this family dish (which I also wanted to be kid-friendly). A nice alternative is the chipotle (a dried, smoked jalapeño), which adds a hint of smoky flavor as well as heat. I like my chili with beans, so 1 cup of red kidney beans was a must. I also found that the starch in the beans helped to thicken the chili, making it unnecessary to add a thickening agent. The beans also cooked in the same amount of time as the meat, which worked out nicely. For liquid, water was just fine. Chicken stock proved to be a waste of money, since I wanted the clean, bold flavors of the pork and chili to shine through.

PORK CHILI WITH BEANS AND JALAPEÑO

For those of you who prefer your pork in smaller pieces, simply take a potato masher to the pot after cooking, which will get the job done in seconds. If you like your chili hot, use up to 2 jalapeños or chipotles.

3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 1/2 pounds pork butt or boneless spareribs, trimmed and cut into 1-inch cubes
Salt and pepper for seasoning the meat
1 medium onion cut into 1/2-inch pieces
3 medium garlic cloves, finely chopped or pressed
1/2 jalapeño pepper, seeded and finely chopped, or like amount of chipotle for a smoky flavor
1 cup red kidney beans, rinsed and picked over
1 cup canned crushed tomatoes
4 cups water
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon chili powder, Penzeys, Frontier, or McCormick (glass bottle) preferred
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
2 bay leaves
1 teaspoon salt

1. Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil a large heavy-duty Dutch oven over medium-high heat. Season the meat with salt and pepper and add one-third of the chunks to the pot. Brown well on all sides, about 5 minutes. Set aside. Repeat with the remaining oil and meat in two more batches. Reduce the heat to medium and add the onion. Cook, stirring frequently, until softened, about 5 minutes. Add the garlic and jalapeño and cook 1 minute more.

2. Add the browned meat and all of the remaining ingredients to the pot and stir to combine. Bring to a boil and reduce heat to maintain a simmer. Cook for about 2 1/2 to 3 hours, or until the meat and beans are very tender. Adjust seasonings with salt and pepper. (If desired, you may use a potato masher to break apart the chunks of meat before serving.) Serve with white rice and garnish with any of the following: sour cream, shredded cheddar or Jack cheese, chopped cilantro, or scallions.

Carefree Hostas provide beauty spring through fall

Green thumbs up

Part two
By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

As the summer growing season gets underway, our perennial borders continue to offer a colorful new palette, week by week. Despite the challenges of designing a perennial garden to give the impression of continuous bloom throughout the season, the diversity which perennials provide in flower and foliage form, color, and texture, are well worth the constant adjustments we must make to compensate for their limited bloom period.

Along my front walk, a very pleasing combination of pink, blue, and yellow blooms greets my visitors. A clump of a cheery, re-blooming, lemon-yellow daylily, "Happy Returns", is bordered by the long-lasting, deep blue spires of a dwarf Veronica, "Goodness Grows" Behind, a tall, hardy, low-maintenance shrub rose, "Bonica", is smothered in clusters of small, baby-pink blossoms, a perfect backdrop for the deep, pink-colored blooms of an Asiatic lily and the lacy leaves and foliage of the particularly lovely, deep, rose-pink Spirea bumalda. Nearby, the sunny yellow blossoms of evening primroses (Oenethera) sparkle in the afternoon sunlight against a backdrop of lavender-blue catmint (Nepeta sibirica). After a brief lull, the garden is beginning to burst forth with color once again and by mid-July, the entire landscape will explode with rainbow radiance as hundreds of daylilies and their companions come into bloom.

The shady border is particularly lovely during the latter half of June. The charming, feathery blooms of the astilbes with their equally attractive, divided foliage, are an elegant contrast to the handsome, bold leaves of hosta, as yet unscathed by ravenous slugs and snails. Frilly ferns, the delicate blue-green foliage of corydalis lutea covered with tiny, dazzling yellow clusters of blossoms all summer, and the magnificent bronze leaves of Heuchera "Chocolate Ruffles", "Palace Purple", and "Plum Pudding" provide additional textural contrast and season-long color. The strategic planting of a few sensational coleus and the shady border will dazzle throughout the summer season.

Hosta are truly the star performers in the shady garden from spring through fall. Hybridization efforts in recent years have produced a staggering number of new cultivars offering an even greater diversity in color, form and texture. Delightful miniatures are perfect for the front of the border, in rock gardens or ideal for the smaller garden. Hosta venusta, "Allen P. McConnell", "Lemon Lime", "Blue Moon" and a newer, still somewhat costly, variegated gem, "Pandora's Box," are just a few choice cultivars in this category.

At one time, I avoided gold-foliaged plants because I thought they looked as though they were in need of nutrition, but in recent years I have come to appreciate and welcome their contrast throughout the landscape, especially to brighten up the dark corners of the shady border. Just a few of the gold-tinted varieties I enjoy are "Sun Power," "Golden Prayers," "Daybreak," "Gold Standard," "Amber Tiara," "Montana Aureomarginata" and "Piedmont Gold." These are especially attractive next to blue-leafed cultivars such as "Hadspen Blue," "Halcyon", "Dorset Blue" "Krossa Regal," "Regal Splendor" and my personal favorite, the slow-growing, leathery, "Tokudama Aureonebulosa."

For those who enjoy the dramatic, few perennials compare to the giant hostas. The large leaves of "Sum and Substance," "Sum it Up," "Blue Angel," H. sieboldiana "Elegans," and "Samurai" make a sensational display but require substantial space, once established, to look their best.

Hostas thrive in shady locations but many are somewhat sun-tolerant. Those having variegated, gold or solid green foliage will survive, and often thrive in sun but browning of the leaves is usually a indication of sun scorch or moisture deprivation.

Gold-tinted varieties reflect light and heat well and attain their best color in strong light, but in full sun, they may bleach out. Blue-leafed cultivars are best planted in cool, shady spots. Strong light or direct sun will damage the powdery substance found on the leaf surface, known as indumentum, which contains the bluish tint and the leaves will quickly attain a solid green appearance. Most of the variegated varieties are adaptable to any exposure. Given less light, hosta plants tend to have fewer but larger leaves. Although all types are drought resistant, they thrive in moisture-retentive soils.

A rather unique habit of the hosta plant is to spontaneously produce an offshoot quite different from itself, a process which may occur in a mature, established clump. These "sports," as they are called, grow directly from the base of an existing plant and if they are separated and remain stable, often become new varieties. Examples of sports which have become attractive new varieties include "Great Expectations" (from Sieboldiana), "Patriot" (a sport of "Francee", "Regal Splendor" (from "Krossa Regal") and "June" (Halcyon sport). When an all green shoot appears among variegated foliage, it should be removed as soon as possible as it has the ability to produce more chlorophyll which tends to make it stronger and more vigorous and capable of eventually crowding out its variegated parent.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JULY 5

Yesterday's advice applies to today. Wake up in a good mood. The full moon/lunar eclipse culminates at 11:04 a.m., 14-degrees Capricorn/Cancer. At this time the moon becomes inactive. Don't rock the boat in business or romance. Stay alert and use common sense. If you are working, you can be most productive. Finish projects already begun rather than starting new ones. The planet Venus moves into Gemini at 12:44 p.m., remaining there until August 1 and prompting you to explore new horizons and develop new alliances.

FRIDAY, JULY 6

A harmonious alignment of Mercury and Uranus saves the day. Its influence may bring new inspiration, ideas, solutions. The focus is on communications, new techniques, technologies. This is a great time to take on new studies or to troubleshoot and brainstorm. The Capricorn moon continues inactive travel until 7:33 p.m., when the moon enters Aquarius. A lunar alignment to Venus makes this evening prime for social activities, romantic rendezvous. Take a walk on the wild side.

SATURDAY, JULY 7

An Aquarius moon sets the stage for an exciting weekend. Take a vacation from routine and responsibilities; relax, unwind, enjoy life. The Aquarius moon forms easy contacts to Neptune, Saturn, Pluto and Mars. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can get them out of the way in short time. Gather with friends and let the good times roll this evening.

SUNDAY, JULY 8

This is a wonderful day for letting off steam, partying, recharging your batteries. The Aquarius moon prompts you to be more spontaneous, adventurous. Avoid making rigid plans or commitments. Follow your intuition. At 8:22 p.m. the moon aligns with Uranus, the planetary ruler of Aquarius, amplifying the freedom-loving, 'do your thing' theme.

MONDAY, JULY 9

The Aquarius moon becomes inactive at 6:28 a.m. until 8:05 a.m., when a laidback Pisces moon arrives. The next three days are prime for vacationing. Take extra quiet time out for yourself. Renew your spirit through time spent in solitude, meditation, art or nature.

TUESDAY, JULY 10

Storm clouds move in today. The Pisces moon forms challenging 90-degree alignments to Saturn and Pluto in the morning, Mars in the afternoon. Others may be moody, hypersensitive. Don't overpersonalize. The best way to channel today's influences is to express yourself creatively. Photography, music, art, poetry get the green light.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11

Take advantage of relatively quiet astrological influences today. Meditate, play music; take some soul time. The moon continues to travel in Pisces, and Venus prepares to form a harmonious contact to Neptune, the planetary ruler of Pisces. Do something that brings beauty into your life or the life of another. Pay attention to your intuition. At 8:09 p.m. the Pisces moon becomes inactive until 8:36 p.m., when an Aries moon takes over.

THURSDAY, JULY 12

Planetary action runs fast and furious, making this an exciting, 'anything can happen' kind of day. The moon travels in energetic Aries forming harmonious contacts to Venus, Neptune, Saturn and Pluto. Venus and Neptune align at 4:49 p.m. Mercury and Jupiter conjoin at the last degree of Gemini at 6:29 p.m. Mercury moves into the sign Cancer at 6:47 p.m., remaining there until July 30. Jupiter moves into Cancer at 8:03 p.m. Jupiter travels in the sign Cancer until August 1, 2002 bringing new opportunities to Cancerians.

FRIDAY, JULY 13

The moon travels in pioneering Aries. However, Mars, the planetary ruler continues retrograde travel until the July 19. It is best to sleep on new ideas and postpone taking action for another week. The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 2:45 p.m. This month's new moon will culminate on July 20, bringing an ideal time for new starts across the board. At 7:52 p.m. the moon aligns with Uranus and becomes inactive. Forget your troubles and go for the good times this evening.

SATURDAY, JULY 14

The moon enters Taurus at 7:15 a.m., traveling there throughout the weekend. Generally, a Taurus moon brings an easier, relaxing period. However, Venus, the planetary ruler of Taurus, forms stressful contacts to Saturn and Pluto in the next couple of days. You may be forced to face the reality about a romantic or financial situation and make tough decisions. Give some thought to consolidating what you have rather than spending what you don't. Sidestep doubts, worries, fears.

SUNDAY, JULY 15

Yesterday's advice pertains to today as well. The moon continues its travel in Taurus. Venus and Saturn conjoin at 3:32 a.m. Venus prepares to oppose Pluto early Tuesday morning. If you've been experiencing problems with another, now is the time to work out a compromise, forgive and forget. Avoid power trips or game-playing to gain control of the situation. Let go and leave the past behind.

IT'S HAPPENING

Carillonneur at Cohasset tower

The second program in the 76th annual series of summer carillon recitals at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset is Sunday evening, July 8. Judson Maynard, retired carillonneur of Texas Tech University will perform. Maynard's program will include music composed for carillon by Jef Denyn, Gerard Boedijn and Mary Jeanne van Appledorn. There will also be transcriptions from the works of Rachmaninoff, Bach and Johann Strauss, and guitar arrangements by Augustin Barrios Mangore. His diverse repertoire will include a medley of Beatles' songs as well.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. Listeners are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnics. In case of rain, the carillon may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs and descriptive brochures will be available in a stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and handed out on the Common and other locations.

Following the recital, a tour of the tower and demonstration of the carillon will be offered to those interested in climbing the 45 steps to the instrument.

For information call Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur at 781-383-9599, or the church office, 781-383-1083.

Visiting artists

The South Shore Art Center is becoming a summer destination for artists, art students and cultural enthusiasts. The center's summer initiative, Visiting Artist Workshops 2001 includes master classes in the visual arts. Eleven master art instructors are offering an innovative array of workshop topics including photo etching on metal, landscape painting in oils, color woodcut printing, pastel painting, watercolor landscape, encaustic painting, book arts, photography, and impressionist still life painting.

The instructors include: Karen Christians, Jared Clackner, Stuart Baron, Annie Silverman, John Brooks Maginnis, Heidi Whitman, Tracy Spadafora, William Ternes, Peter Madden, Frank Gohlke, and Margaret McWethy. They are all practicing artists as well as instructors at some of the most highly regarded art schools in the area including Boston University, Harvard, the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, the Massachusetts College of Art, the DeCordova Museum, and the Worcester Art Museum.

All participating instructors' work will be on exhibition in the Bancroft Gallery. Summer Encounters: Visiting Artists Exhibition will open Friday, Aug. 10 from 6-8 p.m. The reception is free to all and will provide the public an opportunity to meet the instructors and view some of their work.

The exhibition will be on display until Sept. 9. For more information or to register for any of the visiting artist workshops call 781/383-ARTS or visit www.ssac.org.

Summer concerts

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first concert on Cohasset Common for the 2001 season is scheduled for Tuesday evening July 10, at 7:30 p.m., on the Cohasset Common.

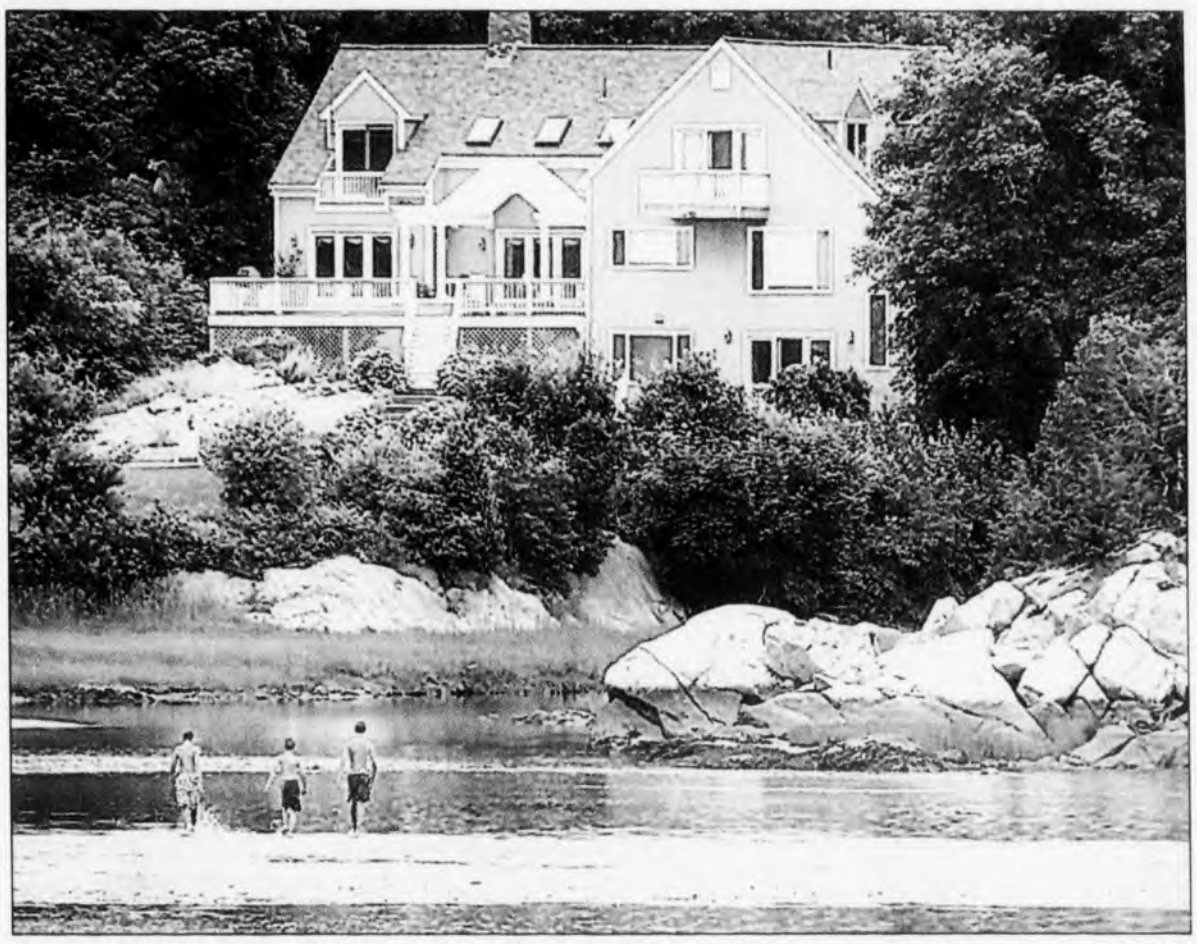
Selectmen back Town Manager

No disciplinary action taken against Haddad

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Selectmen voiced their support of embattled Town Manager Mark Haddad Tuesday — and one went so far as to characterize him as the victim of a "smear campaign" at the hands of Planning Board member Peter Pratt.



Pratt – who filed a written complaint following an argument with Haddad at town hall over a meeting that Pratt wasn't notified about – was irate that selectmen will not hold a disciplinary hearing over the altercation.

"It is an unbelievable abrogation of their responsibility to discipline an employee," he said after Tuesday's meeting.

The selectmen's comments came after hearing a report from independent investigator David Haley, who was hired by the town to look into cross-complaints by Haddad and Pratt and his wife, Donna, who claims Haddad was abusive to her during a telephone conversation last fall over the status of a school crossing guard. However, selectmen did

"You may want to remind all of the parties ... that if you can't say something nice about someone, then it is best to say nothing at all."

Anti-train group readies to launch another lawsuit

AfTA also after money, members

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An anti-train group has taken another arrow out of its quill and pointed it directly at Greenbush.

Advocates for Transportation Alternatives, dubbed AfTA, is poised to file a notice of intent with the state Secretary of Environmental Affairs of its plans to sue the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority over "inadequacies and deficiencies" in the final environmental feasibility study on restoration of the railroad line.

The 60-day public comment period for the study, which is called the Final Environmental Impact Report, is now underway. And although plans to restore the controversial 17-mile-long Greenbush line – the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project – have been on the books for some 14 years or more, AfTA says the window for derailing the project is wide open.

"In my point of view, it's just the beginning of the process," says John Bewick, president of AfTA, which is based in Hingham. "Someone has to act before you can enjoin it."

Bewick, a former state Secretary of Environmental Affairs, said the awaited "action" includes the possibility of state Sec. Robert Durand signing off on the FEIR — which was authored by the MBTA

Cohasset – a million-dollar town

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although they are cropping up in Scituate, Hingham and Norwell — it's hard to compete with Cohasset when it comes to homes priced at more than a million dollars.

"The other day I checked my computer and the average asking price right now for a home in Cohasset is over $1 million," says David Drinkwater of Coastal Countryside Properties. "A million-dollar sale is no longer considered unusual."

The 37 properties in town, currently on the market, range in asking price from $278,000 for a six-room ranch on Grace Drive to $3.8 million for a 12-room Victorian under construction on Atlantic Avenue. That means the average asking price is currently about $1.2 million

The 37 properties currently on the market range in asking price from $278,000 to $3.8 million.

Since January, 40 property sales have closed in town with an average sales price of $700,000. Of the 40, five sold for more than $1 million, and two of those five, for more than $2 million, Drinkwater says.

In recent years, the million-dollar market has soared. In 1997, only one home priced more than $1million sold in Cohasset. In 1998 and 1999 there were eight and 11 respectively. In 2000, according to figures from the Multiple Listing Service, 11 homes topped the $1 million mark with nine of those selling for $1.3 million or above. The highest home sale price in town last year was $1,875,000.

Erica Ford, manager of Coldwell Banker-Hunneman, attributes the number of high-end homes in Cohasset to location, location, location — near the water.

"We have more coastal residential property," she says. "A good part of Hingham's coastline is commercial, for example."

Although the million-dollar market may have slowed somewhat due to uncertainty in the stock market and other economic factors

YMCA plans teen center

By Ed Baker
EBAKER@CNC.COM

All too often, most high school-aged youths drop out of community social groups upon reaching age 16. Youths at this age have more choices on how to enjoy themselves because they have a driver's license or friends who drive. These youths often want activities that have limited adult constraints or none at all.

The Mill Pond YMCA in Hanover, which attracts residents from all over the South Shore, is trying to change this trend by building a teen center to attract these youngsters. The teen center is part of an $8 million expansion project the Y is building at its Hanover site. The expansion will also add two indoor swimming pools, a family recreation center and new locker rooms for men, women and children.

Y officials are planning to attract

Film recalls heyday of the Hingham Shipyard

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

An important part of South Shore history has been preserved in the newly released documentary, "Remembering the Hingham Shipyard."

Grace and John Campana, who worked there during World War II, were among the honored guests at the gala premiere showing of the film this week.

The 30-minute documentary, sponsored by the developers involved in a plan to redevelop the shipyard and Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation, details how the sleepy seaside community of Hingham was transformed into a bustling military naval center.

During the height of the war, thousands of workers from Hingham, Cohasset and other communities produced 227 top-notch ships at Bethlehem Hingham Shipyard which were used in the war effort.

The Campanas, who now live on Cape Cod, met when they both joined a bowling league comprised of shipyard workers. This year, the couple is celebrating their 57th anniversary.

Grace started as a tack welder but later moved on to sewing pipe covers. Her husband-to-be served as timekeeper.

"The film captures the feeling of the shipyard during the war, and brings back a lot of memories," she said. "We were glad to help our country."

During the height of the war, thousands of local workers produced 227 top-notch ships at Bethlehem Hingham Shipyard.

The Campanas still talk about their shipyard experiences to this day.

John proudly recalls the time when Grace won the "Miss Bethlehem Hingham" contest.

The giant General Services Administration building provided the ideal setting for the viewing of the film on a giant screen – amid dramatic claps of thunder and flashes of lightning — because that's where the shipbuilding operating was headquartered.

A 10-foot inflated beach ball marked the entranceway, which was draped with a huge American flag.

A private reception for those who participated in the production of the video was held prior to the public viewing.

Martin Cohn, spokesperson for shipyard developer Paul Trendowicz, noticed a great deal of excitement and enthusiasm surrounding both the production and release of the video.

"We had people entering the building who looked around and exclaimed, "This is where I worked!"

Some former shipyard workers arrived wearing their old shipyard identification tags.

"Stars" of the film and others who worked at the shipyard mingled with well-wishers from the community who had heard about the film and wanted to meet those who could share their firsthand recollections of the experience.

Against an appropriate background of Glenn Miller, Sammy Kaye, Frank Sinatra and Ella Mae Morse music, guest speakers shared

Water commission reports high sodium level in water

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The warning was made in the commission's 2001 Water Quality Report that lists all regulated contaminants found in the water.

Because of a high-sodium count, the Cohasset Water Commission has issued a warning to town residents on a low-sodium diet to consult with their physicians before using town water.

Although there are no regulations limiting the amount of sodium found in drinking water, water distributors are required to notify their clients when the sodium-level is over 20 parts per million. In July, 2000, tests showed 21.8 ppm in Cohasset water.

Water Commission chairman John McNabb said although the commission is required to notify its customers, he didn't consider the sodium-level "high."

He attributes the high level of sodium to the use of road salt along Route 3A and King Street, which is in the Lily Pond watershed. McNabb said state and town road crews try to use as little salt as possible in the environmentally-sensitive areas.

Town Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the warning means people who are on salt-restricted diets should look at their entire diet and how much tap water they consume.

The warning was made in the commission's 2001 Water Quality Report. The report lists all regulated contaminants found in the water. The only contaminant level higher than normal involves total trihalomethanes (TTHM), a byproduct of the chlorination process. McNabb made public the high levels last summer and says steps have been taken to reduce the potential carcinogen. He believes the ongoing pipe cleaning process will drastically lower the amount of TTHM in the water.

Other contaminants found in the water, although at "safe levels," include fluoride; hexachloropentadiene, a chemical used to make pesticides; total haloacetic acids, another byproduct of the chlorination process; chlorine, a disinfect used to prevent disease from microorganisms; and sulfate.

The water commission also recorded small amounts of alpha activity, a form of radiation, and beta particles, a radioactive particle. Both detected levels are below the maximum contaminant level.

McNabb chalked the findings up to the erosion of mineral deposits, and in this specific case, the tons of granite beneath Cohasset.

"Alpha activity is the least harmful of radioactivity and beta particles are just beta waves. We're not talking about gamma waves," said McNabb. "It's normal mineral activity you get from granite, and that's the type of rock we have in this area."

The water quality report also identified any potential threats to the watershed. Of the sites listed, McNabb said the commission is keeping a close eye on Cohasset Heights Limited, the Hingham Annex in Wompatuck State Park, and an old gas spill site in Depot Court.

Other identified potential threats are the former Norfolk Conveyor and MassHighway garage off Route 3A, the former Beechwood dump on Doane Street, the Arrowwood subdivision in Scituate, and a series of underground bunkers in Wompatuck State Park which borders the Aaron Reservoir.

Since the map was released, McNabb said the board have identified additional potential threats in a former gas spill near St. Anthony's Church on South Main Street, and an old dump on Clapp Road.

"That's the value in sending this report out, so people can come to us and say, 'Hey, why isn't this on here,'" he said.

Meeting schedule

The following is a list of upcoming town meetings posted in town hall as of Monday, July 9. All meetings will be held at town hall, unless otherwise noted.

- School Committee, July 12, 7 p.m. High School Conference Room
- Water Commission, July 12, 7:30 p.m., 339 King Street
- Advisory Committee, July 12, 7:30 p.m.
- Conservation Commission, July 12, July 26, 7:30 p.m.
- Paul Pratt Memorial Library Building Committee, July 16, 9:30 a.m.
- Council on Elder Affairs Board Meeting, July 16, 9:30 a.m., 3 North Main St.
- Zoning Board of Appeals, July 16, 7:30 p.m.
- Planning Board, July 18, 8 p.m.
- Senior Housing Committee, July 25, 9 a.m.

The School Building Committee meets every Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Selectmen's Office.

Water Commission

The Cohasset Water Commission apologized to Scituate for filing legislation that would give it the power to take land by eminent domain outside of Cohasset's boundaries in the name of protecting the water supply.

Scituate officials were upset that they were not consulted before the board filed the bill.

In a letter sent to Scituate's Board of Selectmen, Water Commission chairman John Mcnabb formally apologized for the oversight. He also sent a letter to House Committee on Local Affairs Chairman Maria Parente asking the bill to be placed in a study, which would essentially kill the bill.

Open space

The town Open Space Committee has filed the final draft of its Open Space Master Plan with the town. The lengthy document outlines a plan for the town concerning its recreation and open space, as well as identifies and prioritizes potential parcels of land the town could purchase.

CRC clean-up

The Cohasset Revitalization Corporation has asked for, and received, permission to hire a landscaping company to make minor improvements to several locations through out the village. The company would spread stone dust around the base of trees along Depot Court and South Main Street, plant some native grasses along the edge into the town parking lot, and clean-up James Brook Walkway.

"It doesn't involve any painting, so I think we're safe," joked Selectman Merle Brown. He was referring to last summer's mini-controversy when Atlantica and Kimball's By the Sea owner Peter Roy painted some town-owned structures gray, black and white, what some consider his "corporate colors." Some of the painted structures were returned to their original color.

Firefighter camera

The Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Association told Selectmen Tuesday that it had raised enough money to purchase a thermal imaging camera.

The call firefighters had been in the process of raising money for the camera, which can "see" through heavy smoke conditions by detecting body heat, for the past few months.

Association president Bruce Pratt said the group hadn't quite reached its $35,000 goal, but had raised enough to purchase a camera. Right now, the fire department has been given a "loaner" to use and learn on until the new camera is ready. The company is experiencing backups due to a large order for the New York City Fire Department.

Pratt said the group will makea formal presentation to the town when the new camera comes in.

Garage hours

The Teen Garage, grades 6 and above, will be open for use as follows: Friday, 4 to 10 p.m.; first and third Saturdays, 6 to 10 p.m.

Cohasset's public health nurse moves to town hall

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Gone is the former "Message Center" on the first-floor of town hall. Instead of a copy machine and mail slots, the small room facing the building's side entrance has a scale, refrigerator full of vaccines and other medical supplies. It's the new office of town nurse Judy Fitzsimmons.

Fitzsimmons has just finished her first full week in her new town hall office, after spending the previous 11 years at the Social Service League's office in St. Stephen's Church.

"Just being down here people are dropping in to see what's going on," she said of the added exposure of her new office.

Fitzsimmons became an "official" town employee on July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. The town nurse position had been under the control of Social Service League, and the town paid about $30,000 annually to the league to cover the cost. The money included Fitzsimmons' part-time salary, the hourly wages for another nurse who filled in when needed, and administrative costs. The move is expected to save the town approximately $12,000 in fiscal year 2002.

Fitzsimmons hopes by being in a more central location, more people will become familiar with the services she offers.

"Most people are still unaware about the town nurse, they only usually have contact around flu season," she said.

Aside from the ever-popular flu vaccine clinics she helps put on, Fitzsimmons is like an omnipresent health care worker, involved in all aspects of the town's general health.

She distributes vaccines issued by the state Department of Public Health to doctors in town, puts on the Keep Well clinics, helps organize the town health fair, performs blood pressure and blood sugar screenings during office hours, gives prescribed Vitamin B-12 shots, and helps arrange for visits from home healthcare aides if needed.

"The job description is the same as it was when I was with the Social Service League, just the location is different," said Fitzsimmons.

She also expects to work closer with the Board of Health in developing town-sponsored programs. Upcoming programs include one on peanut allergies in the fall, a health awareness day, a women's health and menopause seminar, and a tobacco cessation program sometime next year.

She said the flu vaccinations will be held again, but not until later in the year.

STAFF PHOTO/ ALAN COLMAN

Public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons sets up her new office on the first floor of town hall.

"The state is saying it's not urgent to get it in September or October, that if you don't get it until October, November or even early December that that will be plenty of time."

Town health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik likes the move.

"We work closer now than we did. We rarely saw or spoke to each other, but now we speak on a daily basis, which is good if I have questions or if there is something we need to collaborate on," he said.

Fitzsimmons has been working in community nursing in one form or another for more than 30 years. After graduating from Catherine Laboure School of Nursing in 1963, Fitzsimmons spent three years in the Peace Corps in Brazil.

"It was there when I learned to enjoy community nursing, riding on a horse going out to visit all of the farms and villages," she said.

When she came back she spent time at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home before joining the Social Service League in 1986.

She said working as a public health nurse gives her opportunities she wouldn't have otherwise been afforded had she gone to work in a hospital.

"There's not as much freedom to spend time with patients," Fitzsimmons said. "In a hospital you are on a schedule and have certain tasks, and you might not have time to be with the patients."

The town nurse is a 25-hour-a-week position, but Fitzsimmons spends most of that time out in the community.

Part of Fitzsimmons' weekly routine includes checking up on homebound residents, or responding to calls from people concerned about an older neighbor's health.

She doesn't yet have a town hall extension, but can still be reached by calling the Social Service League at 781-383-0771, and leaving a message.

Office hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday mornings, from 8:30 until 11.

90-year-old Social Service League looks to future

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Although the town nurse position won't be part of the Social Service League for the first time in its 90-year history, the group is still heavily involved in the overall health of Cohasset.

"The Social Service League was founded in 1912 by four women with a mission to find the areas of most social need in the community and to help address those needs," said league president Motoko Deane. "As we approach our 90th anniversary, I'm proud to say that our basic mission remains unchanged."

Since first starting a school-lunch program to help promote nutrition among Cohasset's youth, it has since sponsored a weight and measurement clinic for babies, a town job bank during the Depression, and the senior shuttle before it was taken over by the Council on Elder Affairs, and still offers Meals on Wheels, a town social worker, and seminars on issues such as self-defense and end-of-life care.

"What I think is important about this organization is that it's had the capability to change with the times," said Deane, who has been at the group's helm since 1998. "We can start something, and then go somewhere else and look for new initiatives."

The group recently put together a long-range planning committee to develop a master plan for the next few years.

"It is the mission of the Social Service League to identify the most important and least served social problems and to create, develop and support programs which can have an impact," said Deane. One area the group is looking into involves the modern "speeded up, overloaded family" and all if its implications.

The organization currently has four paid part-time employees; two which help operate the Consignment Shop, the group's main source of income, and two workers at its office in St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue.

"We could not have provided the level of services without their generosity," Deane said of St. Stephen's.

The league also oversees Pat Carleton, a licensed social worker.

"She's available to help those who have basic questions on issues such as someone who has an elderly parent, but wants to spend three months in Florida, what suggestions can she make. And she also helps in abusive situations," said Deane.

Last year, domestic violence issues accounted for 15 percent of all Carleton's cases.

Residents can also receive clinical counseling from Carleton on a sliding fee scale.

Deane counts nearly 200 volunteers involved with the Social Service League's various programs.

Between 25 and 30 help distribute the Meals on Wheels, another 100 volunteer at the Consignment Shop in Tedeschi Plaza off Route 3A, and 16 are members on the Board of Directors.

"Without their work, the league could not be in a position to provide the services it provides," she said.

Although most of its funding comes from commissions at the shop, it also receives cash contributions from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Cohasset Rotary Club, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, the Hingham Institution for Savings, and Second Congregational Church.

Deane said the Social Service League is always looking for new volunteers for its many ongoing activities and committees. It's also open for ideas and suggestions during the strategic planning process.

The league can be reached through its office at 41 Highland Ave., by calling 781-383-0771, or via email at sslcohasset@aol.com.

Two Cohasset Kyles celebrate their special days!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LOVING SUMMER

Hello Cohasset. Summer is in full swing and it is wonderful. Between the beach, the pool, cookouts, boating and so much more, it does not get much better! I really hope that all of you are able to enjoy the summer in one way or another.

SPECIAL BIRTHDAYS

I want to send out some very special birthday wishes. Kyle Piepenbrink just turned seven years old on July 7 and had a wonderful party to celebrate it. Happy Birthday to a very special little, whoops big guy, we love you! Another special Kyle is celebrating her third birthday this weekend, Kyle Burke! She will be having a great time as she parties in style and shares the special day with her brother David, who is celebrating his first birthday. Happy Birthday to you all!

FUTURE THOUGHTS

Claire McCarthy, a local 10-year-old was recently honored as a winner in the CARAVAN for Commuters, Inc., "Commute 2020!!!" Art and Writing Contest. During the spring of 2001, children across Massachusetts were invited to think about commuting to work in the year 2020. Students were asked to write an essay, poem or description, or create a diagram or design showing how they will travel to work in the year 2020 to conserve energy, reduce pollution and decrease traffic. 149 students, age six-through-15 participated in the activity, which gave the students the opportunity to think about commuting efficiently in the future and to discuss the topic in school and with their families. An awards ceremony was held in the State Transportation Building for 43 winners. Prizes were all from family-oriented businesses and attractions and were valued over $1,700. Congratulations Claire on a job well done!

AT MIDDLEBURY

Middlebury College of Middlebury, Vt. recently named two local girls to the dean's list for the spring term, 2001. Margaret Goedecke, daughter of Peter and Jane Goedecke, and Cara McKenney, daughter of Brian and Monica McKenney, were both awarded this honor. Congratulations to both of you!

Also being recognized from Middlebury College were Sydney Johnston, daughter of Robert and Diane Griswold Johnston and Theodore Noon, son of Nicholas and Constance Corvan Noon. These students were named College Scholars for academic excellence during the 2001 spring term. Great work!

TABOR HONORS

Tabor Academy commended the following Cohasset students and named them to the Commended List for Semester 2. Students earn commendations for achieving and overall average of 80 or above with no grade below a 75 and no more than one grade between 75 and 80. Alexander Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston. Skyler Ralston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ralston and Mrs. Joseph L. Davidson were named for the class of 2002; and Zoe Murray, daughter of Mr. Richard Murray and Mrs. Deborah Meehan and Cailin Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hughes were named for the class of 2004. Congratulations to you all.

UVM GRADUATES

The University of Vermont recently graduated two Cohasset ladies. Catherine A. Fallon received a bachelor of arts in English and Kelley-Marie O'Donnell received a bachelor of science in community development and applied economics. Fantastic job to both of you.

UNION COLLEGE

Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. announced a Cohasset graduate. Melinda Childs Cheel, a 1994 graduate of Cohasset junior-senior high school received an interdepartmental bachelor of science in computer information systems and art. Great work, Mindy.

RELAY AWARD

Gordon Behren, left, and Craig Bleicken, right, co-chairmen of this year's American Cancer Society's Relay For Life in Cohasset present Laurie Greenip with a plaque recognizing her team's involvement in this year's event. "Leanne's Team" earned the award for the "Highest Fundraising Team," by raising the record-setting total of $15,236.

MILITARY MEDAL

Let's hear it for Keith A. Jackson, son of Bob and Diane Jackson, on his receiving the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal. Keith, a Hospitalman First Class, earned the award for professional achievement in the superior performance of duty while serving as a platoon corpsman during a recent work-up training and deployment. Keith's sustained performance well exceeded the high expectations of a sailor of his grade. Supporting his platoon through more than 20 exercises, his top caliber medical proficiency and instruction of platoon members in field treatment of injuries proved invaluable, wrote his commanding officer. Deployed forward as an assistant team leader, with minimal sleep under adverse conditions, Keith proved his mastery of field skills and long-range communications, and on countless occasions made himself a versatile and capable team member.

Congratulation, Keith, you've made Cohasset proud!

HONOR ROLL

The St. Sebastian's School announced that Cohasset students, Thomas J. Digan, Paul Digan and John Cotter were named to the fourth quarter honor roll. Thomas, a sophomore and Paul, a freshman are the sons of Thomas and Mary Ann Digan, and Cotter is the son of Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter, all of Cohasset. Hard work sure pays off.

ECONOMICS MAJOR

Jonathan Crafts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Crafts recently graduated from Williams College in Williamstown, Mass. Jonathan majored in economics and participated in varsity hockey and varsity lacrosse. Congratulations, Jonathan.

THANK YOU!

Special thanks to Chris Kennedy of Kennedy's Country Gardens for his generous donation of the potted dwarf evergreen in front of the Joseph Osgood School to replace the one that did not make it through the rough winter. His donation came just in time for the Osgood students' celebration of Arbor Day last month. As the students stood in front of their beautiful school performing in their annual concert, it was nice to see a matching pair of live trees flanking the front entrance. Thank you, Kennedys!

PLEASE CLAIM SPOT

Is any young child out there missing a "Spot" the dog stuffed animal? If you attended the performance of the "Music Lady" at the Cohasset library and left this wonderful animal behind, please contact the library and it will be returned to you.

I know that those lazy, hazy days of summer are here but please, send in all your news. Birthdays, anniversaries, vacations and more are all things we love to hear about. My deadline is Monday at noon for all items and photos! You may get the info to me at:

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer/Programs

Matt Tavares joins the Paul Pratt Memorial Library summer line-up an Tuesday, July 17 at 7 p.m., as he talks about how he wrote and illustrated his book, "Zachary's Ball". Copies of this book will be available far purchase and author signing.

Tavares, a Bates College, Maine graduate says, "In this day and age of AstroTurf and retractable dome stadiums, I wanted to create a story that portrayed baseball in a simple, timeless way - a child going to an old-time ballpark with his fielder's mitt, hoping to catch a foul ball or maybe even see his hero hit a home run." All baseball fans should be here far this unique presentation.

Come in later in the month of July for Burt the Raccoon Puppet Show on July 24 and an exhibit on July 31 presented by New England Reptile Exhibits. Magic for Muggles rounds out programs this summer program an Aug. 7. Contact the library at 781-383-1348 for sign-up or more information on all programs.

New Pass

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is proud to announce the latest addition to their list of passes for library users. "Boston by Foot" has just been added to the expanding choices offered by the library.

Boston by Foot, a non-profit educational corporation, provides trained volunteer guides who share their expertise and enthusiasm with visitors, and residents. There are seven major historical tours covered by this organization; The Heart of the Freedom Trail; Victorian Back Bay; The Waterfront; Boston by Little Feet (a child's eye view); Beacon Hill; The North End and Boston Underground.

Boston by Foot, now celebrating its 25th anniversary, is Boston's, and the nation's peerless non-profit architectural walking tour service. Reservations for the tours are not required but you must call the library 24-hours in advance for the pass. Information about the tours are available at the library by calling 383-1348. This new pass has been provided by generous contributions to the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Massport project

Comments submitted on behalf of the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Winthrop and cities of Somerville and Everett in opposition to the Massport proposed Airside Improvements Planning Project are available for residents to read in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. These are hard facts and comments about the impact of the Logan Airport expansion to our community and other impacted communities.

Look for the large notebook entitled, "Errors and. Omissions - Massport's Flawed SDEIS/FEIR" (Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Study/Final Environmental Impact Report). Ask an attendant at the front desk to find it in the community reports section behind the front desk.

Summer video

Calling all Cohasset teens, grades 7 to 12. You are invited to create a short video (no more than 20 minutes long) during the summer. Create an original video that does not include any copyrighted images or music.

Submit your entry to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. A local panel of judges will view all entries and determine one grand prize winner from one of the participating South Shore libraries. Screenings of all videos will take place at the "Oscar Night of Stars" on Friday, Aug. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Duxbury Free Library.

Appalachia Service Project opens young and old eyes

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

During the latest Appalachia Service Project Merle Brown replaced the piping, David Ingber helped build a deck, and Phil Lehr constructed a car port.

But these improvements weren't made to middle-class houses in suburban enclaves. The new piping wasn't so the home's owners could install a Jacuzzi. The deck wasn't built around a pool. The car port won't house an SUV.

They made these home improvements to small, dilapidated homes in one of the poorest areas of the country. More than 160 Cohasset residents recently spent a week on the West Virginia/Kentucky border working to bring things they normally take for granted to the much less-fortunate.

"Some of these people make $2,400 a year," said Brown, who made his fourth trip as part of the project.

The experience the trip brings has helped turn the annual trip to Appalachia into a Cohasset tradition. What started out with Second Congregational Church minister Gary Ritts, his wife, Judy, and seven teens in 1988, has blossomed into Ritts and 130 teens, plus another 30 adult chaperones, making the long trip down.

"It almost seems like a right of passage in Cohasset," said Cohasset High School junior David Ingber, who participated for the first time this year. "It seems like you need to do it by the end of high school. Everybody I've ever talked to said it's totally worth it. It's worth driving all those hours. It was an amazing experience."

The week-long service project has exposed more than 200 Cohasset teens to those less fortunate.

Lehr said one of the reasons he become involved in the trip eight years ago, besides being good friends with Ritts, was that he wanted to see how the town's youth dealt with being exposed to poverty.

"It's a very different situation than what they're used to growing up here with," he said.

"I couldn't believe this was still America, that we vote for the same president, and that we face the same issues," said Ingber.

The trip to the heart of coal mining country started at 6 a.m. on June 25 and ended at 2 p.m. the following day. For the next five days, the large Cohasset contingent split up into five groups and went to five different areas. Then those groups were further divided into work crews consisting of five teens and two adults.

The ASP is a non-profit organization founded in 1969 that helps low-income families make needed repairs and improvements to their homes. Cohasset participated in the third week of the summer-long project. Brown's group was sent to Mingo County, and stayed in a county high school gymnasium, with a plastic sheet hung up to divide the room into male and female sides.

"It was hot in there," said Brown.

The neighborhood was noticeable for its dichotomy.

"On one lot could be this beautiful brick building, right next door to one that's falling down," he said.

By the end of the week, Brown and his crew, including Ingber, had redone the plumbing, and installed a new working toilet and sink, as well as constructed a porch. Before, the home did not have a working bathroom.

"We can leave there knowing they can go to the bathroom or take a bath in their house, instead of having to walk three miles to a friends house," said Ingber.

It was while working with a crew from Columbia, Md., that Ingber realized the extent of Cohasset's involvement.

"Columbia is a city of 90,000 and they sent down 80 people. Cohasset is a town of 7,000, with 300 in the high school and we sent almost 200," he said. "I really didn't notice how impressive the turnout was until we measured up."

Brown said he was impressed on the level the teens discussed the trip.

"We'd sit around at night and talk about it, they never thought about going home and not having a bathroom, let alone a shower or two," said Brown. "These people were lucky to have a vehicle, and if they do, they had to repair it everyday.

"It really opened their eyes everyday. It really took hold."

Lehr said overall the trip was very successful and was amazed at how the amount of participation in Cohasset has taken off.

"We never intended it to be this big, we're overwhelmed at how far it's gone," he said. "It shows kids have this interest in helping out and seeing how other people live."

Ingber raved about the experience.

"Rev. Ritts always told us how it would change our lives. It doesn't seem that one week can change a person but it does," he said. "It's a fantastic program. The people we met were probably the nicest people we had ever met, and they were so generous and giving, even though they didn't have as much."

The Rev. Ritts is currently on sabbatical and was unable to be reached for comment.

To add to the tough times, parts of the area experienced severe flooding this past weekend thanks to a series of bad storms. Dan Volungis, whose group worked in McDowell County, said the Second Congregational Church is collecting money that will be sent down to a regional relief agency in the area.

Improving Chapter 40B

Last week's House debate on housing initiatives was billed by some as a city vs. suburb quarrel, a characterization that does more to obscure than clarify the issues at hand.

First, it lumps together the communities Boston media and politicians insist on calling simply "the suburbs," as if every town along the Route 3 corridor was the sole province of millionaire horse-breeders. We who live here know there's a world of difference between Weymouth and Hingham, Cohasset and Marshfield, and Norwell and Rockland — especially when it comes to housing.

Yes, we have our bedroom communities, wealthy towns where multi-family housing of any kind is as rare as a horse stable in Boston. But we also have towns with neighborhoods of smaller homes or apartment complexes where poorer families scrape to get by.

Braintree, Holbrook and Rockland, for example, have more than 8 percent of their housing units that qualify the kind of subsidized housing that counts toward the 10 percent goal built into Chapter 40B, also known as the anti-snob zoning law. But that's just the beginning of their affordable housing. They also house thousands of people who pay their rent with vouchers through Section 8, the huge low-income housing program. They have apartment complexes and neighborhoods of aging bungalows and sturdy duplexes housing families that would easily meet the state's income guidelines.

The issue in the House debate was whether housing that is clearly affordable – specifically, mobile homes and units rented through Section 8 vouchers – should be included in calculating progress toward the 10 percent goal. Chapter 40B allows developers to bypass local zoning ordinances in communities with less than 10 percent, as long as 25 percent of the development's units will qualify as affordable under the state's definition.

The changes would also allow accessory dwellings – affordably priced apartments created within a single family home – to qualify toward Chapter 40B. Think how that might help Scituate to reach its 10 percent goal. Scituate, which currently has less than 5 percent of its housing deemed "affordable," passed an accessory dwelling by-law a few years back that permits a limited number of apartment conversions a year. These "accessory dwellings" may provide the key for an elderly couple – who have worked all their lives — to be able to afford to stay in the home and the town they love. Cohasset has plans to put a by-law allowing accessory dwellings before its next Town Meeting.

These changes are reasonable refinements to Chapter 40B. Ten percent affordable housing is a more defensible goal if the state counts all the affordable housing in a town, not just some. Every community should do more to provide affordable housing, but the state should recognize that some communities are already doing plenty.

The comprehensive permits now being pursued under the anti-snob zoning law are the product of a red-hot apartment/condominium market. Some developers are using Chapter 40B to push through massive projects.

Those developers are responding to a real need and a market opportunity. But the density of some of these developments changes the character of neighborhoods with single-family homes — neighborhoods where homeowners saved and worked hard to buy their dream home.

The changes adopted by the House don't undermine Chapter 40B; they just make the yardstick with which we measure communities' commitment to affordable housing more credible.

The bill's other initiatives are equally important. It makes a serious investment in public housing and creates tools and incentives all cities and towns can use to encourage affordable housing that enhances rather than threatens the quality of community life. Its passage is an achievement the Senate should match.

Support alternatives to Greenbush rail

TO THE EDITOR:

The AfTA supplement in this week's Cohasset Mariner announcing AfTA's intent to file suit against the MBTA is not just another anti-Greenbush ploy. Rather it focuses on the positive attributes of the alternatives to Greenbush, the commuter boat system being the centerpiece of those alternatives.

Hopefully Cohasset residents will see the distinction and support this initiative.

The MBTA's intent all along has been to build Greenbush, regardless of its environmental impact, the alternatives be damned. In particular, it has abandoned any pretense of supporting the commuter boat system. They boats are unwanted "competition" for Greenbush, even though they have demonstrated enormous potential for removing cars from the roads. The absence of any boat funding whatsoever in the T's Capital Improvement Program for the next five years shows where its true priorities lie.

AfTA's goal is to take the opposite tact and convince the state to build the commuter boats up with improved terminal facilities, more parking, more and faster boats and a CNG (compressed natural gas) feeder bus system that would allow many more residents to take the boats. Operating at its full potential, such a system will remove many more cars from the roads during peak hours than Greenbush.

With the South Boston waterfront under development, the prospects for the boat are brighter still.

With new development will come new jobs, the result of which will be more people working near the terminus of the commuter boats. South Shore residents will be part of that work force and others will elect to move to the South Shore simply because of the convenience of the commuter boats.

For South Shore residents who work away from the waterfront, AfTA continues to work toward an additional terminal as part of the new development. Such a terminal would offer an easy connection to the Silver Line, which would shuttle commuters to South Station's Red Line and points beyond.

Also the latest plan for the new baseball stadium near the waterfront is being widely acclaimed. Were it to become a reality, it would offer a whole new source of revenue for boat owners as well as another opportunity to take cars off the roads. How great would it be to take the boat into the ballgame and then home again without fighting all that traffic? The boat parking lots in Quincy and Hingham would be brimming with cars from all over the South Shore at a time when they would otherwise be empty. The added boat revenue would also cut the state subsidy and take cars off the road at the same time (lest the MBTA forget, the whole idea is to take cars off the roads and most ball game traffic occurs during peak hours).

From Boston's vantage point, a healthy boat system combined with a rejuvenated Nantasket terminal could also take city residents to the beach on weekends or in mid day on hot summer days when the commuter boats are not in use. After dropping commuters in Hingham at the end of the day, the boats could swing by Nantasket and pick up all those sun-baked bodies and actually return to Boston with a full load of paying passengers. All the more cars would be taken off the roads, especially those clogging 228 and 3A on their way to and from Nantasket.

This all makes sense to us. Hopefully it makes sense to the people of Cohasset. It is something that "can" happen. But only if we push state transportation authorities toward the alternatives. Right now they have a bad case of Greenbush. If we can cure that maybe they'll open their eyes and see the possibilities.

Grant appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the students at Cohasset Middle High School and the Arts Boosters, I would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their generous grant of $1,000 this year.

This grant will help to fund our operating expenses for the upcoming school year. The money raised by Arts Boosters goes directly to the students in the form of enriching the arts curriculum with extra supplies, paying entry fees for Drama competitions, and granting requests from the teachers for special events or projects which are not included in the school budget. This grant will enable us to begin the year on a sound financial basis.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Shore Music Circus are true assets to the Town of Cohasset. The members of the Arts Boosters send our sincerest wishes for the best season yet in 2001.

COHASSET CARES

Pay as You Throw off to a good start!

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

By and large townspeople are responding very well to PAYT, and the Recycling Committee want to congratulate townspeople for their understanding and decency as we make this important move.

The democratic philosophy of PAYT— we pay according to our lifestyle —is reassuring.

The most marked differences at the RTF are: 1] the diminished and more "normal" amount of trash generated because of the blue bags; 2] the increase in plastics recycled and cardboard recycled and the need for better equipment to replace the antiquated baler and to crush/shred the plastics to assist employees as they work in between days; and 3] the increase in esprit as we all feel the reality of doing much more for the environment.

Cohasset RECYCLING TRANSFER Facility
Cohasset green to cycle verything

Of course there have been a few thoughtless and selfish types that have had to be reminded of the cost differences between littering and using the RTF. The democratic philosophy of PAYT— we pay according to our lifestyle —is reassuring.

By and large Cohasset residents are thoughtful and neat. I know we feel uplifted by being more respectful of the basics that make up our lives.

See you next time.

Suburban caucus wins round on affordable housing issue

By Craig Sandler
CRAIG.SANDLER@STATEHOUSENEWS.COM

— COMMENTARY —

One of the most underreported realities of the state Legislature made front-page news this week.

Suburbanites do not control the Legislature, but they have the power to. And it was the suburban point of view that held sway as the House settled a half-billion dollar debate on affordable housing.

In the wake of last week's votes, advocates for affordable housing claimed fuzzy math had been used so the riding-mower communities could renege on a chance to make themselves more open to more kinds of people — the poor, the young, the non-white, the non-traditional.

If that's true, it was one of the instances where the demographics of the Legislature overrode the inclinations of its powerful rulers.

Normally, the House and Senate are under the control of urban lawmakers, even though, according to the 2000 Census, only 44 percent of the population of Massachusetts lives in "urbanized centers" like Boston, Chelsea and Springfield, where the House Speaker, the Senate President and members of their leadership teams live.

The Census Department classifies communities into seven categories, and 56 percent of the state lives outside the urban centers. Cities lost ground in the last decade, from 46 to 44 percent of the state's population. The fastest-growing category was "small rural community," followed by "resort/retirement/artistic," followed by "residential suburb." All three grew more than six times faster than the "urban center" category.

Ask anybody at the Statehouse, and they'll let you know: Tom Finneran and Tom Birmingham control more than 44 percent of the power on Beacon Hill. Eighty percent is more like it, as if there's a credible way to put a number on it. Finneran and Birmingham, in their candid moments, won't deny that, and years of pronouncements about how their chambers will vote attest to who's boss and how things are run nowadays.

By the same token, and just as sincerely, they will insist they listen and respond to their membership. Well, it turns out the majority of that membership doesn't live in the city, like Finneran does, and so it was that the housing bill didn't pass on Finneran's schedule.

Originally, the bill had to be pulled because so many suburban lawmakers complained their towns would remain subject to big new developments. Communities that don't set aside 10 percent of their units as affordable for low- and middle-income people lose their power to keep more affordable housing from being built.

House leadership eventually conceded to the suburban caucus, and after a delay of many hours, allowed passage of an amendment instantly "creating" more affordable housing by counting mobile homes and federal rental vouchers as affordable units. That allowed more than five dozen suburbs to instantly say they were complying with the statutes requiring them to make a tenth of their housing affordable.

Advocates for affordable housing claimed fuzzy math had been used so the riding-mower communities could renege on a chance to make themselves more open to more kinds of people.

How much does this matter? Depends on who you are. If you want to keep your community looking the way it does now – physically and demographically.

The vote to prevent creation of more affordable housing units was a victory for stability. But housing advocates said the vote would keep many people in Massachusetts from changing the way their lives look, by keeping them out of the places they'd like to call home. Ironically, many of these people — poorer, ethnic, younger, and hoping to move up — could remain stuck in the cities Birmingham and Finneran are from. Last week, demographics outside the building were stronger than the force of leadership or personality inside.

2001 Boys of Summer

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I've followed the fortunes of Our Olde Towne Team (the Red Sox, I mean) off and on since Marty McManus was the playing manager, Dale Alexander was winning the batting championship, and Smead Jolley was rolling down Duffy's Cliff in left field.

But I don't recall ever seeing a bunch like the 2001 Boys of Summer, who are battling the New York Yankees for the American League pennant with a good chance of winning.

All that's missing is Wade Boggs and Margo Adams, but don't go away, there's still a half season left to play, with a lot of road trips into the hinterlands sans wives left to be made.

When I last looked, the Sox were within striking distance of the Evil Empire with all but one of their best players either coming out of the hospital or waiting to get in, and the team on the field appeared to be made up of 25 utility infielders.

Yet a goodly percentage of their fans wanted to fire the manager.

Why do I feel that if Jimy Williams wins the American League pennant, he'll get life without parole?

And if he wins the Sox's first World Series since 1918, they'll clamor for him to get the chair?

All this is being done while the team is up for a crash sale to the highest bidder, and it needs a new stadium with enough seats and luxury boxes to support a team with a $100 million payroll.

Just the other day, a Sox outfielder named Trot Nixon was quoted by those sensation-seeking Boston baseball writers as criticizing injured outfielder Carl Everett for not getting well as fast as he could.

Whereupon Everett demanded that the writers apologize to Nixon, not for misquoting him, which they hadn't, but for making him look like a bad guy. Until they apologized, he (Everett) would not speak to them again.

It was apparently the first time Everett had spoken to the writers since last year when he told them he would never speak to them again.

Which came as a relief to a lot of them, particularly those who had heard him pontificate on why he didn't believe in dinosaurs, which was a concept few baseball writers have been called on to wrestle with.

Everett went from there to attack an umpire and tell the manager in a voice that all could hear that he never liked him in the first place.

All this while their best pitcher, Pedro Martinez, was home on the Dominican Republic nursing a sore arm for the next month; their best catcher, Jason Varitek, was on the shelf with a broken ankle; and their best player of all, Nomar Garciaparra, hadn't played all season after undergoing wrist surgery.

Meanwhile, Williams and General Manager Dan Duquette haven't appeared to be on speaking terms since the Duke failed to back the manager in a dispute with a player (Everett, who else?) last year.

And neither was sure of his job next season when a new owner, hopefully one with deep pockets, may be ready to take over the $100 million payroll and the disintegrating ball park.

Keeping your family safe at the pool

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Here are some tips brought to you by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta:

In the summer, swimming pools are filled with millions of people having fun and staying cool. But did you know that germs can contaminate swimming water even if it is treated with chlorine?

This summer, learning about recreational water illnesses (RWIs), which are spread by swimming in contaminated water, such as swimming pools, water parks, lakes and the ocean, can protect you from illness.

RWIs are caused by germs like "Crypto" (KRIP-toe, short for Cryptosporidium), Giardia (gee-ARE-dee-uh), E. coli 0157:H7, and Shigella (Shi-GE-luh) and are spread by accidentally swallowing water that has been contaminated with fecal matter. Remember, you share the water with everyone in the pool.

Germs causing RWIs are killed by chlorine, but chlorine doesn't work right away. It takes time to kill germs. Plus, some germs like Crypto are resistant to chlorine and can live in pools for days. That is why even the best maintained pools can spread illness.

Healthy swimming behaviors are needed to protect you and your family from RWIs and will help stop germs from getting in the pool in the first place. Here are six "P-L-E-As" that promote healthy swimming, provided by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Healthy Swimming Project:

1. Please don't swim when you have diarrhea. This is especially important for kids in diapers. You can spread germs into the water and make other people sick.

Healthy swimming behaviors are needed to protect you and your family.

2. Please don't swallow pool water. In fact, try your best to avoid even having water get in your mouth.

3. Please wash your hands with soap and water after using the toilet or changing diapers. You can protect others by remembering that germs on your body end up in the water.

4. Please take your kids on bathroom breaks often. Waiting to hear "I have to go" may mean that it's too late.

5. Please change diapers in a bathroom and not at poolside. Germs can spread to surfaces and objects in and around the pool.

6. Please wash your child thoroughly (especially his or her rear end) with soap and water before swimming. We all have invisible amounts of fecal matter on our bottoms that end up in the pool.

Rowing for Exercise, a Healthy way to get on the water

The Board of Health (BoH) and the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) have ties in two areas: First, high school students under CMI sponsorship use CMI boats, built by high school students to gather water quality samples of Cohasset Cove and the Gulf. Funding for some labor and materials for this effort comes from financial gifts through the BoH. Other funds come from an MIT grant to CMI. No Town funds.

But there exists a far more interesting relationship between CMI and BoH. The BoH assists the CMI in its rowing program. CMI has two lovely four sweep wherry's in addition to other boats which are used for recreational rowing. These excellent boats, donated to the CMI are in use every Sunday from 7-9a.m., and on Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. The boats are available to CMI members and others who may wish to use them for recreational rowing. Next Saturday one of the boats will be used in the Blackburn Challenge a rowing race in Gloucester. The boat will be manned by Joe Stanley, Scott Bradford, Mimi Tabela, and Rosamund Healy. They all row at area colleges and act as coaches, trainers and mentors for the CMI rowing program. The race is a 17.5 mile row through the Annisquam Canal around Cape Ann and back to Gloucester. The kids are going for a course record. Call Jack Buckley 781-383-8261, if you're interested in getting out on the water and rowing for exercise.

Protect environmental law!

LOGAN VIEW

MARY ANN FRYE

Since the publication of Rachel Carson's 1962 book "Silent Spring," millions of Americans have learned: materials put into the air and water alter the air and water and us. We do not mean to ruin our living conditions, but the rush to perceived short-term benefit distracts us from simple logic. Beginning in 1969 environmental protection legislation put the logic into law and made citizens into stewards. Before a change to air, water, and living systems can be blundered into, the impacts have to be detailed to the public so it can determine if the action is warranted or if it hurts the natural systems that support biological life.

This spring, South Shore residents and municipalities opened Massport's Environmental Impact Statement/ Final Environmental Report (EIS/EIR) for proposed runway 14/32, quite reasonably looking for a clear picture of impacts on the South Shore. On reading it, they were shaken by the impression that Massport would concentrate low altitude operations here and angered by Massport's public relations spin that traffic over South Shore homes is over "water" and creates environmental benefit. The group retained scientists and statistical experts in the areas of noise, emissions, delay, demand management and economic impacts to read the EIS/EIR closely and report back to residents. Attorney Bill Golden, instrumental in filing the Boston Harbor Cleanup lawsuit, coordinated this environmental dream team's official response to the EIS/EIR.

Massport seemed to be building the data to fit the case rather than arriving at the best case from real data.

The towns got a shock. In all of the crucial areas of the EIS/EIR, individual team members identified patterns of misleading statements and misrepresentations amounting in Golden's assessment to fraud against the public. Rather than using professionally standard methods and current data to provide the public clear alternatives, Massport had cooked questionable data to make its "preferred alternative" look credible. That is an outrage. Massport seemed to be building the data to fit the case rather than arriving at the best case from real data. Reportedly, Massport now has consultants scrambling to clean up the appearance of the worst of the bad data before submitting a final impact statement to the FAA.

We know that the current director of Massport was a former governor's press secretary, not a transportation expert. It may be part of "politics as usual" in Massachusetts. But air and water quality is not political. Political spin doesn't protect the taxpayer from toxic conditions. Cautious, informed deliberation does that. Manipulating environmental data is reckless, wrong, dangerous and unacceptable.

The effort begun by the South Shore Jet Pollution Council is now part of an unprecedented coalition all around greater Boston. The cities of Somerville, Everett and Revere have recently voted funding to assist in the coalition's effort. Environmental quality cannot be left to Massport. It is not the kind of thing they do well. We have to save the integrity of environmental law. It is the only tool we have to keep bad ideas from becoming bad air. POLITICAL NOTES

Bradley hosts beach cleanup

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and a group of early-morning volunteers recently participated in the first annual Sandy Beach Clean Up Day on Saturday, June 30.

The clean-up effort produced 27 bags of trash filled with Styrofoam cups and containers, plastic bottles, paper, construction materials, and cigarette butts. In addition, two large barrels were filled with metal debris, consisting principally of sharp, dangerous pieces of lobster traps, which were washed ashore during winter storms. The group also set aside a bag of returnable bottles, which was deposited at the Boy Scout shed at the transfer station. The cleanup group was careful to leave the dune areas undisturbed and left all "natural" material such as seashells, flora, and driftwood intact on the beach.

Bradley thanked all of the volunteers who turned out and expressed his appreciation to Town Manager Mark Haddad and the Sandy Beach Assoc. Pres. Dr. Robin Lawrence for their cooperation and assistance. Bradley has participated in beach cleanups in both Hingham and Hull and said he is looking forward to making this an annual event involving a large section of the community.

"The clean-up effort was a great success," said Bradley, who provided the gloves, bags, and refreshments for the volunteers. "Sandy Beach is an environmental gem for the residents of Cohasset. An annual clean-up day such as this helps to remind all of us that maintaining this beautiful, 'sandy beach' in top condition is the responsibility of all of us."

Runway meeting with Buckingham

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley has sent a letter requesting a meeting with Virginia Buckingham, director of Massport, and several constituents who, like himself, are opposed to the addition of another runway at Logan International Airport. This request comes after Massport's failure to recognize the effects the proposed runway will have on the Bradley's district of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

"I feel that this meeting would be beneficial to both the opponents and Massport. There are many outstanding questions, such as the amount of delay reduction due to the proposed addition of runway 14/32," Bradley stated in his letter.

Bradley is waiting a response to his letter from Buckingham. "It is my hope that the Director will finally meet with the opponents of this project, which she has so far refused to do," he said.

Selectmen back Town Manager Mark Haddad

decide to set up a sub-committee to investigate several subsequent complaints about Haddad by other citizens [see related story].

Selectman Michael Sullivan, who had frequent run-ins with Pratt when the two men sat on the board together, harshly criticized Pratt.

"This incident and the requirement for an independent investigator has occurred because of a temper tantrum Mr. Pratt had because he was not aware a meeting had taken place," he said. Sullivan continued to say although Haddad has the responsibility to stay calm and respectful at all times no matter how difficult the situation may be, neither Pratt nor any other citizen "should instigate a smear campaign on a town manager because they were not involved in a meeting."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris added, "I hope no other decent, hard-working person, which I consider Mark Haddad to be, has to suffer the stress and humiliation of having unfounded accusations brought against them."

Selectmen Merle Brown and Thomas Callahan also stated their support for Haddad, the first town manager in the town's history.

"I have told [Haddad] during my chairmanship that he does have to take a certain amount of abuse...At the same time, I don't think he has to sit there defenseless, and think he has at times been dealt with unfairly," he said.

Callahan also said he wished the incident had ended with the handshake Hadadd offered at the end of the June 14 confrontation with Pratt. "I'm sorry we had to go through this. I'm sorry the citizens of Cohasset had to listen to all of this," he said."

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he hopes the independent investigator's report "is the end of this situation."

Haddad, who has refrained from comment during the investigation, said "I think the report speaks for itself."

Pratt questioned the board's fairness. He said despite several requests, he didn't receive Haddad's cross-complaint until after he had spoken with Haley, and that the additional complaints were not taken into consideration.

"I think the selectmen did not accord any of the complainants, including my wife and I, any resemblance of due process," he said afterwards. "Mr. Haddad got to see my complaint and my wife's complaint against him, and the subsequent complaints, but I did not get to see his complaint against me until four days after my interview. He was allowed somehow to muster alleged evidence of other incidents to back up his claim that I have harassed him for four years, where in none of the other complaints were taken into account so the investigator was not allowed to look at an overall pattern."

In his complaint, Pratt, a former selectman, alleged that while confronting Haddad about a meeting the town manager had held to discuss a proposed development off Route 3A, that he had become verbally abusive and threatening to the point where he "feared Haddad would possibly engage in a physical assault upon him." Donna Pratt also put her complaint about her telephone conversation with Haddad in writing.

Haddad counter-charged that Pratt has systematically harassed and verbally assaulted him over the past four years, tried to embarrass him publicly and privately, and claimed Pratt told him he would not be happy until Haddad was no longer the Town Manager.

Haley, a former state director of personnel and administration, was not present at the meeting; his findings and recommendations were read by town counsel Peter Barry.

The findings gave slightly varied versions of the June 14 argument between Haddad and Peter Pratt, and the October conversation between Haddad and Donna Pratt. Haley met with five other town hall employees that were witnesses to the altercation, and reported an "agitated, angry, red-faced, fuming" Pratt "pacing" outside Haddad's office, as well as "loud tones and voices coming from both men." [For text of investigator's findings, see 9]

The report said the two accounts of the phone conversation were so different it could not be reconciled.

The investigator's findings told of angry and threatening message left by Pratt on the selectmen's office voice-mail system, as well as an email that contained profanity he sent to a number of town residents in 1997.

The report recommended giving both men a slap on the wrist and was often scolding.

"At some point, you may want to remind all of the parties to these complaints of the old adage that if you can't say something nice about someone, then it is best to say nothing at all," Haley said.

He also said at a couple of different points in his comments that personal differences should be put aside in the name of working for the public interest. "Personal animosities between elected and appointed officials provide distractions and undermine the public's confidence in the ability of those selected to represent them to carry out their public duties properly. Public interest should always come before personal and professional differences."

The report recommended that Pratt not be allowed to see Haddad without an appointment, and that someone else be present during all meetings and telephone conversations between Haddad and the Pratts.

It also said both men "must learn to control their emotions when they hear something that they don't like, disagree with something that has been said or done or with a position that has been taken, or when they do not get their own way."

The report said Haddad has a responsibility to remain calm and to keep his temper despite whether he agrees with what is being said or done. But it continued on to say that neither Haddad nor any member of his staff should be subjected to verbal abuse, profanity or physical intimidation.

The report also recommended advising Pratt that "demanding urgent meetings, berating other publicly and privately, leaving threatening messages on the police chief's home answering machine and sending profane and threatening emails to town residents is inappropriate and reflects poorly on a person holding an elected position in the community."

The board adopted the recommendations in a unanimous vote.

Some ideas for a clean Sandy Beach

TO THE EDITOR:

At first blush, it may seem astounding that Rep. Garnett Bradley and his crew of volunteers filled 27 large bags of trash, plus two barrels of sharp-edged flotsam and jetsam, from Sandy Beach during their recent clean-up day. To put this into perspective, think of it this way. They filled one bag with trash for about every 40 linear feet of the 1,200 foot length of Sandy Beach - numbers which suggest that Sandy Beach is not much better than the proverbial pig-sty.

But if one visits Sandy Beach on any Sunday morning, those figures are not so surprising. That's because the parking lot and beach are strewn with trash which has overflowed and been picked apart from the seagull-friendly trash barrels in the parking lot. The trash, including a lot of Styrofoam and plastic, is either blown by the wind or carried by the gulls into the dune grass areas, which become a de facto landfill.

There is no excuse for Sandy Beach and the parking lot perimeter to be anything other than a pristine stretch of beachfront. It is small, easily manageable, and used primarily by town residents who (in theory at least) take pride in a precious town resource.

To that end, here are a couple of ideas to keep Sandy Beach litter-free:

First and foremost, the town should remove all barrels from the parking lot. This may seem counter-intuitive to the notion of a trash-free beach, but the reality is that the seagull friendly barrels are responsible for creating more trash on the beach after a busy weekend than could possibly be strewn by the worst of litterbugs. Moreover, as was detailed in a front page story in the Globe just a few weeks ago, the trend in recreational areas is to require users "to take out what they bring in." Recreational managers all over the country have noticed that such a policy leaves less litter in parks and beaches than when trash receptacles were in place. This is the policy at most Cape Cod town beaches and their beaches are much cleaner than Sandy Beach.

Second, the fee for the beach sticker should go up by a few bucks. The additional $3,000 or so would be given to the Sandy Beach Assoc. so that it could provide a nice summer job for a few of our young people (or better yet, for some of our senior citizens) who would clean the beach on a daily basis for one to two hours (or less) each day.

Third, the ice cream trucks should be banned from the parking lot. They create enormous amounts of small trash - Popsicle sticks, wrappers, and straws - which permeate the sand. (Also, speaking as a parent of small children who clamor for an ice cream thing on a stick which melts in the sun within 60 seconds and then plops into the sand, resulting in the inevitable crying jag, it would be wonderful if they were not around.) These sorts of vendors are not allowed on many of the beaches on the Cape - people do quite fine without them - and their beaches are much cleaner than ours.

Fourth, something should be done to enforce the no-dogs-on-the-beach rule. Dog owners come from Hull and other towns to let their dogs run and do their "thing" on our beach because the no-dogs rule is enforced strictly on their community's beaches. I have nothing against dogs -we have one - but like the vast majority of residents, I do have something against irresponsible owners who allow their dogs to do their "thing" on the beach without picking it up and who let their dogs run free to bother others.

Independent investigator's report of fact-finding phase

Editor's note: the following is the July 4, 2001 report from the independent investigator, David A. Haley to Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed.

Mr. Pratt is a resident of the Town of Cohasset and is presently a member of the Cohasset Planning Board. Mrs. Pratt is a resident of the Town of Cohasset and the wife of Mr. Pratt. Mr. Haddad is the Town Manager for the Town of Cohasset.

On Tuesday, July 3, 2001, I met with eight individuals including Mr. and Mrs. Pratt, Mr. Haddad and five other people, all of whom work in the Cohasset Town Hall.

In addition to the eight face to face meetings that were conducted, I read several letters from people who live within and outside of Cohasset and three written statements from witnesses. I listened to two voice mail recordings and part of the recording of a Board of Selectmen's meeting. I also reviewed newspaper clips, memoranda and one e-mail message.

Mr. Peter Pratt brought the first complaint in a letter addressed to you dated June 15, 2001. The event which resulted in the complaint occurred on June 14, 2001 in and around Mr. Haddad's office. A brief summary of the complaint follows:

• Mark Haddad exhibited highly inappropriate behavior toward Mr. Pratt during a meeting in his office within the Cohasset Town Hall.

• The behavior was confrontational animated, loud and violent.

• Mr. Pratt feared that Mr. Haddad would possibly engage in a physical assault upon him.

• Mr. Haddad's behavior was abusive, threatening, intimidating and intolerable.

Mrs. Donna Pratt brought the second complaint in a letter addressed to you dated June 27, 2001. The event which resulted in the complaint occurred in October, 2000, nine months ago. A brief summary of the complaint follows:

• Mrs. Pratt worked with members of the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen to rectify the problem of inadequate crossing guard coverage at the Deer Hill/Osgood School crossing on Sohier Street.

• Crossing guard jurisdiction was returned from the schools to the police department.

• After several weeks there was no indication of noticeable changes at the crossing.

• Mrs. Pratt called Mr. Haddad to inquire as to the status of his action to carry out the board's directive.

• During the return call from Mr. Haddad to Mrs. Pratt, Mr. Haddad responded to Mrs. Pratt's questions and statements by shouting at her and stating that he knew what he was doing. He never answered her questions and remained defensive. Mr. Haddad accused her of threatening him when she said that it was his duty to do as the board directed him and by not doing so, he was not carrying out his responsibilities.

• Mr. Haddad screamed so loudly that Mrs. Pratt became very shaken and felt abused and accosted.

• Mrs. Pratt told Mr. Haddad that there was no point in discussing the matter with him.

• Mrs. Pratt reported the incident at the time to Mr. Thomas Callahan who was then the Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen to no avail.

Mark Haddad brought the third complaint in a letter addressed to you dated June 26, 2001. The complaint does not focus on one particular incident but rather, covers a four year period of time. A brief summary of the complaint follows:

• Mr. Pratt has harassed Mr. Haddad and verbally assaulted him on more than one occasion over the course of the last four years.

• Mr. Pratt has stated to Mr. Haddad that he will not be happy until Mr. Haddad is no longer the Town Manager of Cohasset.

• For four years, Mr. Haddad has encountered systematic abuse from Mr. Pratt and his family.

• Mr. Pratt has appeared at Selectmen's meetings and has made false accusations that Mr. Haddad has been negotiating on behalf of private citizens.

• Mr. Pratt has charged Mr. Haddad with incompetence over the handling of recent mitigation negotiations with the M.B.T.A.

• Several months ago, when Mr. Haddad appointed Police Chief Noonan as Acting Town Manager during a short period of absence, Mr. Pratt left a threatening and harassing message on the Selectmen's Office voice mail system.

• Mr. Pratt has taken every opportunity to both publicly and privately embarrass Mr. Haddad.

• Mr. Pratt is attempting to interfere with Mr. Haddad so that he cannot carry out his work assignments.

• On June 14, 2001, after reading a newspaper article about a meeting that Mr. Haddad held on June 13, 2001, Mr. Pratt charged into Mr. Haddad's office at 11:00 AM and demanded to see him.

• Mr. Pratt acted in an extremely aggressive manner.

• Mr. Pratt yelled at Mr. Haddad and Mr. Haddad responded in kind.

• Mr. Pratt came around Mr. Haddad's desk while Mr. Haddad remained seated in his chair.

• Mr. Pratt came into Mr. Haddad's office without an appointment and threatened Mr. Haddad.

• The latest charge by Mr. Pratt against Mr. Haddad is the latest example of Mr. Pratt's systematic abuse of Mr. Haddad.

Findings

• On June 13, 2001, Mr. Haddad conducted a meeting with representatives of Avalon Bay Properties, a development firm. Among those in attendance were several members of the Board of Selectmen and the Chairman of the Planning Board.

• The meeting was appropriate and any concerns or issues that the Planning Board may have had could have been addressed or responded to by the Chairman who was in attendance.

• Mr. Pratt read the Cohasset Mariner account of the June 13, 2001 meeting with Avalon Bay Properties on June 14, 2001. Mr. Pratt was "shocked to see what had been said by the Town Manager, Mr. Haddad, who had nice things to say about the developer."

• Mr. Pratt arrived in Mr. Haddad's office at approximately 11 a.m. on June 14, 2001. Mr. Pratt did not have an appointment.

• Mr. Pratt appeared to be "agitated, angry, red faced, fuming and was pacing" according to three people who observed him in the outer office prior to his going in to meet with Mr. Haddad.

• Mr. Pratt told one of Mr. Haddad's staff members that the need to meet with Mr. Haddad was "urgent."

• Mr. Pratt and Mr. Haddad both acknowledged that the opening statement by Mr. Pratt had to do with the issue of by what authority or under what policy or legal jurisdiction Mr. Haddad had conducted the June 13, 2001 meeting with Avalon Bay Properties.

• Mr. Haddad thought Mr. Pratt's tone was harsh and loud and he responded angrily and loudly as well by saying, "How dare you talk to me that way."

• Witnesses heard loud tones and words coming from both men.

• One witness saw Mr. Pratt standing at the side of Mr. Haddad's desk that is closest to him. Mr. Haddad recalls that Mr. Pratt was within three and a half to four feet of him. Mr. Pratt denies that. The witness could not see Mr. Haddad. Mr. Haddad maintains that he remained in his chair the entire time. Mr. Pratt maintains that Mr. Haddad was standing. Mr. Haddad states that Mr. Pratt was pointing his finger at him and Mr. Pratt states that Mr. Haddad was moving his hands and arms around.

• During the meeting between Mr. Pratt and Mr. Haddad, both men shouted angry words and accusations in the early part of the conversation.

• At the end of the meeting, Mr. Haddad apologized to Mr. Pratt for his part in the episode and extended his hand. Mr. Pratt accepted the apology and shook Mr. Haddad's hand.

• Other than a handshake, there was no physical contact between Mr. Pratt and Mr. Haddad.

• Although their tones were sharp, their voices were raised and angry words were exchanged neither Mr. Pratt nor Mr. Haddad physically threatened to harm the other. Mr. Pratt, however, stated that at one point he felt "physically threatened and moved toward the door." Mr. Haddad did not feel physically threatened by Mr. Pratt.

• Mrs. Pratt reported the incident involving the telephone call between Mr. Haddad and herself at the time that it occurred to the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen. If action was required, the Chairman had both the responsibility and the authority to take action then. Mrs. Pratt is now reporting something in writing to the new Chairman of the Board of Selectmen that was previously reported verbally to the former Chairman.

• Authority for supervision of the crossing guard was returned to the police department within several weeks of the decision and after the town meeting that legally authorized the transfer of both the position and the budgetary dollars to support the position. The transfer had to be accomplished in both a proper and legal manner.

• Mr. Haddad and Mrs. Pratt tell very different stories about what happened during the telephone call in question. Mr. Haddad denies shouting or screaming at Mrs. Pratt. They were the only two parties to the call and therefore their different recollections of the telephone call cannot be reconciled.

• Mr. Pratt and Mr. Haddad acknowledge that Mr. Pratt has said to Mr. Haddad that he would like to see him leave the position of Town Manager of Cohasset.

• Mr. Pratt left a voice mail message on the Selectmen's Office voice mail system at 12:33 a.m. on April 11, 2001 in which he said to Mr. Haddad, "For once, do the right thing and set aside the outrageous decision to appoint Police Chief Noonan as the 'Acting Town Manager,' while he was away. Mr. Haddad normally appoints the Police Chief as Acting Town Manager in order to avoid a conflict of interest for other senior managers within Cohasset town government. Mr. Pratt also stated on the voice mail that he would be in Mr. Haddad's office at 9 a.m. that morning to discuss the matter with him. No appointment had been scheduled and Mr. Haddad was out of the building at 9 a.m.

• Mr. Pratt has told Mr. Haddad that he is unhappy about the termination of a Cohasset Police Officer and unhappy with the handling of a previous complaint by Mr. Pratt and Mrs. Pratt against a Cohasset police sergeant that resulted in a letter of reprimand for the sergeant.

• Mr. Haddad and Mr. Pratt have had a heated exchange over dredging issues in the past.

• Mr. Pratt has told others, including selectmen, that he believes that Mr. Haddad should no longer be allowed to serve as the Cohasset Town Manager. He has said this to Mr. Haddad directly. Mrs. Pratt feels similarly.

• Mr. Pratt left two voice mail messages on the home voice mail system of Police Chief Noonan, one of Mr. Haddad's direct reports, during the period of time when the incident involving the police sergeant was taking place. The second message ended with Mr. Pratt stating, "If you are in town and not calling me back, this will be tough on you, Brian."

• On February 25, 1997, at 1:39 a.m., Mr. Pratt sent a one page e-mail to several individuals that had to do with a dredging issue. The e-mail included profanity and the sentence, "You have gotten me really ...'d off about the protection of bodies of water in this town for which my family has acted as custodians for centuries – literally. When they rename the Aaron River after a member of your family rather than mine, you can come back and ... with the public interest like you did tonight. Until then, don't ever think of pulling this kind of ... again." The e-mail also makes numerous other highly inflammatory remarks about a person, his client, and ends with, "Can you smell corrupt practice, counselor? You should be ashamed of yourself."

• Mr. and Mrs. Pratt have both initiated calls recently to the media to discuss their complaints, responses to their complaints and in the case of Mrs. Pratt, to take exception to an editorial that was written in the Cohasset Mariner on June 21, 2001.

• Mr. Pratt has received or collected copies of complaints from other individuals from within and outside of the Town of Cohasset and has given copies of Mrs. Pratt's and his complaints to some people so that they would know how to write a letter of complaint. Mr. Pratt also prepared a sample letter of complaint that he has shared with several individuals.

• A number of people have contacted Mr. Pratt about their complaints with Mr. Haddad and have mentioned others with similar complaints. Mr. Pratt has reached out to or initiated contact with these others in order to learn more about their complaints and to offer assistance in preparing a written complaint.

• Mr. Haddad believes that the constant harassment and second guessing of his decision making by a person not within his direct chain of command has hampered his ability to perform his duties as Town Manager and recently caused the renegotiation of his employment contract to be put on hold and possibly jeopardized.

Selectmen to look into additional complaints

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Selectmen have formed a subcommittee consisting of board chairman Fred Koed and vice-chairman Michael Sullivan to look into additional complaints filed by town residents against Town Manager Mark Haddad.

On Tuesday, the board decided not to pursue any disciplinary action against Haddad as Planning Board member Peter Pratt had requested after he accused Haddad of being verbally abusive and threatening toward him in an impromptu meeting on June 14 [see related story].

However, during the course of the investigation into the incident, selectmen received seven letters detailing alleged incidents with Haddad.

The complaints, written by Robert Healy of Norfolk Road, Joseph Barrow of Smith Place, Amanda Burgoon and Norma Kravette of Ripley Road, Joseph Rosano of Howe Road, William and Suzanne Ross of Church Street, Roger Hill of Highland Avenue, and Mark Gratta, the owner of a business on Smith Place, allege Haddad either shouted at them or was rude when they went into town hall for resolution of a number of issues including parking tickets, a drainage project, restoration of a county marker and sump pump and tree problems.

Pratt claims he was contacted by those residents once his complaint was made public. He denies seeking them out, but does admit to providing them with copies of his and his wife's complaint letters. Healy's and Gratta's complaints are on the form letter Pratt provided them, however. Healy added a detailed account of his incident.

Selectmen decided against hiring another independent investigator to look into the complaints at this time, a decision that angered those in attendance.

"I don't understand why the rest of us can't receive the same due process Peter and Donna Pratt received, and allow us to speak with the (independent investigator)," Rosano said.

Donna Pratt said the board was unfairly punishing the other town residents by not hiring another independent investigator.

"You are running the risk of making this larger problem into a personal problem between me and my husband and Mr. Haddad," she said. "I think you are about to make a mistake and rob these other people of their rights to complain and are sending a message that the doors of town hall are shut."

Koed said the other complaints don't allege an assault, as Pratt's did, and therefore don't meet the "higher standard" required to immediately call in an independent investigator.

Selectmen Michael Sullivan and Thomas Callahan were also concerned about wasting taxpayer money on further investigations.

The one-day investigation cost the town $1,000.

"I don't think we should be spending any more money," said Sullivan.

A few in attendance argued they pay the taxes and they want further investigation.

"It will cost a few bucks, but we deserve it," said Rosano.

Koed and Sullivan said they will thoroughly look into the complaints and contact each person individually and then make a recommendation to the board at its next meeting.

Haddad was confident that "The truth of these complaints will come out when the selectmen do their investigation."

Anti-train group readies to launch another lawsuit

through its consultant Sverdrup Civil, Inc. and issuing a certificate for the project. Therefore, within the next two weeks AFTA will file its intention to sue over that potential decision. The notice of intent is a step required by state law.

"Depending on what Durand does, we are prepared for litigation," Bewick says. No one from the MBTA could be reached for comment by press time.

But train proponents see AFTA as trying to derail the train at all costs for their own selfish reasons.

"They are trying to prevent an alternative mode of transportation from thousands of people who live on the South Shore," said David Clinton, of the former Back on Track, a pro-train organization that is not currently active. Clinton questions how many AFTA members are abutters to the track and says the delay resulting from lawsuits only adds more cost to the project.

"Where were these people back in 1984 when we started this?" he asked.

This would be the second Greenbush lawsuit launched by AFTA. In the spring AFTA filed suit against the MBTA, the Executive Office for Transportation and Construction and the Massachusetts Highway Department for failure to comply with public records request.

Bewick says although the requested documents are "dribbling in" the lawsuit is still active.

AFTA is not alone in its feeling the FEIR is inadequate. Recently, in a majority decision, the 19-member Citizens Advisory Committee, which was appointed by the Secretary of Environmental Affairs to comment on the study and represents all towns along the rail corridor, told the secretary the FEIR needed more work – something that could bolster AFTA's view that the study is seriously flawed.

"We feel the final EIR is nothing but an advocates' brief for the train in which the alternatives [such as boats and buses] are designed for failure," Bewick says. In other words, Bewick charges the MBTA study on Greenbush was designed to confirm a predetermined outcome with the benefits and costs of the train distorted. Other inadequacies include treatment of wetlands issues, vernal pools and the spotted turtle, an endangered species, Bewick says.

But Jerry Fancher, who has served on the Citizens Advisory Committee since 1985 and signed the minority report, says the FEIR is adequate and that the majority of committee members who said it wasn't – don't want the train no matter what.

Fancher, a train proponent and general manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said the committee [which has changed makeup over the years] initially looked at 22 Greenbush alternatives and none solved the demographic problem of providing adequate transportation for Hull, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield, except the train. He says the only outstanding issues not addressed in the FEIR are what to do with Weymouth Landing and the layover site in Scituate.

"It seems to me this report had more detail and was more in depth than those for the other two lines," Fancher said about the Plymouth and Middleboro lines that started service in 1997. Fancher, who favors a multi-modal solution to the area's transportation problems that includes the train, said the MBTA "went over and above" what was needed in the FEIR including historic preservation criteria.

"I respect anyone's right to bring a lawsuit," Fancher said. "But, if they are not just trying to stop the tram – show me what else they are trying to do.

"If they want more boats, fine – but the answer is not everyone takes the boat."

The environmental impact report is the primary mechanism of the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act, known as MEPA, to collect information and execute mitigation for large projects that involve state agency action, such as Greenbush. The MEPA review occurs before permitting agencies act, to ensure they know the environmental consequences of their actions.

AFTA is also trying to rally more support and donations. To that end, the non-profit corporation has published the second of a series of newspaper inserts. This week, AFTA has paid to have the four-page insert included in the Cohasset Mariner. Next week, a similar insert will appear in The Hingham Journal. In the weeks ahead, AFTA is considering inserts for the Weymouth News and the Scituate Mariner, although those plans are not definitive, Bewick says.

AFTA is appealing to those opposed to the train to get involved.

"Greenbush is not the done deal the MBTA would have us believe it is," the insert states. "In fact, the ill-considered project is about to enter its most vulnerable stage." The insert includes a membership form and suggested donations ranging from zero (for an in-spirit member) to $1,000 for a patron.

Although Bewick did not elaborate on future AFTA lawsuits he did say that the permitting process that lies ahead for the controversial railroad line could be rocky.

"Permits from the Army Corps of Engineers, Conservation Commissions, Department of Environmental Protection and Fish and Wildlife – can all be challenged," he said.

YMCA plans teen center

older teens to the center through music, art, and poetry programs when the center is completed by October 2002.

"We hope to make this a cool place for older teens to go," said YMCA executive director Natalie Sheard. "This is a new approach for us. There are a lot of kids who don't play sports. The arts and humanities are just as important and opportunities must be provided for that."

Sheard said Y officials are hoping to attract about 80 kids to the center on a weekend night.

The effort to encourage more mature teen attendance at Y events has caught the attention of Mount Blue co-owner Patrick Bowe. The Norwell restaurant will be hosting its popular annual summer fundraising gathering on July 30 with proceeds going to help fund the Y Knot café teen center. Last year's Mt. Blue party benefited the North and South Rivers Watershed Association.

Bowe said the restaurant became interested with supporting the Y Knot after it noticed a coffeehouse held for teens at the nearby Mug Shop. Several Mt. Blue employees participated with the coffee house. "There was a number of kids playing music there and it was well attended by the kids," added Bowe. "It seemed like a good idea to further."

Bowe and his wife Jane later met with Y officials upon learning of their plans for a teen center to be included in the Y's expansion plan. "My wife and I looked over the plans and keyed in on the teen center and that led to the idea of a coffee house," said Bowe.

Community Newspaper Company is also helping to sponsor the fundraising events and efforts to increase public awareness about the Y Knot teen center.

Y officials are planning an event just for teens on Saturday, July 28, in concert with the Mount Blue gala. An outdoor music festival will be held at the Mill Pond Y noon to 6 p.m. The event will feature the local bands "No Regret, "Six of Fire," "No Luck at All," "Sunset is a Battle.", "Last Ride," and Jay Jansen.

Tickets for the festival are available for $10 and can be purchased at the Y. Proceeds from the music festival will be used to help build the teen center.

The Y currently has a teen program on Friday night during the school year. The program is mostly sports orientated and generally attracts youngsters between ages 12-15 although the cutoff age is 18. Older teens generally don't participate in the Friday evening event because of age level differences between the youngsters. "The kids can come in here and play basketball, tennis or play video games," said Sheard. "We sometimes provide them with pizza, soda, and videos. The program also has a monthly dance which sometimes attracts up to 150 youngsters.

Sheard said Y officials hope to reach older teens by having local bands perform at the center. "If some of the kids belong to a band they will be welcome to perform," added Sheard.

Y officials will also enlist the help of older teens with planning events. "We will give kids the opportunity to plan events through a committee," said Sheard. "If they want to bring a band in they can do so."

Older teens will also be able to showcase videos they've made with their friends along with art work and poetry. "This will provide an opportunity for kids who don't have access to this type of venue," added Sheard. "But we won't be limited to these type of things."

Sheard said the activities will be largely left up to the youths to plan. "We will see what the response is and what the kids want," added Sheard.

Y attempts to reach older kids with music and various art programs have had considerable success at a Chicago Y's teen center. "They had to add a new theatre to host it," added Sheard.

Additional information on the Y's teen program can be made by calling 781-829-8585. Tickets for the Mount Blue event can be purchased for $50 each in advance by calling the restaurant at 781-659-0050. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Research business closure to have no effect on Lobster Lab

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The closure of Beautymedicines, Inc., the genomics research lab formerly known as Pavonis, Inc. will have no impact on the proposed Lobster Lab marine research facility, says owner Kevin Ulmer, who is also the prime mover behind the Lobster Lab project.

The Lobster Lab is a proposed educational marine research lab for area students located in the house on the Hagerty property off Parker Avenue.

Beautymedicines, Inc., which was located off Route 3A, recently closed its doors after its investors decided to pull its funding in January, said Ulmer. The research lab focused on mapping the genetic data relative to cosmetic traits.

The lab also had a community tie to it.

"It was a place that was able to have some of the top Advanced Placement biology students come and do some internships, but we've lost that for the moment," Ulmer said.

He added that the closure should have no impact on his controversial Lobster Lab proposal. Since agreeing to a $1-per-year lease with the town three years ago, Ulmer has been criticized for not showing more progress in renovating the dilapidated house.

In March, selectmen told Ulmer he had until Oct. 1 to raise $326,000 and begin construction, or face eviction.

Ulmer said the project, which will cost near $750,000 to complete, has received full approval from all town boards, and will begin construction at the end of boating season in September.

Film recalls heyday of the Hingham Shipyard

their memories of working in Hingham at one of the largest shipbuilding operations in the country.

Lifelong Hingham resident Stanley Hersey, whose family settled in town in 1635, remembers those times well.

He recalls the days when the land the shipyard now occupies served as a bayside airport, polo field and dude ranch.

Hersey, who appears in the film, worked at the shipyard on the 3:30-11:30 p.m. swing shift as a ship fitter's helper in the steel mill while attending Hingham High School.

"I knew from the time I was seven- or eight-years-old there was going to be a war, because Japan was (in the midst of conflict) and Hitler came into power," he said.

The young Hersey and others lived in fear of the impending war, yet when the time came for them to do their part, "everyone joined together in the spirit of 'We've got to save the world,'" according to Hersey.

"We build those Destroyer Escorts, and to the best of my knowledge, not one sunk or was damaged due to bad workmanship," Hersey said. "It was like a big family – a feeling I don't think will ever be realized again in America. Freedom was at stake and everyone gave their all."

Hersey later went on to a career with the Navy.

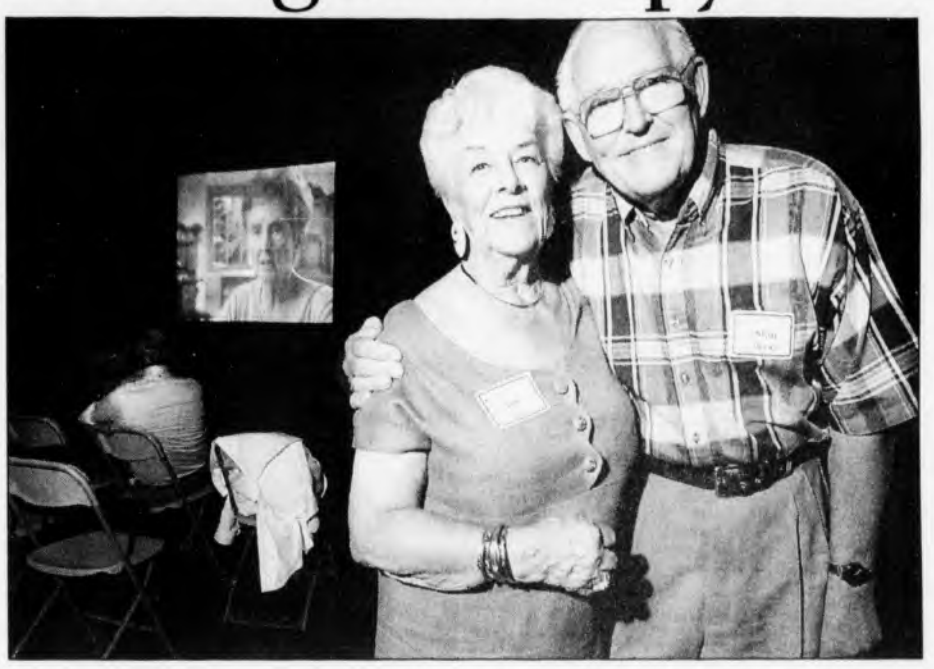
"When I was stationed in France in 1944 at the age of 18, one of the ships we'd built at Hingham Shipyard supplied us with electricity," he said.

Ian Menzies sits with his wife, Barbara, whom he met while serving in the British Royal Navy. At the time, Menzies was in Hingham to transport an LST to Europe.

The audience sat, captivated, throughout the touching documentary.

Peg Charlton, a member of the Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation advisory committee – who also appears in the film – had a satisfied feeling as she observed the crowd of interested spectators.

"The film has such historical value for the younger generations," she said. "I was happy to put my time into such a worthwhile endeavor."



Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, also watched the film.

Hedlund's grandfather, former Hingham resident Joseph Sarni, worked at the shipyard as a painter.

The senator looks forward to showing the documentary to his grandfather, who was unable to attend the event.

"I grew up adjacent to the shipyard, and even though the planned changes represent progress, I'm a bit melancholy, because we're losing a link to the past," he said. "I'm glad, though, that the video preserves the shipyard's history."

Bradley attended the viewing as a way to say thank-you to the "people who worked here and saved our country. Some of the workers were so young, yet they had an awesome responsibility."

STAFF PHOTOS/ALAN CHAPMAN

Ann Collins and Stan Hersey, who appears in the film and worked at the shipyard on the 3:30-11:30 p.m. swing shift as a ship fitter's helper in the steel mill while attending Hingham High School, share some memories during the documentary's premier.

Former Hingham resident and well-known radio personality Jess Cain, who narrated the documentary, was glad of an opportunity to return to town for the viewing.

When he was first asked to do the voiceover, Cain wasn't familiar with the shipyard's fascinating history.

"The only thing I knew about the shipyard until that time related to my own sailboat and getting it repaired," Cain said with a laugh. "It was a great thrill to learn about what went on there."

Copies of the video are available at the front desk of the marina store located by Hingham Bay Club for the appropriate sum of $19.42, payable by check to Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation. For further information, call 781-449-5600, ext. 4.

More than 100 of the videos were sold at the Tuesday viewing of the film.

Million-dollar homes are no longer unusual in town

— it shows no sign of abating in town.

But Ford cautions that sellers with the most expensive homes need a little patience.

"It's all a matter of supply and demand," she says. "A house priced in the $1 million range, could take 10 to 12 months to sell. While one in the $400,000-$500,000 range, that is priced correctly, would expect to sell in three months."

Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton, which has been in town for more than 30 years, said the quantity of million-dollar-priced homes in town still amazes him.

"Five years ago if someone said our [Dean and Hamilton's] average sale last year would have been $1 million" we'd have said they were crazy, Hamilton says. And even with the million-dollar market cooling somewhat in his view, he points out that there are still four houses currently for sale in town with asking prices of $1.5 million or more.

Hamilton says many first-time homebuyers are grabbing the "mid-range" homes in town, priced between $500,000 and $1 million. Some of them are couples that have looked at prices in Boston and decide to come to Cohasset.

"$700,000 on Beacon Hill gets you a hovel in a back alley," he says. "Where here it gets you a lovely home on Sohier or Pond street with a gorgeous yard.

"It's very tempting for a couple willing to put up with the commute."

Hamilton says Cohasset offers small-town charm coupled with spectacular beauty and good schools — making the combinations irresistible for those who can afford to live here.

"Cohasset is still very reasonable when compared with Weston and Wellesley," he says. "You'd pay 20-30 percent less for the same house here. So many who look in those communities, see Cohasset and say, 'Why not?'"

Drinkwater, who is president-elect of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors and former president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, agrees there is no place quite like Cohasset.

"Living in Cohasset is like having a vacation every day of your life," he says. "It has a small-town feeling with beautiful architecture and the sense of water all around — it is a very relaxing way to live."

Stars of the Week

Jesse Cole

The hero on both sides of the lines in Friday night's huge 3-1 victory over Canton that helped push the Post 118 Cohasset-Scituate Legion team in to fifth place in District 8, with four games remaining. The top five teams in the 10 team district qualify for the playoffs. Cole went the distance on the mound— striking out nine and scattering four hits and two walks while throwing approximately 140 pitches—and brought home a big insurance run in the top of the 10th with a single.

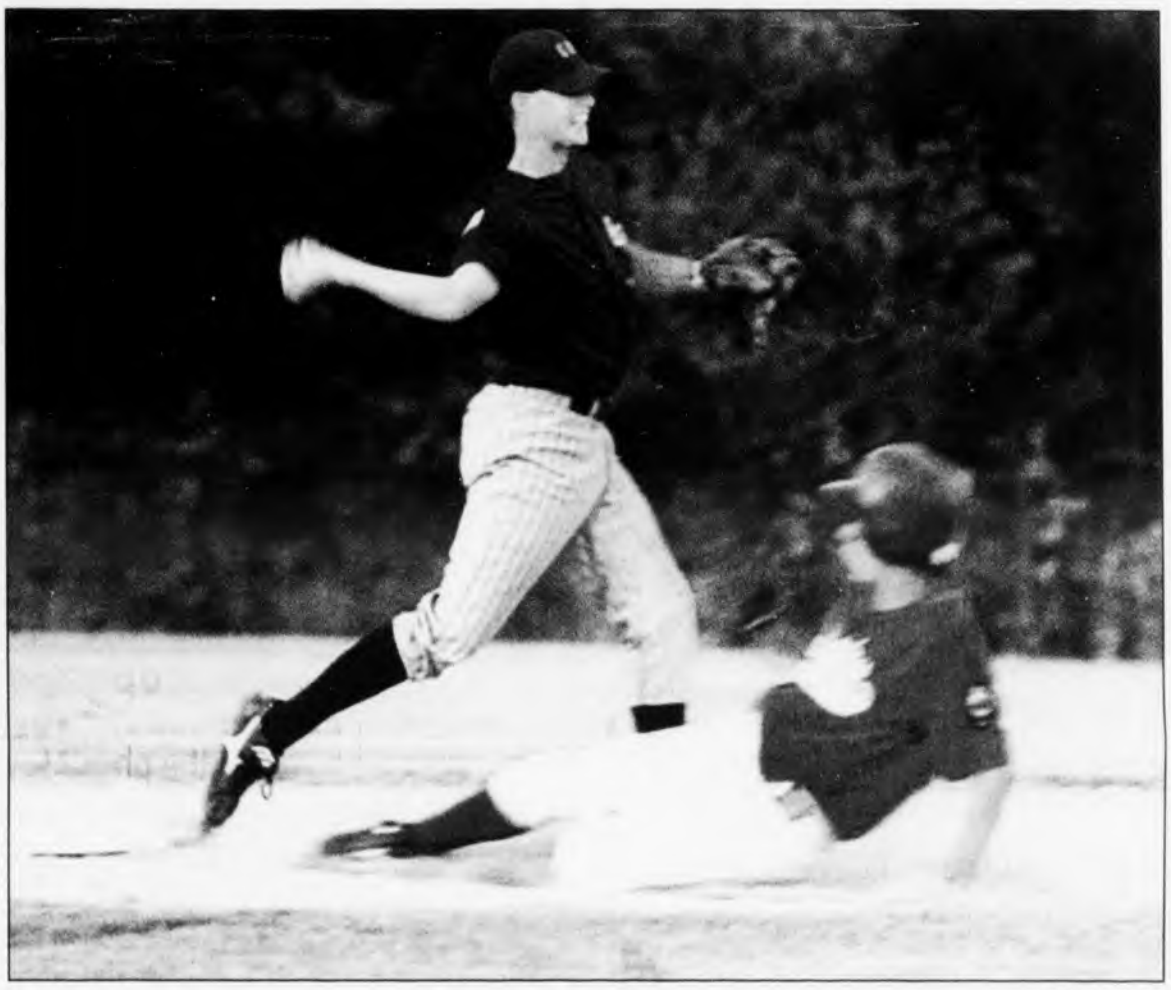
Post 118 clings to playoff hopes

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Splitting its last four games to pull to a record of 6-9-1, the Cohasset-Scituate Post 118 Legion baseball team now sits in the fifth and final playoff spot.

Last Sunday, the team had a thrilling 2-1 win in Quincy against Morrisette. After a scratch run put the home team up 1-0 in the bottom of the first, the visitors tied it up when Thayer Academy junior Brian Signorelli doubled home Cohasset senior-to-be Tim Straughn with one out in the second.

The score remained knotted up at one apiece until the seventh inning, when Scituate's Mike Gulinello hit a one out double, stole third, and came home on a passed ball.



BC High hurler Tom Fitzgerald, who will be entering his senior year at B.C. High in the fall, pitched a great game to out-duel the opposing ace, Keith Dougherty, a highly regarded pitcher in the area.

Fitzgerald pitched a complete game, compiling seven strikeouts while giving up only four hits.

Cohasset's other win within the stretch of four road games in four nights was an even bigger thriller, a 3-1 10-inning victory over Canton on Friday.

Upcoming Scituate High senior Jesse Cole was the hero of this white nails affair, pitching all 10

THE BIGGER PICTURE

Field hockey, boys soccer, football, co-ed swimming, boys basketball—and no, the list is not even half done.

Girls gymnastics, boys track, boys lacrosse, girls tennis, boys tennis, girls lacrosse, golf. That's right: 12.

Twelve teams. And no, this is not a list of all the sports Cohasset offers during the course of its school year. This is a list of the playoff teams the Skippers produced in the 2000-2001 season with .500 or better records.

Really makes you wonder, doesn't it? Cohasset High School has fewer total students than some of its competitors have freshmen, and yet Cohasset High School put out twelve winning teams this past school year alone.

You want more? You've got more: this year, we saw two South Shore League Champions (girls tennis and boys track) and two state sectional semi-finalists (girls tennis and boys soccer). We even had the opportunity to witness a state finalist team (boys lacrosse). Am I the only one blown away by this?

An athletic program of this depth and achievement would appear to rely on an enrollment of several thousand students. We have a shade more than 300.

We Skippers, all 300 or so of us, spent the fall following the Lady Field Hockey Skippers with 11 starting seniors chase the juggernaut Hanover team for a South Shore League crown, and the boys soccer team pull off upset after upset to earn a banner for the Sullivan Gym.

We spent the winter watching 10th year coach, and first year athletic director, Ron Ford lead a young varsity basketball team to a 14-8 record, including five of the most thrilling wins Cohasset has seen in a long time.

And the spring? We didn't even know who to follow. There were so many successful teams, including, of course, this reporter's tennis team.

The boys' track team was the talk of the division, going undefeated and winning the SSL for the first time in over two decades.

The girls tennis team bulldozed its way to a 13-2 record, losing only to the powerful Norwell squad and the number one ranked Bourne.

Girls lacrosse made the playoffs for the first time in the program's history, and boys tennis made it for the first time in many years.

The golf team came from 0-10 in 2000 to a more than respectable 5-5-1this year, two of those loses coming to State Div. 2 champion Norwell.

And who can forget the boys lacrosse team? This team unseated the number two and number three seeds in the Div. 2 tournament on its way to the state championship showdown with Hingham.

Three hundred students, and 38 of them were named to an All-Star team this year. My statistician informs me that there simply has to be some kind of percentage record there.

One gets to wondering what sets Cohasset apart? Some, for starters, will say what we lack in depth, we compensate for by outworking everyone else.

As coach Ford put it in one of our brick-laden Saturday night practices, "There is no one else in this league working as hard as you guys are."

Or perhaps it is luck that brought all these remarkable athletes to our school at the same time. Either way, I felt privileged to be a part of this special year as both a reporter, and as a varsity competitor.

Okay fine, our school teams' nickname could use a little work, but I, for one, am proud to consider myself a Skipper.

Astros are champs!

Correction

It was mistakenly reported in last week's Mariner that the Astros were runner-ups in the Cohasset Little League softball division this year. In fact, the Astros beat the regular season champion Diamondbacks to capture the league crown.

Williamsport team wins marathon 11 inning thriller

Cohasset 2, Stoughton American 0

Cohasset Little League's All-Stars stayed alive Monday in the Massachusetts District 8 Tournament, winning an extra inning thriller Sunday over Stoughton American, 2-0, on an 11th inning home run by Jared Kinch. In the top of the 11th, Peter Oswald legged out an infield singled and scored ahead of the Kinch blast.

Cohasset Sailing Club races to new marks

If there's a spirit of rejuvenation noticeable around the Cohasset Sailing Club these days, it can be attributed to the infusion of new blood into its racing programs.

In its 41st year of operation, the club has hired several outstanding young sailors to teach team racing skills to its adolescent participants. Leading the group of racing specialists this year are Patrick Rynne and Erin Clancy hired by Vice Commodore Ann Musto.

All-Scholastic boys Track and Field Team

Krupczak, Maitland, 4x100 relay team named among area's elite.

Though the Cohasset boys were certainly well represented on this All-Scholastic Team—with two individuals and one relay squad being honored— this number came very close to being increased.

The 18-member Cohasset Boys track team went unbeaten in meet competition this season, capturing the South Shore League crown for the first time in 25 years—in so doing beating out several teams two and three times the size. The two individuals who we selected—Brian Krupczak and Peter Maitland—were locks for this team from the get go, and a handful of other Skippers received consideration. The most difficult omission by far was junior captain Tim Baird, who regularly racked up points for the Cohasset boys in three or more events every meet.

As is always the case with these kinds of things, however, difficult choices had to be made.

Brian Krupczak - Senior (Capt.) 200 meter - Cohasset

Brian Krupczak

Two time State Class D 200-meter champion…Krupczak defended his state crown in May despite a severely pulled leg muscle with a time of 23.02…was unable to compete at the All-State meet the following weekend because of the injury…three-time South Shore League All-Star and seven time champion: three times in the 200, twice with the 4x100 relay team and once each in the long jump and triple jump…undefeated in the 200 in SSL competition for the last three years…best times of 10.9 seconds in the 100-meter and 22.4 in the 200…also a standout in the long jump, with a personal best of 20-feet-5-inches…South Shore League All-Star…captain and 1,000 yard rusher for the Cohasset High football team this fall…member of the National Honor Society…Brian will attend William and Lee University, where he's leaning towards studying pre-law and intends to run track…Cohasset track coach Al LaFontain: "Brian showed what a phenomenal competitor he is at the class meet. He had worked so hard these last six years, you just know it would have killed him not to be able to go, and he responded like a true champ, just like I thought he would."

Peter Maitland - Junior (Capt.) Javelin/High Jump - Cohasset

Peter Maitland

Became the first Cohasset High trackster to advance to the New England Track and Field Championships in five years after he finished fifth in the javelin at the All-State championships with a throw of 178-feet-6- inches…Finished a very solid 17th at the New England's… took third in the Class D State Championships… A South Shore League All-Star…Also qualified for the State's in the high jump with his personal best of 5-feet-10…also a big scorer for Cohasset in the 800 meter (a best time of 2:10) and the 4x400 relay (helped with a team best 3:50)….Also played varsity soccer and basketball for Cohasset High…Has been named a captain of the soccer team next fall…Cohasset High track Coach Al LaFountain: "Peter is an extremely driven athlete. Cohasset swimmers open season with big splash

Swim team starts with wins over Hanover and Duxbury

Cohasset swim team got the 2001 season off to a flying start with a resounding victory over Hanover YMCA on Friday afternoon. An imposing Cohasset squad dominated event after event throughout the meet, ending with a 260 point differential. An impressive beginning to what looks like being another highly successful year.

The 8 and under boys set the pace in the first heat of the afternoon, taking first, second and third places in the 100 yards medley relay (1st: Lynner; Buckley; Carrier; Durkin, T.; 2nd: Durkin, T.; Murphy; Campbell; Whitney; 3rd: Murphy; Faber; Mahoney; Carpenter). A winning pattern had been established and the home team went to work to close out Hanover, and take first place, at every age level, across the medley event (girls, 8 and under: 1st: Karski; Serakas; Musto; Berbe; 2nd: Kucinski; Axelson; Fontaine; Donohue; 4th: Michalowski; Kelly; Murphy; Farren; boys, 10 and under: 1st: Connors; Porter; Doonan; Ulmer; 3rd: Queenan; Daly; Hurley; Harper; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Lehr, S.; Saltonstall; Meehan; Mahoney, C.; 2nd: Costa; Sullivan; Meikleham; Mahoney, M.; 4th: Coggins; Teague; Baumgarten; Regan; boys, 12 and under: 1st: Conway; Musto; Shipp; Zappolo; 2nd: Hunt; Daly; Dickinson; Doonan; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Hernan; Durkin; Englander; Previte; 3rd: Campbell; Fortin; Swain; Tehranian; 6th: Foley; Coggins; Plante; Teague; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Hernan; Roach; Berg; Tehranian; girls, 17 and under: 1st: Regan; Faber; Jerome; Musto; 2nd: Larson; Hurley; Day; Foley; 3rd: Lehr; Weston; Orsini; Ogrodnik). With the medley relays completed, Cohasset had established an early lead and the swimmers were warming up for their individual races.

The 100 yard individual medleys began well with first, second and third place positions for the under twelve boys (1st: Conway, C.; 2nd: Dickinson, R.; 3rd: Doonan, P.). The girls also placed first, but dropped behind the boys with a fifth place finish (1st: Durkin, L.; 5th: Tehranian, R.). Parker Berg's solo swim contributed another first in the boys 14 and under race, and the 14 and under girls lent their support with a first, third and fifth in their event (1st: Lehr, B.; 3rd: Larson, L.; 5th: Musto, L.). The freestyle races ended with a win for the seventeen and under boys (1st: Roach, J.) and a convincing first, second and third for the girls (1st: Iacobucci, G.; 2nd: Orsini, M.; 3rd: Regan, D.). Cohasset had extended their lead and were now looking at a more than sixty point differential.

The 25 yard freestyle races brought the focus back to the younger team members, and once again they did not disappoint. The eight and under boys secured a comfortable win (1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Durkin, T.; 4th: Carpenter, C.), and the girls followed with third, fourth and fifth place finishes (3rd: Donohue, M.; 4th: Berbe, M.; 5th: Axelson, D.). The ten and under boys pulled back again with first, second and fourth places (1st: Ulmer, W.; 2nd: Porter, L.; 4th: Queenan, C.) while the girls ended with a flourish, sweeping the board with first, second and third places (1st: Lehr, S.; 2nd: Lehr, T.; 3rd: Mahoney, C.).

The 50 yard freestyle events began confidently. The ten and under boys swept the board with first, second and third places (1st: Doonan, B.; 2nd: Daly, R.; 3rd: Ofsthun) and the girls followed with first, third and fourth (1st: Meehan, s.; 3rd: Meikleham, A.; 4th: Saltonstall, C.). The pattern continued with first second and third places for the twelve and under boys (1st: Zappolo, N.; 2nd: Hunt A.; 3rd: Daly, B.), the fourteen and under boys (1st: Roach, K.; 2nd: Musto, C.; 3rd: Faber, C.) and the seventeen and under boys and girls (boys: 1st: Tehranian, K.; 2nd: Flynn, C.; 3rd: Roach, J.; girls: 1st: Jerome, E.; 2nd: Regan, D.; 3rd: Foley, T.). The twelve and under girls finished in first, third and fourth places (1st: Englander, E., 3rd: Previte, M.; 4th: Campbell, A.) and the fourteen and under girls took third, fourth and fifth places (3rd: Sida, C.; 4th: Muir, C.; 5th: Lemaire, M.). The home team was now ahead by more than 100 points.

The eight and under boys and girls once again did their part with first, second and third place finishes in the 25 yard butterfly (boys: 1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Shipp, M.; 3rd: Durkin, T.; girls: 1st: Musto, E.; 2nd: Murphy, O.; 3rd: Fontaine, E.). The ten and under boys again secured a win in their race (1st: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Harper, W.; 5th: Hurley, P.), and the girls finished second, third and fourth (2nd: Meehan, S.; 3rd: Ryan, K.; 4th: Lehr, T.). At the twelve and under level, although the boys finished first (1st: Conway, C.; 3rd: Dickinson, R.; 4th: Doonan, P.), the girls just missed winning, finishing second, third and fifth (2nd: Englander, E.; 3rd: Fortin, S.; 5th: Campbell, A.). Parker Berg once again swam solo to claim first place for the fourteen and under group, while the fourteen and under girls took third, fourth and fifth places (3rd: Ogrodnik, M.; 4th: Faber, A.; 5th: Lieb-Lappen, M.). The butterfly ended with an uncontested first and second for the seventeen and under boys (1st: Flynn, C.; 2nd: Blackburn, C.) and a win for the girls (1st: Iacobucci, G.; 2nd: Jerome, E.; 4th: McCarthy, K.R.). The butterfly is a difficult event, but despite a less even performance, the team had managed to push ahead another forty points.

As the afternoon progressed a gloomy sky continued to predict rain, but both teams carried on undaunted. The breaststroke events were up next. The youngest members of the team started out well again, with first places in both the girls and boys eight and under races (boys: 1st: Buckley, T.; 2nd: Campbell, B.; 3rd: Shipp, M.; girls: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 3rd: Karski, E.; 5th: Murphy, O.). The ten and under's followed suit, in their 50 yard races, with first and fourth positions for the boys, and first second and third for the girls (boys: 1st: Porter, L.; 4th: Connors, R.; girls: 1st: Lehr, S.; 2nd: Saltonstall, O.; 3rd: Sullivan, O.). The twelve and under boys were right behind their younger teammates with first, second and third place finishes (1st: Zappolo, N.; 2nd: Daly, B.; 3rd: Musto, C.), while the girls secured first and third places (1st: Durkin, L.; 3rd: Fortin, S.). The winning streak continued with a first place in the boys fourteen and under and an impressive first, second and third for the girls (boys: 1st: Roach, K.; girls: 1st: Shea, E.; 2nd: Daley, M.; 3rd: Hurley, C.). The seventeen and under's kept up the effort, with a first and second for the boys (1st: Roach, J.; 2nd: Blackburn, C.) and a second, third and fifth for the girls (2nd: Hurley, K.; 3rd: Foley, T.; 5th: Lieb-Lappen, M.). With two more events to go, Cohasset had built a lead of 186 points.

The backstroke began with a good effort from the eight and under boys and girls (boys: 2nd: Buckley, T.; 3rd: Murphy, J.; 4th: Lynner, W.; girls: 1st: Karski, E.; 2nd: Musto, E.; 3rd: Kucinski, K.) and continued with successes in the ten and under events (boys: 2nd: Connors, R.; 3rd: Queenan, C.; 4th: Ulmer, W.; girls: 1st: Costa, A.; 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.). The success continued in the fifty yard races with a win for the twelve and under boys and girls (boys: 1st: Hunt, A.; 2nd: Conway, C.; 3rd: Shipp, A.; girls: 1st: Hernan, E.; 3rd: Teague, M.; 6th: Foley, A.) and the 14 and under boys (1st: Hernan, A.; 2nd: Berg, P.). The fourteen and under girls missed the win (3rd: Weston, E.; 4th: Harrington, K.; 6th: McCarthy, K.R.), but both the seventeen and under girls and boys finished the event in first place (boys: 1st: Tehranian, K.; 2nd: Flynn, C.; girls: 1st: Orsini, M.; 2nd: Hurley, K.; 3rd: Shea, E.). Going into the final event of the meet Cohasset had 364 points to Hanover's 139.

In both individual and relay events the youngest members of the team turned in great performances. The 100 yards free relay was no exception. The eight and under boys finished in first, second and third positions, and the girls made it to first, third and fourth places (boys: 1st: Carrier, Durkin, J., Buckley, T.,Durkin, T.; 2nd: Murphy, J., Durkin, J., Campbell, Shipp; 3rd: Mahoney, Murphy, Carpenter, Whitney; girls: 1st: Fontaine, Murphy, Musto, Karski; 3rd: Michalouski, Donohue, Berbe, Kucinski; 4th: Avelson, Farren, Seriakos, Kelly). The ten and under boys finished in first and fourth position (1st: Ulmer, Hurley, Porter, Doonan; 4th: Ofsthun, McCormack, Plante, Harper) and the girls took first, second and third places (1st: Lehr, S., Mahoney, C., Lehr, T., Meehan, S.; 2nd: Zappolo, Ryan, Saltonstall, Meikleham; 3rd: Libby, Mahoney, M., Costa, McCarthy). Success continued with the twelve and under boys who finished in first, second and fourth position (1st: Doonan, Daly, Dickinson, Hunt; 2nd: Musto, Shipp, McCarthy, Zappolo; 4th: Drybanski, DeGiacomo, Kelly, Porter). And the girls made a sizable contribution with first, third and fifth position finishes (1st: Durkin, Previte, Englander, Hernan; 3rd: Fortin, McCarthy, Teague, Daly; 5th: Tehraman, Hurley, Regan, Campbell). The free relay event ended with the seventeen and under boys and girls sealing the victory with an uncontested first place finish for the boys (1st: Tehranian, Roach, K, Hernan, Flynn) and first, second and third places for the girls (1st: Regan, Lehr, Jerome, Daley; 2nd: Orsini, Foley, Musto, Larson; 3rd: Faber, Weston, Hurley, Ogrodnik). The final score was Cohasset 428, Hanover, 167.

Congratulations to Cohasset swim team on a comprehensive victory in the first meet of the season. Well done to Alison Hughes and her coaching team, and to the volunteers and committee members who put the show on the road. We all look forward to another successful season at Cohasset Swim Center.

Cohasset Swim Team 432, Duxbury Aqua Dux 132

It was another successful outing for Cohasset Swim Team in last Friday's meet against Duxbury's Aqua Dux. In a repetition of last season's opener against the smaller Duxbury team, Cohasset took an early lead and ended the afternoon 300 points ahead of the visitors.

The meet began with the 100-yard medley relays, and the Cohasset swimmers went straight to work to secure first place at every age level. The eight and under boys and girls started well, finishing in first, second and third positions (boys: 1st: Lynner; Buckley; Carrier; Durkin; 2nd: Durkin, T.; Murphy, J.; Shipp; Whitney; 3rd: Murphy, C.; Faber, J.; Mahoney, Culhane; girls: 1st: Karski; Seriakas; Musto; Michalowski; 2nd: Kucinski, Kelly, Fontaine; Donohue; 3rd: Berbe; Farren, A.; Murphy, Farren, N.) Their ten and under team mates were close behind with first and second place finishes for the boys (1st: Steyenson; Porter; Doonan; Ulmer; 2nd: Queenan, Ofsthun; Harper; Daly), and first, third and fourth places for the girls (1st: Mahoney, M.; Lehr, S.; Meehan, S; Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Costa; Teague, K.; Lehr, T.; Asnault, A.; 4th: Jennings; Sullivan; Dickinson; Zappolo). The 100-yard relays ended with a first, second and third from the twelve and under boys (1st: Conway; Musto; Dickinson; Zappolo; 2nd: Cunningham; Daly; Shipp; Doonan; 3rd: Muir; Faber; Kuppens; De Giacomo), and a confident first and second from the girls (1st: Hernan; Durkin; Garber; Englander; 2nd: Sacks; Previte; Swain; Teague). With the first series of relays complete, Cohasset had picked up 48 points, to Duxbury's 8. The 17 and under 200 yard relays added to the lead, with the boys finishing in first and second place and the girls taking first, second and third (boys: 1st: Hernan; Bilton; Flynn; Tehranian; 2nd: Faber; Roach, K.; Roach; Blackburn; girls: 1st: Daley; Jacobucci; Orsini; Musto; 2nd: Regan; Faber; O'Brien; Lehr; 3rd: Hurley, K.; Weston; Ogrodnik; Hurley).

The individual races began with the 100-yard medleys and Cohasset continued to dominate the visitors. Duxbury was unable to field swimmers in three of the six races, but did pull off an impressive win against the 17 and under boys, and finished in second place against the 12 and under boys. Cohasset placed first, second and third in the remaining medleys, adding a further 34 points to the scoreboard (boys: 1st: Conway, C.; 3rd: Doonan, P.; 4th: Cunningham, C.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Durkin, L.; 2nd: Englander, E.; 3rd: Previte, M.; boys, 14 and under: no swim; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Lehr, R.; 2nd: Musto, L.; 3rd: Faber, A.; boys, 17 and under: 2nd: Bilton, B.; 3rd: Tehranian, K.; 4th: Roach, J.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: O'Brien, K.; 2nd: Orsini, M.; 3rd: Hurley, K.).

The youngest members of the team launched the 25-yard freestyle event with their now predictable enthusiasm and secured first, second and third places in each of their races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: Durkin, T.; 2nd: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Durkin, J.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Kucinski, K.; 3rd: Donohue, M.). The ten and under boys did the same (1st: Porter, L; 2nd: Ulmer, W.; 3rd: Daly, R.), and the girls just missed the win, and finished in second, third and fourth places (girls, 10 and under: 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Lehr, S.; 4th: O'Sullivan, O.).

In the 50-yard freestyle event, the ten and under girls matched their younger team mates with confident first, second and third place finishes and the boys got a win, missed second place, but took third and fourth (girls, 10 and under; 1st: Meehan, S.; 2nd: Lehr, T.; 3rd: Mahoney, C.; boys, 10 and under: 1st: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Hurley, P.; 4th: Stevenson, G.). At the twelve and under level the boys again missed the win, but finished second, third and fourth, while the girls took first, fourth and fifth place positions (boys: 2nd: Zappolo, N.; 3rd: Conway, C.; 4th: Doonan, P.; girls: 1st: Hernan, E.; 4th: Sacks, M; 5th: Teague, M.). Cohasset won the remaining 50-yard freestyle races, pushing their lead from 77 points to 129 (boys, 14 and under: 1st: Hernan, A.; 3rd: Roach, K.; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Daley, M.; 2nd: Ogrodnik, M.; 3rd: Sida, C.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Tehranian, K.; 3rd: Faber, S.; 4th: Roach, J.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: O'Brien, D.; 2nd: Regan, D.; 5th: Harrington, B.).

The 25-yard butterfly is a tough event, especially for younger swimmers, but the eight and under boys kicked off the races with first, second and third place finishes (1st: Shipp, M.; 2nd: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Durkin, T.). The eight and under girls didn't quite get the win, but secured second, third and fifth positions (2nd: Musto, E.; 3rd: Fontaine, E.; 5th: Murphy, O.). Cohasset won a further three out of the next four 25-yard butterflies (boys, 10 and under: 1st: Doonan, B.; 2nd: Harper, W.; 3rd: Ulmer, W.; girls, 10 and under: 2nd: Meehan, S.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.; 4th: Lehr, T.; boys, 12 and under: 1st: Dickinson, R.; 3rd: Daly, B.; 4th: Shipp, A.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Garber, C.; 2nd: Swain, K.; 3rd: Englander, E.), and three out of the next four 50-yard butterflies (boys, 14 and under: 1st: Berg, P.; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Daley, M.; 2nd: Weston, E.; 3rd: Harrington, B.; boys, 17 and under: 2nd: Flynn, C.; 3rd: Blackburn, C.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: Orsini, M.; 2nd: Ogrodnik, M.; 3rd: Harrington, K.). The home team was now ahead by 172 points.

In the 25-yard breaststroke Cohasset took first place in both the eight and under and ten and under races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: Buckley, T.; 2nd: Shipp, M.; 3rd: Durkin, J.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 2nd: Karski, E.; 4th: Murphy, O.; boys, 10 and under: 1st: Porter, L.; 3rd: Ofsthun, C.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Lehr, S.; 3rd: Sullivan, O.) Success continued in the 50-yard backstroke, with wins for Cohasset in five of the six races, although some were uncontested (boys, 12 and under: 2nd: Zappolo, N.; 3rd: Musto, C.; 4th: Daly, B.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Durkin, L.; 3rd: Fortin, S.; 5th: Previte, M.; boys, 14 and under: 1st: Hernan, A.; 2nd: Roach, K.; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Faber, A.; 2nd: Sida, C.; 3rd: Muir; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Faber, A.; 3rd: Roach, J.; 4th: Blackburn, C.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: Jacobucci ; 2nd: Hurley, K.; 5th: Hurley, C.).

The backstroke events were next and both the eight and under boys and girls started well with first place finishes (boys, 25 yard backstroke: 1st: Lynner, W.; 2nd: Murphy, J.; 4th: Buckley, T.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Karski, E.; 3rd: Musto, E.; 5th: Kucinski, K.). The ten and under boys also finished in first place (1st: Hurley, P.; 3rd: Stevenson, G.; 4th: Queenan, C.) and the girls matched them with first, third and sixth place finishes (1st: Costa, A.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.; 6th: Jennings, M.). In the first of the 50-yard events, the 12 and under boys were forced back into third, fourth and fifth places in their race, but the girls race went uncontested, leaving Cohasset with first, second and third positions (boys: 3rd: Dickinson, R.; 4th: Muir, K; 5th: Cunningham, C.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Hernan, E.; 2nd: Garber, C.; 3rd: Sacks, M.). The boys, 14 and under, backstroke was again a no-swim for Duxbury, but with one Duxbury competitor in the girls race, Cohasset finished first, second and fourth (boys: 1st: Hernan, A.; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Musto, L.; 2nd: Weston, E.; 4th: James, K.). The backstroke finished with an uncontested first, second and third for the 17 and under boys and a second, third and fourth place for the seventeen and under girls (boys, 17 and under, 50 yard backstroke: 1st: Bilton, B.; 2nd: Flynn, C.; 3rd: Blackburn, C.; girls; 2nd: Lehr, R.; 3rd: Regan, D.; 4th: Hurley, K.). Heading into the final event of the meet Cohasset had now earned 368 points to Duxbury's 112.

The 100-yard free relays went well from the beginning, with first, second and third place finishes for the eight and under boys (1st: Buckley, Durkin, J.; Durkin, T.; Carrier, J.; 2nd: Mahoney, Durkin, J.; Murphy, J.; Shipp; 3rd: Culhane; Whitney; Murphy, C.; Lynner, W.) and first, third and fifth place finishes for the girls (1st: Fontaine; Karski; Murphy; Musto; 3rd: Berbe; Donohue; Kucinski; Michalowski; 5th: Farren, A.; Seraikas, A.; Farren, N.; Kelly, K.). Duxbury was unable to field swimmers for the ten and under race, leaving the Cohasset boys to take first and second places (1st: Porter, Daly; Ulmer; Doonan; 2nd: Ofsthun; Queenan; McCormack; Hurley). The ten and under girls, against some competition, did well to take first second and fourth places (1st: Lehr, S.; Mahoney, C.; Lehr, T. Meehan, S.; 2nd: Mahoney, M.; O'Sullivan, Zappolo, C.; Saltonstall; 4th: Dickinson; Donohue; Libby; McElhinny). The final two 100-yard relays again went uncontested, giving Cohasset first, second and third places in the boys and girls events (boys: 1st: Zappolo, N.; Doonan; Dickinson, Conway; 2nd: De Giacomo; Muir; Shipp; Porter; 3rd: Cunningham; Kuppens; Musto; Stevenson; girls: 1st: Hernan; Englander, Garber; Durkin; 2nd: Fortin; Previte; Swain; Sacks; 3rd: Anderson; Teague; Tehranian; Smith). The meet finished with the 200 yard-relays with the seventeen and under boys finishing in first place and the girls taking first, third and fourth positions (boys: 1st: Bilton; Tehranian; Flynn; Faber; girls: 1st: Lehr, R.; O"Brien, K.; Regan, D.; Daley; 3rd: Musto; Sida; Faber; Orsini; 4th: Ogrodnik; Weston; Lemaire; James). The final score was 432 for Cohasset and 132 for Duxbury.

It was another comprehensive win for Cohasset. Congratulations to the all the swimmers and to Alison Hughes and her assistants Ted Hughes and Garet Jacobucci, who put the kids through their paces. It was another great team event and we look forward to the next meet against Duxbury Yacht Club on Friday July 13th.

Cohasset Sailing Club races to new marks

Brown University recently recruited Rynne for its freshman racing team. Erin Clancy has successfully won several regattas and will add her expertise to the racing training at the club.

According to Rynne, "Last year, we had a seven-kid team. This year, we expect about 15 teenagers."

Rynne went on to say racing is like "playing chess on the water". Strategic skills would be bolstered by weekly practices with other clubs on the South Shore.

The CSC maintains a strong tradition of young sailors who moved on to significant sailing accomplishments. Nicole Peterson went through the CSC training as both a student and instructor. She raced for her alma mater, Hobart-William Smith, where she became an All-American sailor. Her younger brother Ben, also a CSC student and instructor, now races for Bowdoin College.

"People like Nicole, Ben, Pat and Erin serve as tremendous role models to our children coming through our programs," said CSC Commodore Bob Deutsch. "We want to provide our members with high quality instruction under safe conditions."

"To stay on the competitive edge," Deutsch adds, "we need to hire savvy instructors and maintain good racing equipment. This takes time and money."

According to Vice Commodore for Racing, Robert Cunningham, the club plans to participate in regattas organized by the Massachusetts Bay Junior Racing Association. He points out how sailing appeals equally to boys and girls. Boys and girls compete on the same team, stressing teamwork and cooperation.

"Such experiences help youngsters develop their interest in sailing into a lifelong hobby. They also serve as a foundation for going on to the collegiate level, the Olympics and even the America's Cup," Cunningham said.

While receiving new emphasis, the Junior racing program remains only part of the club's extensive instructional and racing programs for adolescents and adults.

All-Scholastic boys Track and Field Team

everything he does every time out, and he hates to lose. The best way to motivate him is to tell him he can't do something."

Mike Piche - Senior (Capt.)
Mile - Silver Lake

The best high school miler in New England, and he's got the hardware to prove it….the Silver Lake senior ended his brilliant high school running career by winning the 1,600-meter championship at the New England Track and Field Championships on June 10 in a school record 4:17.06….this, after he won the Class A mile and finished third in the All-State meet in this event the two preceding weekends…these feats were made all the more amazing by the fact that he missed the first month of the spring season with a knee injury…Mike ran track year round at Silver Lake in all four of his years of attendance: cross country in the fall, indoor in the winter and outdoor in the spring…a multi-time/season Old Colony League All-Star…was a team captain in all three of his senior seasons…holds Silver Lake's cross country course (3.1 miles) record, 4:20.5…Mike has also run a 2:04 in the 800 meters and 9:46 in the 2-mile… A member of the varsity squad all four years… heading to Brown University, where he intends to run track and study political science….Silver Lake boys track coach Fred Watson: "We all know what a gifted runner Mike is, but I think he really showed us all what kind of competitor and person he was when he battled back from tremendous adversity (injury) after missing the first month of season. He had a goal in mind to win the State's and go to the New England's, and that's just what he did."

Bob Murphy - Senior
Long Jump - Rockland

Surprised everyone, including himself, when he won the long jump at the Class D Meet with a personal best mark of 20' 9 3/4," which broke Rockland High's school record…A Patriot League All-star, it was the first time Murphy had ever jumped over 20 feet in the event…Murphy has no-doubt one of the fastest runway approaches around…Consistently scored points in the 100 and as the lead-off leg of Rockland's the 4x100-meter relay team, and also participated in the triple jump…Murphy is making his third appearance on a Mariner All-Scholastic team as he was chosen for the football squad last fall, and basketball team last winter…The speedy running back led Rockland to a Div. 3 Super Bowl title…Murphy will attend Dartmouth College next year, where he plans to continue his football career. Rockland coach Tim Owens: "Murphy's just a stud. He qualified for the Class Meet in five events. He's our utility man. He'll do whatever you ask him to do. He's a great kid. We'll definitely miss him."

Chris Orr - Junior
300 hurdles - Hingham

Was the only Harbormen track athlete to advance to the All-State meet after finishing second in the 300-meter hurdles at the Class C Meet (40.2)…This was the junior's best finish ever in the event…The Patriot League All-star won the hurdle race at the South Shore Principal's Meet (41.6) and won the event at the All-League Meet…Orr went on to the All-States and finished seventh in the event with a time of 40.67…Orr also runs the 600 meters during the indoor track season…Orr is already thinking about college somewhere locally…Orr will be among the top returning athletes next year.

Joe Richardi - Senior (Capt.)
100 hurdles - Hanover

Richardi had a solid year in both the 100 and 300-meter hurdles, but made his presence most known in the 100's…The senior won this year's South Shore Principal's Meet (16.17)…The South Shore League All-star had not been beaten in the 100 or 300-meter hurdles in a league competition in two years…Has cited being selected as a SSL All-star as one of his proudest achievements and says the competition at the meets is what he will miss most about track…Richardi plans to attend Mass. Maritime Academy next year and is currently undecided on a major and on continuing his track career. Hanover coach Brett Johnson: "Joe's been pretty consistent over the three years that I've coached. It was always a given that he was going to get a win in the hurdling events. He guaranteed points at meets. He's a natural hurdler, with natural ability. He'll be a huge loss (to the team)."

Matt Boyd - Junior High jump - Rockland

Finished fifth in the high jump at the Class D Meet, clearing 5'10", just missing a trip to the All-States…Finished second at the South Shore Principal's Meet with a personal best jump of 6 feet…The junior only lost one dual meet all year, an out of league decision to a Cohasset jumper…Boyd also scored points for Rockland in the 100 meter high hurdles and set a junior record (17.9)…Was also a member of Rockland's Div. 3 Super Bowl Champion football team…Boyd will captain the football team in the fall and the basketball team in the winter…Still just a junior, Boyd will be one of the team's top returnees next season. Rockland coach Tim Owens: "I truly believe he has an untapped ability. He's capable of doing anything he wants. I think next year he's going to step up and be a real leader. Honestly, the team will go where he goes."

Dave Davenport - Senior
(Capt.)
Long Jump/200-meter - Silver Lake

The second highest point scorer in Silver Lake track history behind classmate and fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Pat Saccone…lost only twice in meet long jump competition the last three years, going undefeated as both a sophomore and senior…two-time Old Colony League long jump champ…top jump of 20-feet-11.5-inches was recorded when he tied for first at the South Shore Principal's Meet in May…also ran the 200 meter and was a member of the 4x100 relay team…Placed in all three events in all league meets this season…A three-time OCL All-Star…A member of the varsity squad all four years…Silver Lake boys track coach Fred Watson: "Dave was always at his best when the pressure was on. I think there were 15 to 20 times over the last four years where he won the long jump competition on his last jump."

Patrick Saccone - Senior
(Capt.)
Discus/100 high hurdles - Silver Lake

The top male point-getter in the history of Silver Lake spring track with 333 career points…placed third in the Class A state meet in the discus with a throw of 146-feet-7-inches and fourth at the All-State meet with a throw of 151-feet…Holds the Silver Lake school discus record (158-feet)…Undefeated in Old Colony League meet competition in the discuss for three years…won the South Shore Principal's Meet (144-feet-8-inches), where he was also a part of the Lakers' sixth place 4x100-meter relay team…Lost only once in the 110-meter hurdles this season, and that was to eventual state champion Mike Delgado (Bridgewater-Raynham)…best time in 110-high hurdles is 16.2 seconds and 300-hurdles is 43.5…Silver Lake boys track coach Fred Watson is convinced Saccone could have finished top six in the state in the 110-hurdles and gone on to New England's if given the chance. Unfortunately, the discuss and hurdles events took place at the state championships simultaneously…a three-time OCL All-Star…A member of the varsity squad all four years…intends to attend Massassoit College for a semester and then transfer to Wheaton…Silver Lake boys track coach Fred Watson: "What else can I say about Pat. He's our all-time points leader. He's obviously a very talented and versatile kid, and he's very committed too. He's also a great kid and a great kid to work with, just like my other two captains this year were."

John Lannon - Senior (Capt.)
Discus - Scituate

Lannon capped his outstanding four year varsity career with a sixth place finish in the discus at the State Class D Championships with a personal best of 127-feet-3-inches…Was also a force in the shot put over the last four years for the Sailors, his personal best being 43-7…this spring he took five firsts and two seconds in league meets in the shot put, along with four firsts and three seconds in the discus to lead the squad in total points contributed with over 60…The lone member of the rebuilding Scituate boys spring squad named to the Patriot League All-Star team…A five season captain at Scituate High, having been named leader by teammates in both his junior and senior seasons with the indoor and outdoor track teams, as well as this past fall with the football team…was a top contributor for the unbeaten 1998 and '99 Scituate spring track teams…The 6-foot-3-260-pound Lannon has a full football scholarship to Northfield-Mount Herman Prep School in Northfield, Mass—a Division 1A Private School— where he hopes to draw interest from colleges… as vital a point producer as he was with the team this season, boys track coach Fred Jewett says it was Lannon's leadership that set him apart: "It had to be a frustrating season for John, to go from being on some great teams as an underclassman to this year's rebuilding team, but he never showed it. In fact, he was great with the younger guys, always working with them and helping to keep their heads up. I think he showed great character."

Norwell 4x400 relay team
Steve Fitzgerald- Senior, Mike Boutross- Senior
Ted Hughes- Junior, Tom Kleber- Freshman

Took sixth place at the State Class D Track and Field Championships with a time of 3:39.39, after an outstanding season in the South Shore League. Fitzgerald, also a standout in soccer and winter track for N.H.S., is heading to Boston College in the fall. Boutros, who also ran cross country and played hockey, is off to Stanford. Hughes, who also plays varsity basketball and football, was the spring squad's "jack of all trades", running everything from the 400 on down for the Clippers, as well as competing in the long jump and triple jump. Kleber, who ran anchor for the squad, opened a lot of eyes by taking fourth in the 800 at the State Class D Track and Field Championships last month to advance on to the All-State's, where he finished 14th. Norwell boys track coach Alicia Porro: "These were four very different types of runners and four very different kinds of kids, but they came together collectively as a team to do some great things. They never let me down."

Cohasset 4x100 relay team

After an unbeaten regular season for the South Shore League champion Skippers, this team took fourth place in the State Class D Track and Field Championships with a time of 45.73 to advance to the All-State's…with injuries over the course of the season suffered by both Krupczak brothers, Belz was asked to step in to those huge sneakers a few times, and came through huge. He should step in full-time for Brian Krupczak, the lone graduating member of the team, next year…All five of the athletes competed in at least two other events for the undermanned Cohasset boys squad, which featured just 18 members—literally one third the size of a couple of the teams it went up against and beat this season. Cohasset Track Coach Al LaFontain: "We had so many guys fight through injury this year, and then Frank Belz stepped in. But we never seemed to lose much of a beat. That's a real testament to the concentration and work ethic of all these guys."

Post 118 clings to playoff hopes

innings and driving home Sailor teammate, shortstop Jason Connelly, in the top of the 10th for an insurance run. Cole struck out nine, and scattered four hits and two walks while throwing approximately 140 pitches.

Connelly, another starter in the pitching rotation, has been a reliable offensive and defensive commodity to the squad. He, Cole, Fitzgerald, and Tim Duggan have provided rock solid mound work in the eyes of the coach Scott Arnold of Scituate.

"It's very rare," said Arnold of fielding such a talented starting rotation. Arnold is able to count on any one of them to pitch a complete game on any day, something he has needed with the hectic game schedule that they play, made even more hectic with a number of makeup dates.

"That is imperative if you're playing five games per week," coach Arnold said.

Because some of his pitchers are also talented in the field, Arnold has done some name juggling on the days they are not pitching so as to make sure they stay in the line-up. But, as the coach put it, "That's a sacrifice we'll take any day."

The pitching will be a very important part of the team, now that it is heading into their final stretch run of the season, where Arnold anticipates his charges will have to win three out of their final four in order to hold off Quincy for the final post-season birth.

"With my whole staff together, healthy, I think we'll get past the first round," predicted Arnold.

In addition to keeping the pitchers around for the playoffs, the position players will for the first time need to play as an entire team. As busy as summer schedules have been for all these high schoolers, Arnold has yet to have everyone on his roster on the field for a game.

His B.C. High players—seniors-to-be Fitzgerald and first baseman Greg Smith, a Catholic Conference All-Star first baseman—were ineligible by MIAA rules for the first half dozen or so legion games while the Eagles were pursuing their high school state championship. Fitzgerald has been available since, but Smith has played in only two games to date, having traveled out of state one week with the Appalachia Project and participating in several college showcase tourneys that have conflicted with the legion schedule.

"[The reserves] have stepped in and done the job," praised Arnold. "But when they are all together, and all in synch, that is one hell of a baseball team."

Sandwiched between the two wins was a tough luck 2-1 loss to last place Randolph and, this past Monday, Cohasset-Scituate was taken down by a very talented West Roxbury squad 10-2.

Post 118 was next scheduled to play yesterday (Wednesday) against Milton, its final home game of the season. The boys will be on the road for the final three after that, travelling to Quincy on Friday(Adams Field, 7:30), Braintree on Monday (Braintree High, 7:30) and Quincy again on Wednesday to take on the Morrisette Post (Adams Field, 7:30). This finale is actually considered a home game for Post 118. Arnold says he prefers to play it under the lights on Adams Field rather than at the team's home Milliken Field.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset ballplayers fly high with Eagles

Two Cohasset pitchers helped the Boston College High School JV Baseball Team achieve a very successful 14-4 record. Junior Chris Carr posted a 1-1 record with a 3.36 ERA, while Sophomore, Jim French went 3-0 with a 1.83 ERA. Both Carr and French were used as starting pitchers as well as relief pitchers.

Another Cohasset native, First Baseman, Greg Smith, was a mainstay of the Division I Champion BC Varsity team.

Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football equipment handouts

BUSINESS

Cohasset Collision keeps unlucky customers happy

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The scene inside Cohasset Collision's workshop looks like a hospital: white walls, bright lights, clean floors, fresh circulated air. It's fitting though since the shop's "doctors" are busy at work reviving and patching together cars with potentially life-threatening injuries from accidents.

A telephone pole impression here, a ripped-off fender there. All will get fixed in the state-of-the-art vehicle rehabilitation ward, and returned to their loved ones.

"This is as good of a working environment as you can get."
— William Cavanaro, owner

Over the past 10 years, Cohasset Collision — which now services 250 cars a month and has 20 full-time employees.— has grown from a body-shop with revenues totaling $500,000 a year, into one that is threatening to break the $3 million mark.

The reason for the success, owner William Cavanaro said, is old-fashioned customer service and quality work.

"When people enter our doors, they're usually coming to us in an unhappy situation," he said. "It's important that as soon as they come in they see someone, that they're not just standing around."

He estimated about 97 percent of his business is accident repairs.

Cavanaro has owned Cohasset Collision since 1990, and moved the business last December from its original location behind the former South Shore Chevy Geo dealership further south on Route 3A, to its new location next to Crocker Lane – a move five years in the making.

He said he had to chuckle when the Planning Board was concerned with how clean the business would be.

"I'm a fanatic on things looking right," said Cavanaro, a self-described clean freak. "It's a reflection on what we do."

Even the parking lot benefits from a frequent sweeping at the hands of Cavanaro, a Cohasset resident.

Although the shop's values are old-fashioned, its atmosphere isn't.

"I'm strongly opposed to the image body shops usually have, the greasy office, the German Shepherd in the corner, pictures of women on the wall," he said. "We can't do that. We deal with a lot of women that come in here. Their husbands work in Boston, and they hate coming into the business. We try to make it as comfortable as possible."

Cavanaro designed the new building's layout himself in order to better facilitate the repair process.

Bill Cavanaro, owner of Cohasset Collison, stands with his brother John and manager Don Flanagan at the new Route 3A site across from JJ's.

A main workshop, complete with modern ventilation system; tools attached to vacuum lines, carbon dioxide monitors, and soundproof break rooms, is the heart of the business.

"This is as good of a working environment as you can get," he said.

Three booths are set aside for priming and painting the cars, which then lead out to another open area where the vehicles can be washed and detailed.

"Our old space wasn't designed for what we do," Cavanaro said of his prior Route 3A site. "This has more space, and a better flow of work."

He takes pride in his shop being environment-friendly.

All ventilated air is forced through filters before making it back outside. The painting booths are outfitted with "downdraft" systems that sucks paint particles into grates in the floor. All water is flushed down grates into a holding system, which is pumped out when full.

"Nothing goes into the septic systems, nothing environmentally harmful leaves this shop whatsoever," he said.

Canavaro prides himself in highly qualified technicians. He walked over to an import missing its entire suspension system because of an accident — a $10,000-15,000 job.

"We have lots of European vehicles coming here and they have hundreds of little connections," he said holding a set of spliced wires sticking out from the car. "We need someone really experienced. So we spend a lot of time hiring the best people."

He says by everyone working together — from the people dealing with the insurance agencies, to the Enterprise car rental center on site, to the technicians — Cohasset Collision is able to cut a normal four-to-six week turnaround time down to just 10 days.

Canavaro, 43, got into the profession in 1975, working at a truck painting business in Braintree, "cleaning trucks for $1.50 an hour." He eventually became the manager of the body shop at the former Spensley Chevrolet dealership on Route 3A, before going into business for himself in 1990.

"It's a great business," he says. "People come in unhappy, and leave here happy. How many people can say they work in a business like that?"

All Chinese menu, all of the time

New Lotus Restaurant has Far East focus

By Michael Marotta
MMAROTTA@CNC.COM

Anthony Mei loved his Milwaukee restaurant business.

But he knows where his priorities lie. So when his wife wanted to return home to Boston where she was born, Mei knew he was heading east.

He arrived in Massachusetts a little less than a year ago, and Mei is already back in the food business. He recently purchased the Flounder Inn on Front Street in Scituateand is giving the new eatery a far east twist..

Lotus Restaurant opened up last month, creating a new era in a building not only more than a 100 years old, but a place that had more customers in the morning than in the evening, which is a tough notion for a Chinese food restaurant owner to stomach. The former Flounder Inn was a busy "townie" breakfast hangout, but switched to Chinese cuisine for lunch and dinner where business was not as swift.

Because Mei wants to focus on his evening cuisine and it was impossible to keep the hours it would require being open from morning to night, he's eliminated the breakfast menu from the eatery, but is confident he'll win over Scituate residents with his excellent cuisine.

"I'm looking to be successful here," Mei said. "I used to operate a high-end seafood restaurant in Milwaukee and it was very successful."

While he acknowledges the popularity of the Flounder Inn's breakfast menu, Mei believes that by combining the best in Chinese food with the appropriate seafood selections, Lotus will become one of the more talked about restaurants in town.

And for Mei, getting to that point begins in the kitchen.

"I have the chef who is one of the top ten most well known Chinese chefs in Massachusetts," Mei said proudly.

Mei and the staff will have their hands full, as they prepare roughly ten different lobster selections to compliment the traditional Chinese cuisine, as well as fresh oysters and scallops served with an Asian twist. And the exterior has received facelift as well.

"It's just a little more fancier for the customer, but it doesn't have to be very formal, people can come in casually and have a good time here," Mei said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Minors after hours at the swim center

Police, who were asked to patrol the Swim Center over the holiday weekend, arrested four teenagers for trespassing there after hours.

The director of the Cohasset Swim Center called on June 28 and asked police to patrol the popular swimming facility due to recent incidents of vandalism including finding broken glass in the pool, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Just after 12:30 a.m., July 5, police saw youths inside the building and in the pool while the facility was closed.

Police caught Maureen Equi, 18, of 27 Wood Way, inside the building and charged her with trespassing.

The other three teenagers fled on foot and after a short investigation were contacted at home, and subsequently came to the station where they were placed under arrest. Police believe alcohol was a contributing factor, Jackson said.

Charged with trespassing, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest were: Justin Langham, 18, 100 Pond St.; Douglas O'Brien, 18, 52 Jerusalem Road; and Kathleen McCarthy, 18, 155 Fairoaks Lane.

The teens were arraigned on the charges last week at Quincy District Court.

Jackson said the trespassing charge against Equi was continued without a finding for three months, which means if she stays out of trouble, the charge will be dropped at that time. Equi was required to pay $85 in court fees. The charges against McCarthy, who was required to pay $135 in court costs, were continued without a finding for six months. O'Brien was put in a diversion program and required to pay a $50 fee to Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

A pre-trial conference for Langham is set for July 16. At that time, the court will revisit an open case against Langham. In an unrelated incident, Langham was charged for minor transport alcohol and having alcohol in an open container in a motor vehicle June 22 in Cohasset.

Quigley commended

Police Chief Brian Noonan commended Officer William Quigley for outstanding police work he performed on May 18.

While on traffic assignment, he received a report of a fire in a condominium located at 60 Howe Road.

He immediately responded to the scene and with Officer James McLean, entered the smoke-filled condominium. Finding an unconscious male in the kitchen, he managed to carry him to safety. He then re-entered the building to check for further potential victims and while inside, managed to extinguish the fire with departmental fire extinguishers.

The male Quigley rescued was subsequently taken to South Shore Hospital where he was treated for smoke inhalation and burns, Noonan said.

"Your quick assessment and decisive action, taken at no small personal risk, prevented a possible tragedy," he said in a letter of commendation.

"Your professionalism and dedication is one that I am extremely proud of — this type of action brings credit to yourself, your department and the law enforcement community," Noonan said.

Police arrested 30 last month

June was a busy month for the Cohasset Police Department police chief Brian Noonan said. There were 30 arrests, 13 for minors in possession of alcohol, six for protective custody, two for possession of counterfeit bills, one for possession of class A substance, three for outstanding warrants, two for disorderly conduct, one for operating without a license, one for operating under the influence of alcohol and finally one for assault and battery.

During the month of June the police department investigated 11 motor vehicle accidents, four of which resulted in personal injury. There were 158 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $4,255 in fines. Additionally there were 210 parking tickets issued for $5,500 in fines.

Also in June, our emergency dispatch center received a total of 788 calls for police services, of those 121 were emergency 911 calls, Noonan said.

OBITUARIES

Mary B. Williams

Mary B. Williams, 82, a 12-year resident of Cohasset, formerly of Etowah, Tenn., died, July 3, 2001, in the Quincy Medical Center following a long illness. She was born in Pittsburgh, Penn.

Mary worked in sales in the retail industry and also was a homemaker. She enjoyed playing bridge. Mary was the wife of the late John L. Williams and the mother of the late John "Jack" L. Williams Jr. She leaves two grandchildren, J. L. Williams III and Garrett B. Williams, both of Cohasset.

Arrangements were handled by The Cremation Society of Massachusetts, Quincy. Interment was in Athens, Tenn.

Hope Poor

Hope Poor, 74, of Carver, formerly of Marshfield, died June 26, 2001, at her home.

Born in Boston, the daughter of Sterns and Hope (Colwell) Poor, in 1938 she moved with her family to a farm in Hanover. She graduated from Hanover High School. She also lived in Cohasset and then for many years in Marshfield before moving to Carver two years ago.

During her working years, Miss Poor was a real estate broker and an office manager at Howard Johnson in Braintree.

She leaves her brothers, Stearns Poor of Tampa Fla., Bennett Poor of Brookline, Harris Poor and his wife, LaVonne (Tiegs) Poor of New York, N.Y.; three nieces, two nephews, three great nieces and a great nephew. She was also the sister of the late Eleanor Poor

A memorial service was held at the North Community Church, Old Main St., Marshfield.

Donations in Miss Poor's memory may be made to the Standish Humane Society, 622 Congress St., Duxbury, 02332.

More blues from Les

Sampou set to open for former Men at Work lead Colin Hay

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

For Les Sampou, it's time for a career evaluation. It's also time to make some long-awaited concession to her many blues-favoring fans with a blues-favoring album, like her own version of Eric Clapton's From the Cradle or the all-blues disc effort that Bonnie Raitt is still yet to make.

The Norwell-based singer/guitarist/songwriter promises to make good on both tasks with her forthcoming CD, titled Borrowed and Blue, set for release in August on the Rounder/Flying Fish label. The 16-track disc will live up to its billing with a diverse set of rootsy, back-to-basics blues selections borrowed from the genre's masters and descendents, such as Robert Johnson, Blind Willie McTell, Mississippi John Hurt and Bob Dylan, and also from Sampou's own blues-sided past and present, with remakes of previously recorded fan-favorites like "Chinatown," 'Sweet Perfume" and "Holy Land" as well as freshly-penned new songs.

These days Sampou seems to making a part-time career of opening local tour-stops for former top-selling, arena-filling acts of the MTV 1980s. Following a well-received warm-up spot at Pat Benetar's retro-rocking date at the Cape Cod Melody Tent last month, the singer will open this Saturday's show at Boston's Copley Theatre for ex-Men At Work front man Colin Hay. Hay has reinvented himself as a lyrical, reflective acoustic singer/songwriter, touring with only a single acoustic-guitar accompanist. His July 14 show will put music from Hay's new CD "Going Somewhere" in the spotlight.

He sang about vegimite sandwiches when he was one of the Men at Work. Saturday Colin Hay will bring his solo accoustic tour to Boston in support of his new CD "Going Somewhere."

Sampou's also looking forward to sharing some of her new work at the Boston gig.

"This new disc will be nothing but the blues, as simple and direct as it gets," said Sampou from her Norwell home/office. "It's just me and the guitar, recorded live to 2-track, with no chance for tricked-up studio production, pretty much what you hear is what you get. More than anything I wanted to highlight my guitar playing this time out, just play it directly into the tape with nothing in between, and put all those tones and textures of the strings right up front."

"The whole disc was finished in only six days, with no one else in the studio but my producer, a local musician and good friend of mine named J.P. Jones. The atmosphere was low-keyed and intimate to the point that on some parts of the master tapes, you can hear birds from outside in the background, and a Poland Spring truck pulling up on the street. The whole production was very naked and bare. People have talked to me for a long time about making an album like this. But when you sit down to do a session of traditionally-based blues, especially solo acoustic, you have to be really confident. Over the last few months, I finally reached the point where I could feel that confidence, with not only the guitar chops but a sense of knowing the music and how it should sound," Sampou said.

Sampou has won admirers far and wide for the way she does the blues, with her distinct blend of gut-level guitar stylings and vocals like a huskier Bonnie Raitt. But over three previous independent label CDs since 1993, the singer has been willfully unbound by a strait-jacketing blues-mama role, adding sensitive, deeply personal folk ballads, torchy jazz, lush orchestration, electric singer/songwriter rock and even New Age art songs to her musical vision.

If Sampou set out to highlight her guitar playing on the new disc, nowhere is that more in effect than on Borrowed and Blue's opening track, a brazen slide-blues powerhouse titled "Lorraine." This song, a Sampou original currently previewed on the singer's website at www.lessampou.com, holds its own for blues-based passion and lyrical content with some of the classic genre-gem interpretations found elsewhere on the disc, such as Mississippi Fred McDowell's "Kokomo Blues," McTell's "Statesboro Blues" and Johnson's "Travelling Riverside Blues."

Sampou provides some background on the song's evolution.

"I was staying in one of the dune shacks in Provincetown, just this 10 X 12 little hut, to start writing songs for the new album. For the first four days and nights there it rained non-stop, and I was without any creature comforts like electricity or running water but I did have severe writer's block. Finally the whole dire situation just brought out of me this song called 'Lorraine,' which is a word-play on 'the rain.' The song is basically about facing up to and dealing with 'the rain,' literally and figuratively, or the less-than-pleasant situations of life."

Les Sampou will share some of the music from her upcoming CD as she opens for former Men At Work front man Colin Hay at Boston's Copley Theater July 14.

So what did Sampou think of her Melody Tent encounter with the ex-Queen of MTV Pop?

"Pat (Benetar) definitely hosted a big fan-base at that show. She still has a lot of listeners, and they gave me a really good response as well. She was very nice backstage, very professional, and she had her kids there too. It was a good night," the singer said.

Sampou is expecting much the same when she supports the bill for Hay on Saturday. Could the opening spot on the Police reunion tour be next?

'Weighting' his options

Hanover musician to release new album July 20

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Hanover musician Kristian Montgomery is not shy about expressing his true feelings through the songs he creates, and those emotions are perfectly clear on his upcoming album called "Weighting Her Down."

Montgomery will debut the new LP at an album release party July 20 at The Attic in Newton at 7 p.m.

"The title of the record pretty much explains the theme of the album," Montgomery said. "The record is somewhat dedicated to failed relationships, and failures in general."

Montgomery said the musical content on "Weighting Her Down" is very diverse blending styles like Louisiana bluegrass, blues, punk, and even tribal and Celtic music influences.

"I'd say it's a very sex, drugs, and rock 'n' roll type album," Montgomery added, "but it does it in a way that still seems like an intellectual reflection on sex, drugs, and rock 'n' roll."

Montgomery said the new album marks his band's first full-length album, and what's more, he said the sound of his music has changed for the better thanks to the addition of new guitarist Erick Carpenter.

"It's really wild," Montgomery said of Carpenter. "By bringing him in, our sound has gotten much heavier, and much more aggressive. He's able to take a lot of the emotions I bring to the table and intensify them."

Montgomery also commended the talents of his other band mates—Roc Telleria (bass) and Philip Grenier (drums). Montgomery takes care of vocals in the context of his band as well as playing some additional guitar.

Montgomery said he has released other albums, but none of them have been as extensive as "Weighting Her Down." His last two albums included "Jupiter 1973," an EP he released nine months ago, and before that he released a record called "Opening Water." His songs have always reflected his true self, but he said the lyrics on "Weighting Her Down" are some of the best he's ever written.

Hanover musician Kristian Montgomery is releasing his new album July 20.

"I'd say it's a very sex, drugs, and rock 'n' roll type album, but it does it in a way that still seems like an intellectual reflection on sex, drugs, and rock 'n' roll."
-Kristian Montgomery

"I think the lyrical content on the new album is one of the things about it that I'm most proud of," he said. "On the last album (Jupiter 1973), I think I was a little too blunt and to the point. With this record, the lyrics are more subject to personal interpretation."

Although Montgomery said the new album is definitely focused on the aspect of failure, there are other themes which he expresses through the songs such as the passing of his father and ex-girlfriends.

Even though Montgomery only began playing guitar and singing eight years ago, he has still been a fan of great music his whole life, and he pulls many of his influences into his own musical realm.

"I always listened to a lot of southern rock," he said, pointing out landmark acts like Neil Young and the Allman Brothers. "But I've always been a fan of music in general, so I never really stuck with one style. I like jumping from one genre to the other."

Montgomery said he is looking forward to doing some touring to promote the new album, but he has some other things he has to do first.

"We're trying to do a lot of radio promotion on the east coast," he said. "As soon as we start getting some feedback as to where we're getting the most airplay, we'll think about where we'll tour. But this summer, we'll be playing a few local venues around Boston and Cape Cod." Montgomery added his management company, Jenrik Entertainment, is based in Hyannis.

Montgomery added that on July 15, he will be live on radio station WAAF starting at 11 p.m..

With a busy schedule in front of him, Montgomery is not concerned, stressed, or anxious because he loves what he does, and he said he thinks a lot of people will like the new album.

"My impression is that it's a really good album to drive to," he said. "I see people getting a lot of speeding tickets when they listen to it. People will definitely find it moving."

Survival of the Weakest

Hit game show gives summer viewers a reason to tune in

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

It has saved TV this summer.

The quirky new game show, The Weakest Link, is hands down the strongest thing on television during this dreaded season of reruns.

A combination of Survivor and quiz shows like Jeopardy and Who Wants to be a Millionaire, The Weakest Link has me glued to my TV set every Sunday and Monday night. And it has me reading (for the first time) the "how to record a program" section of my VCR instructions on the nights it airs and I cannot be at home to watch it.

In addition to being fast paced with some challenging, interesting questions, the show's team format makes it unique and involving. From the first round I'm predicting who will be voted off first, who is truly the Weakest Link. If you haven't tuned in yet, here's how the game works.

A team of eight players of different ages, and backgrounds form a team. They are given a set amount of time, which is cut in each successive round, to answer the questions posed to them. If they answer correctly they earn money for the team. If they answer incorrectly they lose the money earned and not banked at that point. Time is of the essence as the team is looking to earn and then bank as much money possible before time runs out. Players are responsible for not only answering the question posed to them, but having the foresight to bank money earned when others answer correctly. Following a correct answer, and before they tackle their own question, players must say "bank" It's a simple four-letter word that amazingly eludes contestants round after round generally dooming the winner to a "paltry, pathetic, measly" cash prize in the end. The money that is banked goes through to the next round, but one player, whom the others deem the weakest link, does not.

At the center of it all, literally, is the host with the most barbs, Anne Robinson — the tight-lipped acerbic Brit who, at the end of every round played adds a hefty dose of hilarious insult to injury. In her black flowing ensemble and cropped hairdo, she reminds one of a sort of militant Julie Andrews — a mockingly malicious Maria Von Trapp, if you will.

Remaining contestants await their next grilling from Weakest Link host Anne Robinson

She's been called "the Brit in a snit," and the "Cruella De Ville of the quiz show." But the British tabloid columnist is no doubt snickering all the way to the bank thanks to her new-found fame as host of the show that has taken America by storm and remains England's most popular, with more than six million viewers.

I've heard others complain the show glorifies bullying and express concern that it might help perpetuate that kind of behavior among today's youth. To that I say, "c'mon. Lighten up!" The show is so tongue-in-cheek, so much a spoof of the very programs it imitates, that to take it that seriously is seriously ridiculous.

There is no doubt that to be a contestant you have to be thick-skinned, willing to take some abuse and even if you win it all, leave with a relatively small amount of money. I haven't seen any episodes where the winner in the final two shoot-out left with more than $125,000 or so. The others, Robinson reminds us time and again "will leave with nothing."

Robinson polls players after they've voted off the weakest link, asking them "Why Brenda? Or Nathan or Chris?" while at the same time poking fun at them, pointing out their own failures and foibles in the match, and further pitting team members against each other.

Whether statistically you are the weakest link — meaning you've answered to most questions incorrectly or just didn't know the answers in that particular round — Robinson will point out "it's the votes that count," just before uttering her trademark, dismissive retort, "you are the weakest link, goodbye."

Those voted off must do the walk of shame amid glaring spotlights and leering teammates who, because you may have missed a question they knew the answer to or took too long to answer another, have decided to boot you off.

Losers get a brief interview following the vote where they are given an opportunity to whimper and whine about their performance or trash other players and make their own predictions on whose going down next. It's all quite brutal and ridiculously fun, for Robinson and we, the viewers smugly taking it all in from the safety of our recliners.

"The programme is a conspiracy between me and the viewers," Robinson told BBC News Online. "We're curious as to what on earth the contestants are doing there."

Indeed, contestants upon whom her sassy English venom has been issued may wonder themselves, but as Robinson so eloquently notes they were "several fries short of a Happy Meal to begin with."

Here's to you, Mrs. Robinson and the creators of the Weakest Link for giving us something worth watching this summer.

Grilled butterflied chicken

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Bad grilled chicken is the culinary equivalent of divorce - it's messy, it's unpleasant, and the person responsible for it is none too popular. Of course, great grilled chicken is one of life's great pleasures but the design of the chicken itself stands in the way of success. The white and dark meat do not cook at the same rate and therefore the breast meat turns out overcooked and dry.

To solve this problem, I decided to butterfly (remove the backbone and flatten) the chicken before grilling. For my first test, I seasoned the butterflied bird with salt and pepper and set it on the grill skin-side down over a medium-hot fire. After 12 minutes, the skin was brown and crispy with signature grill marks. The bad news was that the chicken had contracted into a lump. I flipped the chicken and found it necessary to apply downward pressure with a spatula to press the underside off the breast closer to the hot coals. The total cooking time for a 3 1/2 pound chicken was about 40 minutes in a covered grill. The chicken had a well-browned and crispy skin but the breast was overcooked.

Next, I tried using a weighted baking sheet to flatten the chicken as it cooked. With this method, the chicken cooked more evenly and in less time, about 30 minutes for a 3 1/2 pound bird— 15 minutes per side. The baking sheet also helped to maintain the flattened butterfly shape I started out with. I then tried a technique in which the bird is grilled skin-side down for 2 minutes and then finished over indirect heat (there are no coals directly under the bird) in a covered grill. The result was good but not quite as juicy as I would have liked so I decided that the direct heat method was best.

To solve the dry breast meat issue, I then decided to use a quick brine (the butterflied chicken is immersed in cold salted water) and I got the results I wanted — flavorful, juicy meat. I then wondered if a marinade wouldn't add additional flavor so after brining, I combined the chicken with olive oil, lemon juice, garlic, and fresh rosemary. I tested various marinating times and I found that 12 hours was necessary to impart flavor although a full 24 hours was even better. (If you do not have time to marinate, brush the bird with olive oil and freshly ground pepper before grilling.)

GARLIC-LEMON GRILLED BUTTERFLIED CHICKEN

The brining step is easy and relatively quick and should not be overlooked if you want juicy, flavorful meat.

1 cup kosher salt (or 1/2 cup table salt)
1/2 cup sugar
1 whole chicken, 3 1/2 to 4 pounds, preferably free-range, giblets and fat around the cavity removed
1/2 cup olive oil
4 garlic cloves, finely chopped or pressed
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary or thyme or a combination
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Dissolve salt and sugar in two quarts cold water in a large bowl, container, or plastic storage bag. Immerse the chicken and refrigerate for 1 hour. Remove chicken from brine and rinse thoroughly under cold running water. Remove backbone (this is most easily done with scissors) and press on the breastbone with the heel of your hand to flatten. Combine remaining ingredients in a small bowl and then add them, with the chicken, to a large, heavy duty, zipper lock bag. Press out as much air as possible; seal the bag and turn to coat the chicken evenly with the marinade. Place in the refrigerator for 12 to 24 hours.

2. Ignite grill. Remove chicken from the marinade and brush or wipe of excess marinade. When fire is medium-hot (you can hold your hand 5 inches from the flame for no longer than 4 seconds), place the chicken skin side down onto the grill. Set a jelly roll or other flat pan on top of the chicken, place 2 bricks or heavy cans in the pan. Cover and grill for 15 minutes, the chicken will be deep brown and have grill marks. Turn the chicken and replace weighted jellyroll pan. Grill about 15 minutes more or until an instant read thermometer inserted into the inside of the thigh registers 170 degrees. Transfer to a platter and let rest for 10-15 minutes

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JULY 12

Planetary action runs fast and furious, making this an exciting, 'anything can happen' kind of day. The moon travels in energetic Aries forming harmonious contacts to Venus, Neptune, Saturn and Pluto. Venus and Neptune align at 4:49 p.m. Mercury and Jupiter conjoin at the last degree of Gemini at 6:29 p.m. Mercury moves into the sign Cancer at 6:47 p.m., remaining there until July 30. Jupiter moves into Cancer at 8:03 p.m. Jupiter travels in the sign Cancer until August 1, 2002 bringing new opportunities to Cancerians.

FRIDAY, JULY 13

The moon travels in pioneering Aries. However, Mars, the planetary ruler continues retrograde travel until the July 19. It is best to sleep on new ideas and postpone taking action for another week. The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 2:45 p.m. This month's new moon will culminate on July 20, bringing an ideal time for new starts across the board. At 752 p.m. the moon aligns with Uranus and becomes inactive. Forget your troubles and go for the good times this evening.

SATURDAY, JULY 14

The moon enters Taurus at 7:13 a.m., traveling there throughout the weekend. Generally, a Taurus moon brings an easier, relaxing period. However, Venus, the planetary ruler of Taurus, forms stressful contacts to Saturn and Pluto in the next couple of days. You may be forced to face the reality about a romantic or financial situation and make tough decisions. Give some thought to consolidating what you have rather than spending what you don't. Sidestep doubts, worries, fears.

SUNDAY, JULY 15

Yesterday's advice pertains to today as well. The moon continues its travel in Taurus. Venus and Saturn conjoin at 3:32 a.m. Venus prepares to oppose Pluto early Tuesday morning. If you've been experiencing problems with another, now is the time to work out a compromise, forgive and forget. Avoid power trips or gameplaying to gain control of the situation. Let go and leave the past behind.

MONDAY, JULY 16

This may be a slow-starting morning. At 3:41 a.m. the Taurus moon becomes inactive until 2:26 p.m. Finish old business rather than starting new activities. Making major decisions or purchases are off limits. Don't rock the boat in business or romance. The moon enters Gemini at 2:26 p.m.

TUESDAY, JULY 17

Gear up for a busy day. Others may be distracted, argumentative. Keep a cool head and listen to the voice of reason. Venus and Pluto align at 5:46 a.m. The Gemini moon forms challenging contacts to Saturn, Pluto and Mars. Don't take risks. Think before you do or say something you will later regret. It is better to handle a variety of jobs rather than one that demands mental precision and focus. Stressful influences ease up this evening, giving you an opportunity to let off some steam, relax and unwind.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 18

This is another day that can be very difficult for getting things done. On the other hand, it's ideal for vacationing. If you are working, handle routine chores and errands. Don't take on a big work project. The Gemini moon becomes inactive at 7:46 a.m. The moon enters the sign Cancer at 5:56 p.m., beginning the final stage to this month's new moon. A polarity of Venus and Mars may spark romantic fireworks this evening.

THURSDAY, JULY 19

The planet Mars takes the spotlight today. At 6:45 p.m. Mars, standing at 15-degrees Sagittarius, will begin to travel in direct motion. Mars has been traveling in retrograde motion for the past ten weeks. A new moon will culminate tomorrow, signaling a turning point in planetary energies this summer. Today the dark side of the new moon prompts you to get organized and prepare new starts.

Notes of a challenging growing season

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

Each week throughout the growing season, a stroll through an established perennial garden unveils new discoveries. From those first early weeks of spring, when the tiny noses of bulbs push their way up through the soft earth, to the waning days of autumn, when Mother Nature offers a colorful finale, the diverse flowers and foliages of a perennial garden provide a roller-coaster ride of emotions. Joy, frustration, satisfaction, and disappointment seem to intertwine through the passing months. Although annuals provide a source of continuous color, the ever-changing palette of the perennial border often brings the passionate gardener a greater sense of accomplishment and enjoyment.

Even compulsive gardeners, who must grow one of every plant available in the trade, look forward to particular times during the season or the blooming of unique plants that bring them special delight. The unfurling of a fern frond, the splendor of a singular bloom of a bearded iris or peony, or the charm of puffy balloon flowers as they unfold, are events that I eagerly await each year. The arrival of bluebirds and hummingbirds, the croaking of friendly, resident frogs around my water garden, and the ethereal beauty of butterflies as they float through the flowers, add to this gardener's yearly pleasures.

Unfortunately, not all our discoveries are pleasant and this year's have been somewhat more challenging than in years passed. The devastation caused by the sudden burst of warmth followed by the severe frost is still evident on some plants although most seem to have finally recovered from this event. Spring canker worms took their annual toll and in some areas, gypsy moths are making an unwelcome return, but the recent influx of army worms which is defoliating South Shore lawns is like a scene from a horror film. One evening you have a beautiful green carpet surrounding your home and the next morning, the entire lawn has been ravaged by marching caterpillars and all that is left behind is brown stubble. Nurseries have been bombarded with frantic homeowners hoping to find an instant cure to all their hungry, invading pests, but often the damage is done and the best recourse is to nurture what remains and in many cases, the lawn and plants recover with water, fertilizer and a little tender loving care.

Slugs, and more recently large garden snails, have been a persistent pest in my own garden over the years, but despite this year's adequate moisture, they seem less voracious than in the past. Hostas, shade-loving plants and the tender new transplants of annuals and vegetables seem to be their favorite targets, all of which they tend to attack under the cover of darkness. Avoid overhead watering in the evening, which promotes mildew in addition to providing the perfect environment for moisture-loving slugs. Traditional slug baits tend to be especially harmful to wildlife and I prefer to try less toxic methods before resorting to deadlier products. A granular product known as Escar-Go, which contains iron phosphate, has been reasonably effective and is available through the Gardens Alive catalog and on-line. Diatomaceous earth provides additional protection and is a deterrent to ants and earwigs. For those who have declared war, a gooey product called Deadline is quite lethal. If applied to a wooden shingle and allowed to dry a little, it can then be turned over and placed in the garden where slugs can access the bait under the shingle without exposure to other types of wildlife and the shingle can be moved around the garden from day to day.

Perhaps my most alarming discovery in recent months is the regular appearance of deer on my property. Shrubs, perennials and meadow wildflowers have been neatly cropped and to my dismay, even a few recently purchased potted plants were suspiciously trimmed with telltale hoof prints by the water garden to verify the culprits. A sudden appearance of Bambi this week on my front lawn confirmed my worst fears that their population is continuing to grow. Deer are one of our most destructive foragers, devouring many of my personal favorites including hosta and daylilies. Woodchucks seem to be a minor menace once deer have ravaged your property. Although Chuck can be an ornery varmint, he seems to be rather specific in his preferences for vegetables, violets, phlox, coneflowers and asters, to name a few, while deer have a much more diversified menu which includes almost everything green. There are many suggestions for deterring these lovely creatures including the use of hot pepper wax sprays on your treasured plants, repellents containing fox or coyote urine, hanging bars of sweetly perfumed soap from yews and other shrubs they munch, tall fences, a good hunting dog, and a product call Deer-Off which has been highly recommended by many reliable sources. A bottle of tobasco sauce mixed with water in a pump sprayer and applied to special plants seems to help but must be reapplied after heavy rainfall.

Take a few moments this week to discover the wonders unfolding in your garden.

Task force OKs final village revitalization plan

Needs town approval before implementation

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

With a collective sigh of relief, the town Village Revitalization Task Force on Tuesday took its final votes on the general village renovation plan it will recommend to the town. While nothing revolutionary was approved — such as the previously considered one-way traffic pattern — the group will recommend a number of changes when it meets before selectmen this Tuesday.

"I've been working on this for three and a half years, so it's nice to finally get some decisions made," said task force chairman Tim O'Brien.

The changes include a delivery zone in front of the Texaco station, a formal sidewalk on the northbound-side of Elm Street, wider curb cuts in front of Cohasset News, and three "bump outs" along South Main Street that will anchor crosswalks and trees along the block.

The task force also unanimously voted to recommend new brick sidewalks throughout the village, and to build the long-proposed sidewalk along the section of South Main Street below St. Stephen's Church.

Along with O'Brien at the meeting were committee members Noel Ripley, Joe Coggins, Lucia Flibotte, Merle Brown and Town Planner Liz Harrington. Alita Dean of Cohasset Greenery and Ben Watson of Cohasset Hardware were also present.

The bad news is that the Elm Street changes could cost the village as many as 10 parking spaces because the new raised curb will prevent cars from parking on the sidewalk, as is the standard practice.

The main debate at the meeting, held in the Elm Street office of the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation — a private non-profit group interested in renovations to the village and harbor area — was between pedestrian accessibility on Elm Street and the need for parking.

Watson argued that the current Elm Street design works fine as is.

"The restrictions aren't there now, and it functions," he said.

But Brown, a town selectman, said the area is too heavily used not to have a formal sidewalk.

"I hate to lose parking spaces too, but we also have to look at the pedestrians. It's a major walkway

Field of dreams in focus

To cost $150K-plus

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The town Gravel Pit Reuse Committee hopes to go before this fall's special Town Meeting to ask for funds to construct the first of two Little League fields planned for the former town gravel pit site off North Main Street.

The field, which would be adjacent to Barnes Field, the current home to Cohasset Little League, could cost as much as $200,000, but the committee hopes to build the field for as little as $150,000.

The committee had originally asked Jef Fasser of the engineering firm BSC Group to estimate the cost of building two top-notch Little League fields, one of which could also serve as a softball field, renovating and asphalting the existing parking lot, and building a new 32-car lot. The estimate came in at an eye-popping $466,000 –too much for the reuse committee's tastes.

"I would say it's very high," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, with the rest of the committee concurring.

By not laying asphalt on the parking lots, and cutting in half the amount of gravel and topsoil used on the fields, the project would save more than $180,000. But the

Smoking in Legion questioned

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Smoking at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post could be snuffed out if the private club has to abide state and local anti-smoking laws because it's located in a town-owned building.

The town Board of Health is examining the issue after a complaint was filed that there was smoking going on in a public building. The post rents the Summer Street site from the town of Cohasset for $1 a year.

"They've always allowed smoking in there."
— Mary Jeanette Murray, Marine Corps veteran

The town has had a bylaw banning smoking in town-owned buildings on the books since 1989, said town Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

However, private clubs, which the American Legion is, are exempt from the town bylaw.

So the question is, which takes precedence – the fact it's a private club, or that it's in a town-owned building?

"Here's an apparent contradiction here," said Godzik. "It's basically a question of what prevails."

Parents, police not on same page

Views differ on teen drinking arrests

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It's summertime in Cohasset, schools out and many college kids are back home. And like most small towns, there isn't a lot for older teenagers to do.

Summer can also be a time when the police log expands to include the names of more minors – those under the age of 21 – who are arrested for being in possession of alcohol.

Police Chief Brian Noonan doesn't have all the answers. But he is sure of one thing — police aren't going to look the other way when teenagers mix with alcohol.

He also firmly disputes claims from some parents and teenagers that police are "out to get" the teens in town.

"Ninety-nine percent of the time, we are led to incidents," Noonan said. "We are not out there conducting search parties. That is just not the case."

But in a letter to the editor this week (see page 6), Bob and Mary Ernst, 17 Border St., ask what can be done to change the relationship between Cohasset police and the town's teens. They say they've heard for years that police "have it in for the teens," and are bothered by the fact their son reports that he and his friends are followed by the police when they drive around town.

"We are not out there conducting search parties. That is just not the case."
— Police Chief Brian Noonan

In another letter sent to Selectman Merle Brown, Noria Morales complains that police arrested her younger brother, Elan Morales, 19, a Hull resident, at Sandy Beach. Her brother was acting as a designated driver for three other minors, Noria Morales stated.

"I do not understand their treatment of a responsible, sober teenager whose only guilt was choosing to be with his friends," she wrote.

Noonan explained both beer and vodka were discovered in the vehicle. "He was certainly guilty of minor transport," he said. "And a designated driver doesn't mean driving someone around with alco-

Forest Avenue sidewalk planned

Could save $100K by buying materials in bulk

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

"I just don't think it makes any sense to start in the middle of Forest Avenue and end it at the beach."
— Selectman Ronnie McMorris.

Instead of building the new sidewalk along Forest Avenue in two phases, selectmen are looking to build it all at once.

Charlie Sanchez of the Norfolk County Engineers Office, presented preliminary drawings of "Phase I" of the new sidewalk, which would run from the Forest Avenue intersection with Jerusalem Road to Surry Drive. However, partially at the urging of local residents, the board asked Sanchez to come back with more detailed plans of a sidewalk running the street's full 6,000 feet.

"I just don't think it makes any sense to start in the middle of Forest Avenue and end it at the beach," said selectman Ronnie McMorris. "If anything we should start at the other end."

Other residents agreed that if just half the street was going to be done, it should be done going towards North Main Street, despite the fact that 65 percent of the street's residents live closer to the beach end.

"I really think the board should look at what Ronnie said about starting at the other end," said Trish Morrison, a Forest Avenue resident. "I'm more concerned with the safety of the children getting off the school bus, riding their bikes to the ball field, or to the village, people walking a loop around Wheelwright Park...I stand to lose three 70-foot oak trees, but I'll gladly sacrifice them for my children's safety."

The plan so far calls for the sidewalk to start on the north side of Forest Avenue, and then cross over to the south side after about 600 feet, or near the street's flashing lights. Sanchez said this is needed because blasting several granite outcroppings along the path would add "considerable cost" to the project. The town would also need small easements from the two houses at the Forest Avenue/Jerusalem Road intersection.

The sidewalk would be five-feet wide in most places, but as narrow as four feet where granite ledge restricts the width. For the most part, the sidewalk would be raised, with granite curbstones.

Sanchez placed a price-tag of between $142,000 and $200,000 on the first half of the sidewalk, depending on how much ledge has to be removed.

However, the cost of the entire project could drop to as little as $300,000 if the town bids the project through the South Shore Consortium. The consortium was created by the town managers of South Shore towns, such as Hingham, Hull, Weymouth, Norwell and Scituate, and allows them to buy supplies in bulk.

"We do joint purchasing so we can get a better bang for our buck," said Cohasset Town Manager Mark Haddad. He said the group had originally used its combined buying power for cheap prices on office supplies, but recently expanded it to Department of Public Works materials. He said, for example, the town recently received a good price the per ton cost of bituminous concrete.

As opposed to putting the project out for general bid, the plan is to bid separate portions of the project, such as the granite removal, the road paving, and pouring the sidewalks, and have Haddad act as the project manager.

By segmenting the project, the town could avoid paying the state prevailing wage, which could send the cost of the project higher.

Sanchez said the town could save as much as $100,000 by doing the project this way.

Right now the town has $92,000 set aside for sidewalk construction, and would need to go to Town Meeting to fund the rest of the project.

Sanchez is expected back before selectmen in September.

Cohasset Harbor walkway workshop July 31

The Cohasset Revitalization Corporation will host a Cohasset Harbor Walkway Public Design Workshop on Tuesday, July 31 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island.

Representatives of the Cecil Group, an urban landscape architectural firm, will present sidewalk improvement ideas for the creation of a safe pedestrian walkway around the perimeter of the harbor. CRC invites you to share your ideas on design elements created to address the demands of today's environment, and preserve the rich maritime history of the waterfront.

Items for discussion include an improved sidewalk design to provide a safe area for walkers, strollers, runners, and bikers of all ages and abilities; a review of the material options to be used; and an overview of additional amenities such as new railings and pedestrian scale lighting.

If you would like additional information, please contact the CRC office at (781) 383-2449.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m., Tuesdays.

Mercury poses health threats

The Massachusetts Interagency Mercury Task Force is beginning a statewide public awareness campaign to deliver a message to residents – mercury is toxic and must be handled carefully.

"Without the facts, it is easy to mishandle mercury," a recent letter to local communities from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) states. "Exposure to mercury can be harmful to your health."

Mercury is harmful to developing fetuses and children and can damage wildlife, including birds and fish.

More than 40 percent of the Commonwealth's lakes and ponds that have been tested contain fish with unsafe levels of mercury. These fish pose health threats to humans when they are eaten.

According to the EOEA, mercury must be removed from the solid waste stream so it does not continue to be released into the environment.

Further information about mercury and its safe disposal is available by calling the toll-free mercury hotline, 1-866-9MERCURY.

Hingham Lumber makes pitch for Route 3A move

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Hingham Lumber owner Tom McNulty made a 21st century presentation Monday, in his attempt to win Zoning Board of Appeals approval to move his landmark business to Cohasset.

On top of color design sketches of the buildings, he also brought along a full-size digitally created photograph of what the business would look like at its new Route 3A site, as well as a video presentation explaining the way the new drive-through warehouse would work.

McNulty, who owns the lumber yard with his brother John, was also scheduled to appear before the Planning Board Wednesday after the Mariner went to press.

If granted the necessary variances and permits, the 53-year old business is poised to become an important piece of the Route 3A business community.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said Tuesday, without knowing the nuts and bolts of the plan, that he didn't see any reasons why the town would block the move.

"It's a permitted use and would be a very nice fit," he said. "I don't want to prejudice the whole application – it could have some real snags. But I kind of sense that there aren't."

Along with adding to the town's undersized commercial tax base, the business would also develop a long-dormant tract of land, while complimenting other existing businesses along the stretch of road.

"In a very simplistic way, if you look at the area it's not something that is out of step with the parade," said Moore. "We already have two big operations selling landscape materials, and Hingham Lumber already sells to a lot of the Cohasset contractors."

Sohier Street resident Ron Goodwin spoke in support of the move during its hearing Monday.

"I've been doing business with them for 20 years and would love to see them move into town," he said.

"I've been doing business with them for 20 years and would love to see them move into town."
— Ron Goodwin, Sohier Street

The plan, as McNulty explained, is to build two new buildings on the 13.4 acre site. The first would be a 24,000 square foot, single level, wood-sided gabled structure, with front and rear entrances, and pillared porticos. It would house the main showroom and sales floor, as well as office and some storage space. The second building would be a massive 60,000 square foot drive-in metal warehouse, where customers could literally drive their vehicles in and pick up their supplies. The drive-through would be a one-way loop, surrounded by 40 parking spaces. Also inside the structure would be storage space for special orders and a small shop to custom-cut materials.

The warehouse was designed by Ron Johnson, who has designed similar structures in the region. McNulty said the only other similar warehouse in the area is in New Hampshire, and is smaller than the one he intends to build in Cohasset.

The issues before the ZBA involved whether the business would be an appropriate use in the Light Industry-zoned area, if there was enough parking for customers, and a small corner of the main store building which will infringe on a flood plain.

Project engineer Bill Buckley said a retention pond would be created to deal with any flooding issues, and the current drainage streams coming off the hill in the back of the site would be diverted around the rear of the warehouse building and into an existing retention pond.

The board also quickly ruled that the retail business is considered an acceptable use under Light Industry zoning standards.

And even though the issue isn't expected to hold up proceedings, the board did enter into a long discussion about the site's parking plan.

The traditional rule of thumb, the board said, is one parking spot per every 100 square feet of retail space, meaning Hingham Lumber would be required to build 240 parking spaces for its main showroom and retail store. However, a business is allowed to build just two-thirds of the required spaces, as long as there is a contingency plan to expand later if needed. McNulty took this latter path and plans to build a 160-space parking lot, with the ability for an additional 80 spaces in the rear.

But the ZBA was more concerned if there would be enough parking at the large warehouse building, where there are no plans for parking beyond the 40 spaces inside the structure.

McNulty was confident the 40 spaces would be enough to handle the daily volume of customers.

"I think the efficiency [of the operation] will offset the lower number of spaces," he said. "It will require a bit of policing by our employees, but it will be more efficient."

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick argued that the board could logically subtract the space dedicated to parking inside of the building from the total square footage count, because it already is parking. Using that method, the lumberyard would meet the guideline with its proposed 40 spaces.

Board member Jane Goedecke said if McNulty was comfortable with the amount of spaces in the warehouse, which is where he makes his money, then the board should be comfortable also.

Project traffic engineer Jack McGill said the business could add up to 1,600 car trips per day to Route 3A, up from 900 at its current site on Summer Street in Hingham. However, McGill said despite the increase, the area would still meet state traffic guidelines, and be an "acceptable" increase in the eyes of MassHighway.

Board member Ben Lacy said if the state was happy with the traffic increase then it shouldn't be an issue for the zoning board.

"If it meets the state guidelines and is an acceptable use, then I have nothing to say," he said.

McNulty said he currently is open from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., but hopes to expand his hours to 7:30 p.m.

He also unveiled a sketch for the site's new sign, to be carved by Hassan sign. It will replace the billboard currently advertising Kimball's By the Sea. The sign won't be illuminated, but will have two small spotlights on it.

McNulty told the Hingham Journal last week that the business will keep its name and not change to "Cohasset Lumber."

The board voted to close the hearing, but asked McNulty to come back for a review of the sign.

Hagerty park nears completion

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Hagerty Property Committee chairman Russ Bonetti said work on the new waterfront park on Parker Avenue has progressed to the point that about all the committee has left to do is argue about a name.

So far the possible names range from the simple "Bailey's Creek Park," to the tongue-in-cheek "Never-Again-Volunteer-for-a-Town-Committee Park," he added jokingly.

At times, the committee has been exasperated by the project, which has taken nearly nine years to complete.

The 29-space parking lot has been raised and leveled, and awaits the final layer of crushed stone.

After the town bought the former Cohasset Colonial Furniture site in 1993, the committee endured a permitting process with the Army Corps of Engineers that lasted years.

But now, three weeks after construction started, the park stands more than half completed.

"It's going great," Bonetti said this week.

The 29-space parking lot has been raised and leveled, and awaits the final layer of crushed stone. The stone rip-rap at both the front and side of the lot has been completed, although with a hitch.

"The rocks in the side rip-rap aren't as big as we thought they were going to be," said Bonetti. "But I think it's sufficient for what we have, there's no real wave action, or we wouldn't have grass growing in there."

Contractors have also framed the wooden walkway leading from the site over to Government Island, and work on a new 100-foot town pier is about halfway complete.

Granite curbing has also been installed around the parking lot. The entire project will cost about $265,000. Town Meeting approved $200,000 for the project last fall, but had to approve another $75,000 in the spring, when project bids came in much higher than anticipated.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said a formal ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held sometime later this year.

Cohasset Harbor Walkway Public Design Workshop

Tuesday, July 31
7:30 pm
At the Cohasset Lightkeepers Residence

Representatives of the Cecil Group, an urban landscape architectural firm, will present sidewalk improvement ideas for the creation of a safe pedestrian walkway around the perimeter of the harbor.

We invite you to share your ideas on design elements created to address the demands of today's environment, and preserve the rich maritime history of the waterfront.

✓ An improved sidewalk, designed to provide a safe area for walkers, strollers, runners, and bikers of all ages and abilities.

✓ Sidewalk materials: Stamped Concrete - Bluestone - Brick - Asphalt

✓ Amenities such as new railings and pedestrian scale lighting.

If you would like additional information, please contact the CRC Office at 781-383-2449.

Jacqueline Chase graduates from St. Paul School in Hingham with many honors

SUMMER THOUGHTS

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone? The weather that we have been having has been so nice that I am sure you are all enjoying it in some way, shape or form. Even when we get a little rain it passes quickly, the grass and flowers are happy and the sun comes back again soon after. I am still having a tough time with not being able to slow down time a bit and enjoy life a little more. It always seems as if at the end of the day there is still 10 more things that need to be done and I am left saying, "where did the time go today?" It is in those moments of frustration that I try to reflect on what little things happened during the day that I overlooked and should have taken more time to enjoy and am then able to say, "it was a really great day." Have a great week and take the time to really appreciate all the little things as they tend to make the big things more manageable.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

I have to start this column by wishing two friends a very happy birthday in the upcoming week. Jean Bailey, who is getting married this year and Peggy Litchfield are both turning 35 on the 22nd and 24th respectively.(ok, I turned 35 this past week as well and am indeed, the oldest of the three, YUCK!) I want to wish both of you a very happy birthday! Also celebrating a big birthday this past week on July 17 was Miss Kaleigh Hart who turned FIVE years old. Happy birthday big girl!

ST. PAUL GRAD

We have a lot of school news to report again this week, what a lot of talented and hard-working people here in our town. Jacqueline Chase recently graduated from St. Paul School in Hingham with many honors. Jacqueline received an outstanding achievement in math and literature, The Presidents Education Award, The General Excellence Award and became a Notre Dame Scholar. In addition to all of this, she sang the Ave Maria at the ceremony and really made sure that there was not a dry eye in the crowd. Congratulations to you Jacqueline, your family is so very proud of all that you have done and will continue to do in the future.

NEW TEACHER

Gary and Debbie Anderson are two very proud parents as they well should be. Their daughter, Katherine, graduated from Plymouth State College with a teaching degree in Elementary Education with honors! Katherine will join both her parents in a field that always needs wonderful and dedicated professionals to teach children. Congratulations, Katherine!

PRINCETON GRAD

Michelle Buckley, daughter of Beverly Buckley of Cohasset, recently graduated cum laude from Princeton University where she majored in history and minored in German. She has also been chosen as recipient of a scholarship to continue her studies abroad in Germany this upcoming year. The graduation festivities were also attended by fellow Cohasset residents, Joe and Ruth Nedrow. Congratulations, Michelle and the best of luck in all your future endeavors.

BATES GRADUATE

Bates College, in Lewiston, Maine recently held its commencement ceremonies and Burke Z. Davis, formerly of Cohasset and now living in Scituate graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in economics. Burke was a dean's list student, a member of the men's basketball team from 1997-1999 and he was a volunteer for the Bates Emergency Medical Services. He participated in the Steel Pan Ensemble during Short Term 1999. A 1997 graduate of CHMS, Burke is the son of Roy and Elaine Davis, who are very proud of his accomplishments in college. Great job, Burke.

DEAN'S LIST

Robert Vanderpool, son of John and Geraldine Vanderpool of Cohasset, was named to the dean's list for the spring 2001 semester at Saint Michael's College located in the Burlington area of Vermont. Robert is a senior business administrations major and a graduate of CMHS. Fantastic, Robert.

PRESIDENT'S LIST

Matthew Keefe, a student at Plymouth State College in New Hampshire, was named to the President's List for achieving a GPA of 3.7 or better during the spring semester of the 2000-2001 academic year. Another hard working student, great job!

ON STAGE

Lindsay Feig of Cohasset, center, performs in "The Five-Pound Sack," a one-act play on stage last spring at Thayer Middle School.

UMASS HONORS

There was a number of students from Cohasset who are attending UMASS Amherst who were named to the dean's list for the Spring Semester, 2001. Bronwen Daley, Liz Hassan, William Kearney, Ashley Koed, Meredith O'Hayre, Sergei Skorupa and Laura Slotnick all received that honor. Fantastic work to all of you, it was definitely well deserved.

NOBLES SCHOLARS

John Edward Lubitz, Joseph M. Palone, both seniors, and Kayvon Tehranian, a freshman, attending Noble and Greenough School also received academic honors for their performances for the spring semester, 2001. John and Joseph received Distinction Honors and Kayvon received Highest Distinction for the work that they did while in school. Congratulations gentlemen on a job well done.

DEAN'S LIST

Westfield State College is the next stop for a bit of news from their school. John Considine, a social sciences major was named to the dean's list at this school for the spring semester, 2001. Again, another job very well done.

Connecticut College named two Cohasset students to its spring semester dean's list. Stephen Mark Reynolds, Class of 2003, achieved dean's high honors and Elizabeth Cecilia Thomas, Class of 2001, achieved dean's honors. Great job to both of you on this accomplishment.

TUFTS DEGREE

Rebecca Jenkins of Cohasset recently earned her degree during the commencement ceremonies of Tufts University. Congratulations Rebecca, your family I am sure are very proud of your accomplishments.

ASSUMPTION GRADS

Last but certainly not least, Assumption College in Worcester also had two Cohasset students who received their degrees from this school. Robert Patrick Buckley and Courtney Phyllis Goff graduated from this school on May 19, 2001. Fantastic news!

TEEN HELPERS

I want to make sure to recognize many of the high school and college students who are working and/or volunteering time this summer to work with the young children in our town. The Swim Center, Sailing Club, Yacht Club, Recreation Programs and more are all very fortunate to have such fine young people dedicating their time to this. We, as parents, really need to make sure that they hear our praise when appropriate as it sure helps to make the summer safe and enjoyable for us all. I know that my children and the children in my care really think that it is "so cool" to have teens working with them wherever they may be. So often we hear of the negative behaviors that are going on within the teenage years, this is just a thank you and a bit of praise to all of you for the hard work that you are doing.

SENIOR FUN

To all the seniors in town, you have some wonderful opportunities coming up in the months of July and August to enjoy at the Cohasset Elder Affairs. Wed, July 25 with transportation provided is the Glastonbury Abbey Senior Picnic at 11:30 a.m.. Pickup is at St. Anthony's parking lot. Thursday, Aug. 9 is the South Shore Elders Affair Picnic, also with transportation provided being held at the Nantasket Beach Pavilion. Pickup is at 10 a.m.. The Fall Season's Open Rehearsals for the Boston Symphony takes place on Thursday Mornings. Names are being taken for this and the cost for four tickets and bus transportation is only $120. Call the center for reservations. If you would like to visit the Marshfield Senior Day on Tuesday, Aug. 21, the times are from 1-3:30 p.m. with free admission. Transportation is provided. On Wednesday, Sept. 26, you can attend the Jacqueline Kennedy Exhibit at the JFK Library for $11. Transportation is available for $5 and the tour begins at 9:30 am. Please call the center for tickets to this wonderful event.

MEDICAL RIDES

Please also remember that medical rides are available to surrounding communities, Mondays through Thursdays with a suggested $5 donation. Special transportation is available for Boston appointments on a limited basis. Call 781-383-0220 for Boston Service. Van service is available here in town as well by calling with a 24-hour advance notice to 781-383-9112.

VOLUNTEER AT SENIOR CENTER

Here is a wonderful way for people to do some very worthwhile volunteering within our town. The Cohasset Elder Affairs Office is looking for people of any age who are interested in improving the quality of life of older people by helping out at the center. The nature of work and the time commitment is flexible consisting from answering phones, helping in the kitchen or driving the van once a month. You could also help with the monthly newsletter and many other ways. There is a stipend available for people 60 years and older who are interested in working 15-20 hours a week in the office. College students are welcome during the summer. Cohasset Elders Affairs is a community based program and our volunteers are the most valuable resource to this wonderful program. Please call 781-383-9112 for more information and ask for Kathy, Tish or Carol.

POSITIVE THOUGHTS

I want to end this week's column with a few thoughts of mine about volunteering and the importance of it. When people of any age take the time to volunteer for whatever group or organization it may be, they do so for many reasons. Most of the time, it is for a group or organization that they believe in and want to commit some of their time and efforts to it. Yes, sometimes we make mistakes, are not too organized with it or need to learn the ropes. The thing for us all to remember is that the time and effort given is FREE and when criticism is the only comments that are heard, many will just turn and walk away. Constructive criticism is a good thing, praise is a wonderful thing and we all need to take that extra effort to recognize and appreciate the work that a person is doing. As someone who has been in the shoes of a volunteer many time, I know the pain that can happen when your every move is watched and some not so nice comments are made. I also know how hard it is to fit it all in and am really making strides to find the right balance of volunteering for me in my life. I ask for and want all constructive criticism as that is how I learn but I also every now and then would like to hear some positives about the things that I do. Because I feel that way, I am trying very hard to do that with others because the bottom line is, without volunteers, many of our much needed and beneficial programs would not be here. To all of us who do volunteer, thank you and please know that you are truly appreciated even when things happen and mistakes are made, pick up the pieces if you can and just move forward! It definitely makes a difference!

High school offers MCAS prep course

By Amanda E. Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset High School received a Massachusetts state grant to run a free summer program to help students prepare for next year's Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) tests.

The Academic Support grant has enabled the school to administer two, eight-session classes in math and language arts for rising sophomores who will take the MCAS next spring. A third-grade reading program is also being held under this grant.

The math program, taught by middle school math teacher Elizabeth Beatson, ended today. The grant provided Beatson with a series of 12 workbooks, designed for the MCAS by the standardized testing service Kaplan, Inc., for the students, with each book covering a different area of mathematics. Beatson said the language arts program, which begins Monday, will also use similar Kaplan workbooks.

The books included practice tests and exercises that the class worked through under the guidance of Beatson, who said she is going to let the students keep the workbooks and hopes they will remember to review them before they take the tests next year.

Ruth Fennessey, curriculum coordinator at the high school, said the programs are for students who were in need of more assistance, based on their eighth-grade MCAS results. Fennessey said those teaching the summer programs were given the participating students' eight-grade tests and scores, allowing the teachers to work one-on-one with students in their specific areas of weakness.

The material covered in the course was information students saw on the eighth-grade tests. Rather than studying information they learned in their freshmen year, Beatson said the course reviewed and strengthened the students' skills in areas in which they previously had trouble.

With only five students in the math program, Beatson was able to meet individually with each student, reviewing the actual questions from the test that they missed.

Holly Bilodeau said the course was helpful for this reason.

"We've learned all the mistakes we made in past and we've learned how to correct them," Holly said.

Beatson said the two weeks allotted for the course was just not long enough.

"It's a totally inadequate amount of time," she said.

Beatson said she would have liked a lengthier course because it would have allowed her to meet individually with the students more often and for longer periods of time.

Not only were the students strengthening their math skills, they also learned how to take standardized tests, like the MCAS.

Caitlin Gontarz said, at first, she was reluctant to take the course but is pleased with the way it went.

"We're learning how to take the MCAS," Caitlin said. "Ms. Beatson gave us tips on how to approach different types of questions we'll see on the test."

Though it was a class, Beatson acknowledged that it is summer vacation for the students and tried to throw in some fun for them. For example, as the class was held in a middle-school computer lab, Beatson often gave the students time to run through math programs and games on the computers.

She also had a guessing game, in which she thought of a number and the students had to ask her questions, such as is the figure odd or even or what do its digits add up to, to make educated guesses. While this gave the students a break from the workbook exercises, it also taught them to think through problems. And, as with any other game, Beatson even gave out prizes, lollipops, when they correctly guessed the number.

"For some reason, they don't mind sugar this early in the morning," she said, as she passed out the sweets.

The grant for the summer sessions expires at the end of August, but the school plans to run similar classes during the academic year, Fennessey said.

MCAS are high-stakes tests mandated under the state Education Reform Act. This year's tenth-graders – the Class of 2003 – will have to pass the language arts and math exams in order to graduate.

Law won't dress up local school halls

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Even though the state House of Representatives approved a bill last week that would allow local school boards to set dress codes, don't expect to see mandatory blazers and neckties in Cohasset school hallways anytime soon.

Aside from the occasional boy wearing a pair of low-hanging, loose-fitting jeans or a midriff-baring girl — the town schools haven't had a problem with inappropriate dress, school officials say.

"It's really not a big problem," said Cohasset Middle/High School assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo.

The bill clarifies an earlier law regarding school dress codes, said state Rep. Garrett Bradley, who voted in favor of it. "The bill doesn't mandate this has to happen, but that if a school board wants to, it can take it up," he said. "It clears up an ambiguity in the law, and gives the power to set a code to the local communities."

But enacting a strict dress code hasn't been raised with the Cohasset School Committee, and members see no reason to bring it up themselves.

"Nothing has ever been discussed about it before, no one has ever brought it up as an issue," said chairwoman Stephanie Noble. She considers the current school dress code sufficient.

DeLorenzo said there is a dress code that is spelled out in the school handbook and it isn't abused by the students. The dress code discusses being neat, clean and being dressed appropriately without getting into specifics, he said. There is a rule about no hats at the middle school. Hats are allowed in the high school but individual teachers can tell kids to remove them in class.

Noble sees no reason to tighten the rules.

> "No one has ever brought it up as an issue."
> — Stephanie Noble, school committee chairwoman

"It has been monitored at the high school very well," she said. "Kids have been sent home, and they have half an hour to get back home and change.

"I feel it has been very well enforced and haven't felt the need to make any further rules."

Dress codes have already been instituted in several Boston public schools, where concerns about students wearing gang colors, or clothes distracting to other students have made dress codes necessary.

However, in Cohasset where more conservative shops such as, Abercrombie & Fitch and the Gap reign supreme among students, the idea of a dress code isn't among the school committee's priorities.

"We have other issues, such as trying to build two new schools, that need our attention rather than a dress code," said board vice-chairman Rick Flynn.

"Given the state of our schools I don't think it's as much of an issue as it is in other places where its used to create more sense of discipline."

Noble pointed out a recent CHS graduate that often wore "interesting outfits" and frequently dyed her hair different colors, but was a National Honor Society student.

The bill still faces a test in the Senate.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, who attended Hingham public schools, views the bill differently than his counterpart in the House, Bradley, who attended Boston College High School, which has a stricter dress code.

"I've agonized over this for a long time. The Libertarian in me doesn't like the concept, but it does set a level of decorum that adds to the learning environment," he said.

Hedlund remembered going to speak to a class in Hingham High School and seeing every male student in the class wearing a baseball cap.

"You couldn't see the face of a single kid in there," he recalled.

But Hedlund's experience still doesn't overrule his sense of individualism.

"When it comes time to vote, I'll probably sit back and listen to the arguments and then make up my mind," he said.

European carillonneur to give recital

The 76th anniversary series of summer carillon recitals from the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church continue Sunday, July 22 at 6 p.m. A performance by Auke de Boer, City Carillonneur of Dokkum, The Netherlands with a program to include original music for carillon by Albert de Klerk, Romke de Waard, Ronald Barnes and Robert Bymes will be performed. Transcriptions from the works of Dowland, Marais, J.C.F. Bach, Mozart, Dvorák and arrangements of popular tunes will also be heard.

The carillon recital will take place, rain or shine; in case of inclement weather, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Blankets, lawn chairs and picnic suppers are invited.

Printed programs may be found in the wooden stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue and will also be distributed on the Common and at other listening places. These list the recital schedules and brochures describing the carillon. At the close of the recital, interested listeners are invited to gather in the Highland Avenue courtyard for a tour of the tower and demonstration of the instrument.

For information, call Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599; or the church office at 781-383-1083.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The greatest generation

If you haven't already done so, you ought to head down to the former Hingham Shipyard and buy a copy of the video, "The Hingham Shipyard Remembered."

The 30-minute documentary is guaranteed to fill your heart with pride and bring tears to your eyes. The film, produced by Powderhouse Productions, features local people, who lived through World War II, telling the story of an incredible war effort launched just down the road in Hingham.

For as long as most of us can remember, the Bethlehem Hingham Shipyard has represented a marina and an eclectic collection of other businesses and aging, rusting buildings — the centerpiece of which is massive 500,000 square-foot General Services Administration structure. To many commuters, the shipyard is just a place to park and catch the boat to Boston.

But we certainly didn't realize — and suspect most of you did not — the scope of what took place there during the war years when no less than 227 ships were built at the site. In its heyday, the shipyard employed some 25,000 workers.

In the newspaper business, good journalists know when to get out of the way of a story and let it tell itself. What director Harry Gural has accomplished is just that. He allows the "stars", people like Ian Menzies, a British sailor at the time; local author Peg Charleton, and Stan Hersey, who worked in the steel mill there, and others talk about how Hingham, a small agricultural town with less than one-third the population it has today, rose to the occasion. The film also explains how the Navy "found" Hingham and how the ships — destroyer escorts and landing ship tanks — were assembled so quickly.

"It was like a big family — a feeling I don't think will ever be realized again in America," recalls Mr. Hersey, about the shipyard era. "Freedom was at stake and everyone gave their all."

The film captures the innocence of the times. An era when so many had suffered through the Great Depression but still had faith in their country and shared the values of hard work, determination and dedication.

The documentary, which will be part of the curriculum in Hingham schools, deserves a wider audience.

Now, the time has come to redevelop the shipyard and transform the waterfront once again into a new, vibrant, bustling place. The $150 million project includes 500 upscale residential units; improved marina facilities; 20 acres of private and public open space; an improved commuter boat facility and more.

But thanks to the developers and the Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation, area citizens including those who will someday occupy the shipyard condominiums, won't forget how local members of what Tom Brokaw calls "The Greatest Generation" made a contribution on that same piece of waterfront property that helped turn the tide of the war.

"Hingham Shipyard Remembered" is a wonderful story told by those who lived through a pivotal time in world history. Their legacy is captured for posterity in a documentary that leaves us filled with admiration and the hope that if duty calls, we could live up to their example.

Copies of Hingham Shipyard Remembered are available at the marina store next to the Hingham Bay Club for $19.42. Checks should be made out to the Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation. For more information, call 781-449-5600, ext. 4.

Police and teens

TO THE EDITOR:

As parents of teenagers, we are keenly aware of the concerns regarding our children's safety and those of the community. However, we are troubled by the manner in which the teenagers view our local police force. We believe this attitude stems, in part, from the way the police appear to handle our teenagers.

We have heard for years that the police seem to "have it in" for the teens; looking for opportunities to catch them "in the act", laying-in-wait outside of parties, even giving preferential treatment to select kids. We found this hard to believe, living in such a small town, where the police have traditionally been our ally.

In no way do we condone or accept illegal behavior by our children. Such behavior is handled swiftly and strictly in our home.

We are bothered by the fact that our oldest son, on numerous occasions, has been in friends' cars, driving around town, only to be followed by a police car three or four times in the course of an evening. Is this standard operating procedure?

Our teenagers have no place to gather; the beach parking lot is off limits, the teen center is for a younger age group. This situation seems to send kids to their cars to drive around town. What can we do about this situation? But more importantly, what can be done to change the relationship between the police and our teens?

Having grown up in a small town, I'm aware that it is possible for law enforcement and kids to respect and be considerate of each other. We are not asking the police to look the other way, only to remember that we were all teenagers once. Wouldn't it be better if all authority figures tried to help the kids through this difficult time in their lives? As parents, we teach our children that the police are there "to serve and protect". How can we return to that attitude here in our town of Cohasset?

Bancroft Hall resident fees

TO THE EDITOR:

The non-profit Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation charges "market rates" to non-residents for functions at Bancroft Hall.. This, plus our apartment rentals, provides sufficient revenue that Cohasset residents pay only a nominal fee, and local non-profit organizations no fee. This fee structure recognizes that the building is leased to us by the Town, and that almost all the funds for reconstruction were donated by Cohasset residents. (Initially, we charged the same rate for everybody, which was not especially popular with residents).

Sadly, a few Cohasset residents are willing to front for a non-resident, thus escaping the non-resident fee. In effect, the Lightkeepers Corporation, and the residents and non-profit we subsidize, are cheated out of the difference in fees, which difference may be $600.

We may have to increase resident rates slightly, primarily because of increased operating expense, but of course the economics are affected if there is much evasion of revenues. (Non-resident rates are a good bargain compared with many other facilities, but probably can't be increased without losing enough bookings to offset the increase).

If a resident initiates the hosting of an event for a non-resident relative, (and assumes full responsibility for the event), we would not press for the non-resident fee. However, it is improper for a resident to be used as a front for a non-resident, simply to evade the non-resident fee.

Designated driver

Dear Merle Brown:

On June 22,, my younger brother and three friends were on Cohasset Beach. Three of them were drinking; my brother was not. He is a 19-year-old man working full-time at a computer design and print firm, as well as working as a freelance artist. He owns a car he bought with his own savings. He does not drink, and that Friday night, my brother was serving as designated driver for his three friends.

Cohasset police came by and arrested the small group of four. The three girls were charged with underage drinking; my brother, who offered to take a breathalyzer test but was refused, was arrested, for apparently standing too close to an open container. My brother was taken into custody and kept in a tiny cell for almost three hours before they let him pay his $25 bail and walk, alone, in the middle of the night, back to his car, which was parked at Cohasset Beach.

On Monday, my brother appeared in court and was found guilty of, yes, standing too close to an open container. The judge ordered him to pay a $50 fine and take a class about underage drinking and drunk driving. The other girls were fined the same. My brother's words were filled with frustration when he said, "I might as well have been drinking."

We are constantly coping with the problem of underage drinking and drunk driving. Teenagers drink, we have resigned ourselves to that fact. (Anyone hear of Barbara and Jenna Bush?) But not all teenagers drink. I understand that our police force must deal with the problem face to face, and this becomes a difficult and tiring task. I do not understand, however, their treatment of a responsible, sober teenager whose only guilt was choosing to be with his friends. Does this mean he can be thrown in jail for standing next to someone who is having a beer at a concert? When I have a summer cookout, should I tell him not to come, for fear of being arrested? To what extent can this ridiculously ambiguous law be interpreted by over-zealous law enforcers? And since when has it become a good idea to punish those teenagers who "just say no?"

I can't help but share a nagging thought that is equally uncomfortable in its meaning. My brother and his friends are from Hull, a town whose children are more often than not looked at with a suspicious eye. Hull kids have a reputation as troublemakers, no-gooders, and when they're found in a town like Cohasset, this reputation is magnified ten-fold. If these were Cohasset kids in the same situation, they would be sent home with a slap on the wrist. I'm sure it didn't help my brother that he is a six-foot male. His personal style includes dreadlocks and clothing of his own design. His last name is Spanish and his first name is French. Whether his arrest was partly a case of racial and demographic stereotypes, I don't know.

I do know that my brother is one of the most unique individuals I have ever known, and it saddens me to realize that he was found guilty for it.

I offer some advice not only to the Cohasset Police Department, but to a society whose efforts to repress such vices as drinking, drugs, and sex have perversely retarded effects. We will never win a war if we don't support our soldiers.

Dismayed at uncalled-for attack

TO THE EDITOR:

We are writing to support the current form of municipal government that the Town of Cohasset presently administers. In our view, a municipal government lead by a professional public administrator in conjunction with a board of elected officials is a necessity in the complicated world that cities and towns must negotiate.

We were dismayed while watching a recent Board of Selectmen's meeting to witness the aftermath of an unwarranted attack on the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen. One disturbing aspect of the attack was based on the complainant's belief that he had a right to dictate how public policy should be conducted based on his family's roots in the community. Cohasset is an incorporated municipality within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, not a feudal kingdom. All citizens have a right to be heard, but they must operate with the governmental structure of the town. While we acknowledge multi-generational Cohasset families, we are taxpayers too, and urge the Town's governmental bodies to continue to make decisions in the best interest of all residents.

Grants appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Historical Society wishes to thank the Boston Marine Society and the South Shore Music Circus for their generous grants to the society.

As many people know, we are currently raising funds for capital improvements for the Wilson House, Maritime Museum and the Lothrop House. We welcome contributions from the community-at-large.

The society has a wealth of archives for members and visitors to use. The Lothrop House is open Wednesday afternoons for archive work and visiting. The Wilson House and Maritime Museum are open afternoons, Tuesdays through Sundays.

Cohasset's history is long and varied and we have it here for all to share.

Library project becomes lobbying project

By Patience G. Towle and Sheila S. Evans
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

COMMENTARY

The Cohasset library project has become a lobbying project! While many knowledgeable persons are virtually certain that the Legislature will include funds for Library Construction Grants in the Supplemental Budget expected to be passed in late summer, there are no guarantees. At a Library Rally at the State House in Boston on Wednesday, July 11, 16 Cohasset Library Trustees and friends, among many others, were told Massachusetts' political leaders must be inundated with letters and telephone calls in favor of funding for Library Construction Grants in the Supplemental Budget. Legislators must be told that public libraries are fundamental to continuing, lifelong education for all; old Massachusetts' library buildings cannot provide 21st century library services; 36 towns' plans for improved library buildings have been approved for Library Construction Grants; and funds are urgently needed to begin these projects.

It would be wonderful if many Cohasset residents were to telephone or write some or all of the following Massachusetts leaders about the importance of funding Library Construction Grants in the Supplemental Budget:

Acting Governor: Her Excellency Jane Swift 617-727-3600
State House, Room 360, Boston, MA 02133
Senate President: Hon.Thomas F. Birmingham 617-722-1500
State House, Room 332, Boston, MA 02133
Senate Majority Leader: Linda J. Melconian 617-722-1660
State House, Room 333, Boston, MA 02133
Senate Minority Leader: Brian P. Lees 617-722-1291
State House, Room 308, Boston, MA 01233
Speaker of the House: Thomas M. Finneran 617-722-2500
State House, Room 356, Boston, MA 02133
House Majority Leader: William P. Nagle, Jr. 617-722-2600
State House, Room 343, Boston, MA 02133
House Minority Leader: Francis L. Marini 617-722-2100
The Hon. Mark C. Montigny, Chairman 617-722-1481
Senate Committee on Ways and Means
State House, Room 212, Boston, MA 02133
The Hon. John H. Rogers, Chair 617-722-2990
House Committee on Ways and Means
State House, Room 243, Boston, MA 02133

Gifts to the Cohasset Library Building Fund continue to bring the total for the public appeal closer to its goal of at least $300,000. Between June 19 and July 11, the following persons brought this total to about $280,000. Combined with the more than $800,000 secured earlier, the $1.1 million needed is very near. New donors include: Kristen and Andrew Astley, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Barunas, Jr., Thomas and Rebecca Behenna, Blanche Buckley, Mary Beth and Steve Carrier, Thomas and Mary Cowan, Nancy and Ralph Froio, Dr. Sandra Jacobson and Ron Hammer, Robert and Margaret Hillman, Sam and Liz Knox, Mary E. Londergan, James and Marilyn Morrison, Jr., Stephanie and Howard Noble, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Odermatt, Sean and Nancy Teague, Robert and Sabina Troy, and one Anonymous.

Gifts of $1,000 or more will be permanently displayed on the Donor Wall of the new library. Names will be listed in broad "giving categories" by size of gift. All donors will be listed in a final campaign report. The Library Building Fund plans to publish the names of new donors to the Building Fund on a regular basis. If you did not receive a Library Building Fund appeal, please call Patience Towle at (781) 383-1954.

Library Trustees Patience Towle and Sheila Evans are also president and secretary, respectively, of the library building fund..

HEALTH NOTES

House size, public health and septic systems

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, the Board of Health has received a number of requests relating to variances for septic systems which involved increased house size as a part of a renovation. Sometimes the request accompanies an increase in wastewater treatment capacities; sometimes the house is to be torn down and a replacement situated on the same lot. Each request is different and must be evaluated on the merits of the specific case. There are, however federal, state and town rules and regulations covering the vast majority of cases upon which the board must decide. The purpose of the rules is to preserve the quality of the groundwater and to prevent the entry of pollutants into the environment from wastewater from homes.

Studies have shown that an entire area can be polluted by deficient or improperly operating septic systems. Such was the case in Linden and Rustic drives where almost every measurement taken of the groundwater indicated unacceptable (unhealthy) levels of microbiological pollution in the groundwater. This is the reason that the Linden Drive area was one of the first outside the Straits Pond Watershed region to be sewered. In one case, a house foundation was cracked by blasting for a new sewer, and the basement was flooded with polluted groundwater to the point that the owner had to evacuate the house. Fortunately, the damage was repaired, but it will be some time before monitoring of the groundwater in the Linden Drive area will indicate normal levels of bacterial activity.

Title 5 of the Code of Massachusetts Regulations (CMR) is the primary regulation governing on-site wastewater treatment and disposal systems. It is a broad, far-reaching regulation, sufficiently flexible and well designed to be of great value in preserving our groundwater. The rules within the regulation are too complex to be discussed in this article, but we can discuss how the Board of Health applies the regulations.

Each request is different and must be evaluated on the merits of the specific case.

Every sale of an unsewered house must be accompanied by a so-called Title 5 inspection to ensure the proper operation of the septic system. Anyone building or modifying a septic system in Cohasset must have a hearing before the Board of Health to describe the planned design of the wastewater treatment system to be used. Together with expertise supplied by Joe Godzik, the town's health officer, the board decides whether the planned wastewater treatment facility is satisfactory, and the new system meets Title 5 requirements. Two criteria must be met for an existing system to be granted a variance to Title 5 requirements. The proposed system must provide equal environmental protection at least equivalent to a Title 5 system, and the owner must demonstrate that denial of a variance to Title 5 represents a manifest injustice to the owner. Sometimes, because of topography or area restrictions on the plot, it would not be possible to build a fully compliant Title 5 system where a system had been before. In this case, the board usually approves a system which uses either innovative/alternative technology or practices known to improve the performance of Title 5 systems such as pressure dosing or use of an effluent filter. In many cases, the manifest injustice is based on financial considerations, and depending on the importance of the variance, the system may only barely meet Title 5 requirements. Certain variances must also be approved by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection

In the many cases of expansions of existing homes, however, three and four bedroom homes are increasing foot area by as much as 50 percent. In most cases there are no new bedrooms, but new libraries or studies or great rooms, etc., are added. Title 5 bases the size of the septic system on the number of bedrooms in a house until the room count reaches nine rooms, and then the number of rooms is counted, divided by two and rounded down. This number represents the "number of bedrooms" and the septic system must be sized accordingly. The board has seen plans for 40-foot living rooms and family rooms in three bedroom houses. In some cases these houses are on grandfathered lots which do not meet size requirements mandated by current zoning.

It has been said that it is the responsibility of the board to ensure that the septic system prevents pollution of groundwater, and not use the regulations to do zoning. The board agrees, but when a house expansion covers an area that would otherwise permit storm water to enter the ground and reduce pollutants in the groundwater, then it becomes a health issue. The board's practice is to carefully review variances on systems with house expansions and to decline to approve them where there is no manifest injustice in so doing.

The start of a master plan for Cohasset

By Rick Swanborg
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

COMMENTARY

The Cohasset Growth and Development Committee was established by Selectmen in 2000 to develop a town-wide consensus on how to best achieve a sustainable future for Cohasset. There are many reasons for developing a master plan, including:

- the need for us to develop a long-term strategy for the future of the community
- to provide direction on how we might change a variety of laws to better manage our future.
- access to state grant-based incentives for towns engaged in comprehensive planning.

Several surrounding communities, including Hingham, Duxbury, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate, to name a few, have recently found the Master Planning process invaluable in creating a dialogue amongst many community voices to shape a vision for the future of their town.

Initially, we had to address some basic questions:

- What do the best master plans look like?
- What is the best process for creating a Master Plan?

We began by researching best and worst practices, planning techniques and the final deliverables most towns provided. This included discussion with communities close to our own and Internet searches across America (as far away as Boulder, Colo.). This helped us in identifying the following components of a comprehensive master plan:

- Goals and Policies Statement
- Land Use Analysis and Plan
- Housing Market Analysis and Plan
- Economic Development Plan
- Natural and Cultural Resources Plan
- Open Space and Recreation Plan
- Service and Facilities Plan
- Traffic/Circulation/Transportation Plan

Over time we intend to address many of these components by engaging the Cohasset community in a planning process, working with a variety of town committees and better understanding local, regional and state influences on Cohasset's future.

We need your help

In addition to these components, there was considerable discussion of the process for building the consensus of a long-range plan. Critical to this was the understanding that the citizens of Cohasset really set the direction and vision for the town. Getting your input, desires, expectations and vision in order to build a successful master plan is terrible important.

To do this we are publishing a newsletter, holding neighborhood meetings, making ourselves available for town committees, and conducting a detailed survey.

Most importantly, this committee should be viewed as a group, which will begin a dialogue on Cohasset's future. We will be listening closely to all concerned and taking notes in order to put your ideas into action.

We thank you all in advance for your patience with this process and the effort you will hopefully provide in developing a vision for the future of Cohasset.

Rick Swanborg is chairman of the Growth and Development Committee.

Interns and Washington

If I were the father of a nubile 20-something daughter and she even hinted that she had a hankering to go to Washington as a Congressional intern I would sign her up for a convent or at least lock her in the nearest closet until the feeling passed.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

What is there about Washington that can steer an otherwise innocent young country lass from Iowa or a worldly wise young woman from California and a legislator elected on a platform of family values into conduct that can be seen on Cinemax only after midnight?

And don't tell me it's the movies because I've been watching Shannon Tweed flicks since we've had cable and it hasn't affected me . . . affected me . . . affected me . . .

The latest intern and legislator to be caught in flagrante delecto, as we used to say, were Gary Condit and Chandra Levy and I have a hunch their affair would have gone unnoticed by their colleagues and everyone else if Chandra hadn't up and disappeared.

Just before that, it was an intern named Monica Lewinsky and she passed up congressmen, even senators, to land the president himself; not that Bill Clinton put up much more than token resistance to the landing party.

Monica didn't disappear, although there are those who wish she would. In fact, she has turned her affair with the president into a thriving handbag (or is it gloves?) business and shows up periodically dining with friends at expensive restaurants known only to The Track.

Not all congressmen go straight home after a busy day rummaging around in the taxpayers' pockets.

And you thought an internship in Washington didn't pay off!

I know it will come as a surprise to a lot of you but this has been going on in the nation's capital for some time. Not all congressmen go straight home after a busy day rummaging around in the taxpayers' pockets, catch a little Letterman and go to bed alone.

The star in the congressional contre temps in my day was Wilbur Mills, 65, chairman of the House Ways & Means Committee, who was flagged down for speeding in his black and silver Lincoln in the early morning hours of Oct. 7, 1974.

The officers were more than a little surprised when a 38-year-old stripper named Fanne Foxe, aka "the Argentine Firecracker," leaped out of the car and jumped into the Washington Tidal Basin. They had been innocently night-clubbing with friends, they said, and they were believed — up to a point.

A month or so later, Mills was reelected after warning his Arkansas constituents against "drinking champagne with foreigners."

Two years later, Wayne Hays, 65, a congressman from Ohio, got married, which didn't sit well with Elizabeth Ray, 33, a former Miss Virginia, who had been on the Hays' payroll as a secretary, even though she couldn't type "The quick brown fox" without a mistake or two.

"What's going to happen to me?" she asked the congressman.

"Well, I guess that'll make you mistress No. 1," he said.

Whereupon, Elizabeth blew the whistle on him. Hays denied it for a couple of days but then admitted he had a "personal relationship" with her and resigned the House seat he had held for 30 years.

And then there was this congressman named Jack Kennedy . . .

Sen. Hedlund is turning 40

The Friends of Senator Hedlund present Bob's Once -in-a-Lifetime Birthday Brunch and Fundraiser on Sunday, July 29, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., business casual attire, at South Shore Country Club, 274 South St., Hingham.

Co-chairmen are: Polly Logan, Cohasset at 781-383-0031; Kathy Stacey Marshfield, at 781-834-3849; Jeff Granatino, Scituate at 781-545-7894; Dana Toland, Weymouth at 781-337-4383.

Special invited guests include: GOP Senate Leader Brian P. Leer, state sen. Michael R. Knapik, state sen. Jo-Ann Sprague, state sen. Bruce E. Tarr, state sen. Richard R. Tisei.

RSVP by July 20, to: Friends of Senator Hedlund, 121 Nichols Rd., Cohasset, MA 02025, 781-383-0031 or fax at 781-383-0899. Tickets are $40 per person.

The way it was: Menzies recalls Hingham Shipyard era

At last week's premier showing of the documentary film, "Remembering the Hingham Shipyard," Hingham resident Ian Menzies, was asked by Sea Chain, owners of the yard to describe his memories. His remarks follow:

COMMENTARY

I guess in many ways I'm Exhibit "A" — the only person who, not only commissioned a Hingham-built destroyer escort (DE) in the bitterly cold winter of 1943, but returned to be married and live in Hingham.

And, speaking of escorts, I have one here tonight: My wife Barbara, a true Hinghamite (we met at a launching party); my daughters Marla, Gillian, Alexa and Deborah, my son-in-law John Cohan and granddaughters Skye and Caitlin.

First off, I would like to thank Paul Trendowitz of Sea Chain, developer of the shipyard, for sponsoring the Hingham Shipyard Historical Foundation which, in turn, guided by Sea Chain's Marty Cohn and Harry Gural of Powder Productions, produced the excellent (I think so anyway) 30-minute documentary film, "Remembering the Hingham Shipyard."

My understanding is that the film will be a feature of the historical museum that Paul Trendowitz plans as part of the redevelopment of the old shipyard.

So what do I remember of the shipyard?

That, in this quiet little farm town of Hingham, there was a colossal out-of-body operation dominating everyone's life.

The Hingham Shipyard, at its production height in late 1943, was something out of this world — a conglomerate of noise that thundered night and day — the banging of hammers, the hiss of welding torches, the squeals of moving cranes, the shouts of workers clambering along wooden scaffolding, the grinding of freight cars bringing in equipment and stores.

There were hundreds upon hundreds of men and woman, hard hats, working outside in the snow and bitter cold (it was December '43) plus hundreds more working inside this 10-football-field steel mill and fabrication GSA building; and in some 35 surrounding storage, personnel and supply buildings spread over 160 acres.

To get the feel of this enormous operation, one has to picture 16 slipways all in a row and on each slipway, a ship in some stage of construction. In addition, there were 16 adjoining outfitting piers, each with its own building team. And if one looked skyward, one would see huge prefabricated sections of hull being swung into place.

To a stranger, it was bedlam bordering on chaos.

Altogether by Christmas 1943, there were 23,000 people working at the yard, in a town of only 8,000. Just to give some idea of the immensity of the operation, the cafeteria fed approximately 10,000 a day. And the workers came, not only from Greater Boston, but Rhode Island, Maine and New Hampshire. Special trains brought many.

That was the Hingham I found when I arrived as a young Royal Navy lieutenant, although already with four years of service at sea behind me, to take over as executive officer of DE 564 — HMS Stayner, along with the captain and engineering officer. We three had to know that ship from stem to stern which we did during the two months she was being built and outfitted.

In February 1944, after trials off the coast of Maine in cold, wild weather that laid the civilian supervisors low, we sailed for Britain in a full gale, in company with sister-DEs, the Seymour, Stockham, and Inglis. More than incidentally, these DEs were excellent sea boats, not as wet or uncomfortable as corvettes.

One distinct memory that year was how cold it was —

Route 3A upgrades to start

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@GNC.COM

MassHighway has some good news for commuters tired of dodging potholes on Route 3A — relief is soon on the way. The bad news is that the major Route 3A improvements could increase headaches from traffic delays and detours around the work sites over the next several months.

The state plans to repair the Phillip Murray Bridge near the Hingham rotary sometime later this year, as well as repave parts of Route 3A in Cohasset in the fall.

But the biggest improvement won't take place until the spring when the three-mile stretch of Route 3A from the Hingham rotary to the Weymouth town line at the Back River Bridge receives a new $500,000 coat of asphalt.

MassHighway Commissioner Matthew J. Amarello made the announcements alongside state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham last Friday as part of a tour of the area.

According to state traffic studies, 27,000 cars use the road every day either as a thoroughfare into Boston, or to access the Hingham commuter boat at the former Hingham Shipyard. But Hedlund believes that number could be as high as 33,000.

What can't be argued is, the large volume of daily traffic has broken down parts Route 3A into a user-unfriendly road.

"Both these gentlemen have been getting calls on the condition of the road, particularly by the former [Hingham] police station," Amarello said.

According to Amarello, the Hingham stretch of Route 3A was last paved over 10 years ago, and will be part of a major district-wide resurfacing project in the area.

The repaving project will also include drainage improvements along areas that tend to get flooded during heavy rains.

The state hopes to avoid doing the work during peak traveling hours and at night.

When the southern portion of Route 3A — from Marshfield to Cohasset — was repaved two years ago, it stopped at Beechwood Street. This fall, MassHighway intends to pave parts of the remaining stretch of highway through the town. Certain parts of Route 3A were repaved in recent years due to construction and don't need to be redone.

In a meeting last month, Cohasset selectmen asked Hedlund and Bradley to push to get Cohasset's section of Route 3A finished by the state. Both legislators were doubtful, saying the Hingham stretch was the priority. But unbeknownst to them, MassHighway had included the Cohasset stretch into a regional paving contract. A regional contract occurs when, instead of seeking bids for each individual paving project, bids are grouped together under the same umbrella so contractors submit just one bid.

"This will be huge. That road is in tough shape especially the stretch from Pond Street down to Route 228," Town Manager Mark Haddad said, about the highway that houses nearly all of Cohasset's commercially zoned property. "It will improve the situation there, and be a nice thing for town."

Last year, outgoing state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray lobbied to have the rotary bridge repaired that was named after her late husband, Phillip. State officials hope to keep at least one lane open during the $848,000 project.

Bike path to Hull to be finished

Perhaps children's author Shel Silverstein had the sidewalk/bike path along the southbound side of George Washington Boulevard in mind when he penned his classic book of poems, "Where the Sidewalk Ends."

Once over the Weir River Bridge and under the shadow of the sign announcing you are now in Hull, the wide concrete path suddenly stops and turns into a narrow dirt strip. The sidewalk/bike path picks up again 1,685 feet later after Barnstable Street.

But MassHighway Commission Matthew J. Amarello announced Friday that the nonsensical ending will soon be remedied, and area bicyclists will be able to avoid having to cross over the busy boulevard to use the northbound shoulder.

"We're willing to do the work, we're committed to putting $20,000 into the sidewalk, all we need are the permits," he said during a tour of the area, alongside state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham.

Amarello said the sidewalk/bike path is on the agenda of the July 24 Hull Conservation Commission, and hopes area residents will turn out in support of the path's extension.

Bradley said he heard complaints that the six-foot sidewalk runs along the Hingham-portion of the George Washington Boulevard, but then suddenly stops.

"People in Hull want to know why it stops right on the Hull line," he said.

Hedlund, who as a bicyclist and former Hull resident knows the travails of having to cross the street at this point, called it the "Bike path to nowhere."

Coincidentally, an older man biked along the path as Amarello and other MassHighway officials stood on the bridge discussing the proposed extension. The 78-year old Hull resident called the path "very popular" and said hundreds of bicyclists used it every day.

"We're going to get you a bike path," Amarello told him.

"That's all I want," he responded.

Amarello said if the state gets the permits to do the work from the Hull conservation commission, the $20,000 extension could be completed by Labor Day.

Town seeks resident input for comprehensive plan

Beginning on July 26, the Cohasset Growth and Development Committee will hold the first of four neighborhood forums to gather input from residents all over town on what community attributes are most important for the future of Cohasset. All meetings are 7:30-9:30 p.m., on the following dates: July 26 at Beechwood Congregational Church; Aug. 2 at the Lightkeepers' Residence; Aug. 9 at St. Anthony's Parish Center and Aug. 16 at the Nativity-Assumption Greek Orthodox Church

The objectives of these forums are to provide relevant information on the issues and process and to gather ideas and input on the future of Cohasset. The committee will then work to gain consensus on a vision for the town that is sensitive to the values and issues of its citizens in the areas of environment, economic base and community character.

The forums will begin with an overview of planning activities, facts and figures and then proceed with an open dialogue on issues of importance to all in attendance and conclude by assembling priorities from the group. A brief survey will also be distributed and collected at each Forum. Cohasset has not had a Comprehensive Town Plan in 40 years and the Growth and Development Committee was established by selectmen in 2000 to develop a town-wide consensus on how to best achieve a sustainable future for Cohasset and build a master plan to help deliver that future.

There are many reasons for developing a master plan. This will not only provide a strategic plan for the community, it will also enable the town to capture some of the special funds the state provides to support long-term planning. In addition, area communities found the process invaluable in providing dialogues for the many community voices on the future of the town.

Beginning with the newsletter residents received last week, the committee continues to reach out through local neighborhood meetings, news articles, town-wide surveys, discussions with established town committees as well as involvement at regional and state meetings. The committee will listen closely to all concerned and taking notes in order to put your ideas into action in the form of a Comprehensive Master Plan.

Over time the committee will gather many of these components from efforts already underway with many committees in town and ultimately address all of these elements as part of the Comprehensive Master Plan for Cohasset. Questions or suggestions, contact Town Planner Liz Harrington at 781-383-3517.

which was in total contrast to the warmth of the people of Hingham who couldn't do enough for those of us in uniform, American or British.

— COMMENTARY —

I remember celebrating New Year's Eve, December 31, 1943 at the Old Mill Grille with the then Greek-American owner of that restaurant and his Scottish-born wife — an after-hours party that the local authorities kindly, if they knew of it, disregarded.

And I remember the launching parties. Who could forget them 'cause there was one every week. We attended them with enormous enthusiasm as those parties kept us fed and our spirits alive as we were often penniless because of pay checks that never caught up to us. Hingham's USO was another God-send, and yes, a girl-send, too.

That was Hingham some 60 years ago. On the one hand, an arsenal of democracy; on the other, a quiet little farming town of churches, farms, neighborliness and family values. Yet almost every household in Hingham felt the impact of the yard one way or another and were immensely proud of their contribution to the war effort.

But oddly, Hingham never thought to memorialize perhaps the greatest national event in its history until the association of Landing Ship Tanks (TSTs) decided to erect a memorial stone to the LSTs building in Hingham.

I was then writing a weekly column for the Patriot Ledger and pointed out the oversight (Brian McGrory, please note). Corrective action came almost immediately, headed by past presidents of the Hingham Historical Society, Eugene Chamberlain and James Macedo; the late Hingham Veterans' Agent, Tom Wallace; Allen Houghton of DEM; Peg Charlton, Ann Collins, Jane Goldberg and many others. A plaque was erected at the ferry boarding area and dedicated on Sept. 26, 1993 honoring the Hingham yard, those who built the ships and all who sailed on them

And for the record, the yard built 227 ships: 75 destroyer escorts (DEs), of which 40 were turned over to the British Royal Navy under lend-lease; 95 LSTs, 40 LCIs (infantry); and 17 fast transports.

And to complete the history of the Stayner, just one of the ships Hingham sent to war, were assigned to the English Channel, preparatory to taking part in D-Day.

At first we worked with a flotilla of British motor torpedo boats and American PTs off the German-held French coast. Our job was close-in interception of German light destroyers and E-boats. Stayner, and the smaller boats she directed, were in almost nightly fire fights with German surface forces with casualties on both sides. It was a little war on its own and little-known about.

On D-Day minus one, Stayner was given a special mission to lay certain dan buoys close to the French beaches as guides to the landing forces already all but on their way.

From then on, we patrolled the southern flank to prevent German ships from breaking into the supply lanes. In the course of those patrols, Stayner herself sank three E-boats and the U-boat 671, taking prisoners in all cases.

There is nothing glorious about this, just the short history of a ship built in Hingham that did her job, like the people who built it.

But let's hope that job will never have to be repeated.

Schools mull formal cleaning standards

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The issue of school cleanliness came to the forefront of the School Committee meeting again last week, while the board welcomed new Osgood School Principal Janet Sheehan to the town.

After coming under fire in recent years for what some parents view as dirty schools, the board is mulling over establishing a standard of cleanliness for the buildings that the custodians would follow.

School Committee Vice-Chairman Rick Flynn suggested having someone familiar with schools visually inspect the buildings before the start of the school year and establish a "ground zero" when it comes to school cleanliness.

"This way we can know what we did last summer, and how it looked at the start of the school year," he said. "If a parent complains that there's a scuff on the floor, and we spent all summer buffing and polishing it, we know it's not coming out."

"The custodians want the place to be clean and be respectable, but I think it's a matter of us being more directive, saying this is what we expect."
— Supt. Edward Malvey

Committee member Pat Martin said creating a standard of cleanliness would involve laying out "what is acceptable and what we consider a clean classroom."

The committee last year got into a heated discussion with town selectmen over the issue of school cleanliness.

Schools Superintendent Edward Malvey said the problem in the past was primarily due to lack of staffing, but expects that to change with the additional positions created by the new fiscal year budget, plus the oversight of new business manager, Ivan Klinko.

"The custodians want the place to be clean and be respectable, but I think it's a matter of us being more directive, saying this is what we expect," Malvey said.

The committee gave Sheehan some friendly advice about dirt trouble spots in her new school, saying "parents will notice."

Sheehan said she knows about the difference between plain dirt and unavoidable wear and tear, and said she'd be more direct with the school cleaning staff.

New staff hired

Malvey announced a number of new personnel in the system. Along with Sheehan and new secretary Jean Callahan, he said the department has hired a new school psychologist and part-time music instructor and filled the following teaching positions: first grade, second grade, high school English, high school math, middle school English, middle school math, middle school social studies, middle school Spanish, middle school science, middle school art and middle school technology.

New school van

Because of safety and insurance laws, the school department won't be able to purchase a new van as hoped, Malvey told the school committee. Instead, the department will buy a new 14-passenger mini-bus.

The original intent was to buy a large van for the smaller athletic teams such as the golf and tennis teams, or school clubs, so the schools wouldn't have to rent a full-size bus for 12 people.

"But the particular van we were looking at wouldn't meet all the safety standards," Malvey said. "For some reason, under those standards we can't purchase a new van, but we could purchase an old van."

The mini-bus is actually a large modified van with a raised roof, and is painted school bus yellow. The cost is estimated between $25,000 and $30,000.

Malvey said the bus has to meet strict specifications, and gave the committee a copy of a four-page list of requirements, ranging from safety belts, to engine and tire size.

He said once a bid has been accepted, the dealer has seven days to deliver.

Unfortunately, Malvey said, whoever drives the van has to be formally trained, and paid the standard $33.50 an hour to drive it. He said he would work with the coaches and instructors on some sort of fee structure.

School Committee Chairwoman Stephanie Noble said such a vehicle has a "very broad possibility for usage" and could enable clubs who traditionally don't travel much, to do so. Although the result could be an increase in yearly transportation costs, Noble said the actual cost per trip would go down.

Police and fire looking for computer upgrade

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Nowadays when a computer becomes outdated after a year or two — the town's emergency dispatch computer system server is an outright antique.

Purchased in 1995 and installed in 1996, the computer server, which joins the police and fire department computers and connects them to the same databases, is on its last legs and has recently caused problems for the town's public safety departments.

"The system has been having serious problems, it's just gotten tired," said Officer William Quigley. "And nowadays, if your computer is four or five years old, it might as well be 100."

Police Chief Brian Noonan received permission to spend $4,266 to replace the town's emergency service dispatch server. The money will come out of the police department's operating budget, even though the server also operates the fire department's computers.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the town will place an article on the special Town Meeting warrant asking to replace the money through a transfer from unencumbered funds, known as free cash.

"The server has had a useful life, and we want to stay ahead of the game."
—Town Manager Mark Haddad

In a letter to Haddad, Noonan said problems with the server "have resulted in the complete failure of the computer system on several occasions, and the inability to archive the police and/or fire logs and related information over the past several weeks."

Haddad said it was crucial to replace the server now, rather than wait until the fall.

"This is something we needed to act upon now. The server has had a useful life, and we want to stay ahead of the game," he said. "For the amount of money it's going to cost, I thought it would be better to be pennywise than pound foolish."

Quigley said when a call comes into a dispatcher, the server will time and date "stamp" the call, and pull up any information on the address the call is coming from such as contact numbers, whether any hazardous materials are in the building, or if anyone at the address has a gun permit.

Since coming online in 1996, the computer system, which operates six police work stations, and three fire department work stations, has had all its available memory eaten up by upgrades.

"It started out with a DOS [computer] operating system, which doesn't take a lot of memory. But the last upgrade was to a complete Windows format, and that uses a lot of graphics which has caused glitches in the system," said Quigley. "It's gotten to the point where it would be more cost effective to replace the existing server with a new server."

Noonan told Haddad that the department's computer consultant, Matthew Fiorenza, said the server could be fixed at "considerable cost," but would then fail again when the next system upgrade comes out later this summer.

"It's a big system and the problem is the server has reached its maximum capacity," Noonan said in an interview. "We keep adding these programs and updating the system and it finally can't take any more."

The $4,266 server will be custom built by Fiorenza, who submitted the lowest bid.

Noonan said Fiorenza has done "a lot of the systems" in local courthouses, and is "very experienced." He expects the new server to be in place within the next couple of weeks.

Task force OKs final village revitalization plan

down to the harbor," he said.

Watson did successfully lobby to have the 60-foot long delivery zone next to his store taken out of the plan.

"We only need one delivery zone in the village," he said. "You rarely see two trucks down there at once."

The final plan calls for a raised, granite curb running from the South Main/Elm Street intersection down to Highland Avenue Extension behind Hub Shopping, with eight delineated parking spaces on the northbound side of Elm Street between South Main Street and Brook Street. Approximately five spaces will be lost in front of the Cohasset Historical Society museum. A sidewalk would be added in front of Donna Green studios. CRC director Dean Rizzo said another three parallel parking spaces could be created in front of the Hingham Institution for Savings, if the bank allows three feet of its property to be taken for parking. In a move intended as a compromise with the street's businesses, the task force voted to not install a curb on the southbound side of the road, keeping open the possibility for "informal parking" along the road's shoulder.

"We've provided for the pedestrians, the cars can fend for themselves," Harrington said. "It's not perfect, but it's a compromise."

South Main Street would essentially remain the same, except for the creation of a sidewalk from James Brook Walkway to a bump out in front of Tedeschi's. Although two spaces would be lost on the northbound side of the street, two spaces would be gained in front of Cards & Shards by relocating a fire hydrant. The task force plan also recommends two 24-foot curb cuts providing entry to and exit from the gas station, and the curb line in front of the Red Lion Inn lowered to the standard six inches.

Brook Street would receive a "rolling sidewalk" in the task force's plan. The sidewalk would be a slightly raised berm delineating a sidewalk, but made accessible to delivery vans. The plan would also add two formal parking spaces in front of Nutti-n-More Natural. The street would be 30 feet wide in front of Cohasset News, but narrowed down to 22 feet wide near Elm Street.

The task force also voted to recommend the creation of eight new formal parking spaces along Highland Avenue Extension and Elm Street down to Stevens Lane. Rizzo said the spaces could be used by area employees and help free up spaces in other areas of the village. Three spaces would be created along a currently unused wide section at the Highland Avenue Extension intersection with Elm Street. But, as Rizzo said, the "controversial part" of the plan would be the need to cut down three trees along Highland Avenue Extension for the spaces. Harrington voted against this aspect of the plan.

"I just didn't see enough of a benefit to cut down the trees," she said.

With the final improvement plan for the village mapped out, the task force will present its recommendations before selectmen this Tuesday. Members will also ask for permission to install a 60-foot trial section of sidewalk in front of Cards & Shards to get the community's opinion on the proposed new sidewalks.

If selectmen are responsive to its recommendations, the task force then hopes to hold a series of public forums, possibly make slight changes to the plan, and then make a formal presentation to the community.

The project would be funded by a combination of public and private money. The CRC, which has paid for a majority of the planning and engineering work so far, has promised to help find and apply for urban renewal grants on behalf of the town. Also, as part of the town's Greenbush mitigation agreement with the MBTA, the town is in line for a $1.5 million Public Works Economic Development grant for downtown improvements. Cohasset has been awarded a $170,000 grant to build a sidewalk beneath St. Stephen's Church.

In April, the task force voted to recommend a new parking plan along Depot Court, and design improvements to the town parking lot and Pleasant Street/Ripley Road intersection.

The group had originally recommended trying a one-way traffic pattern around the village, but dropped it after an uproar from the business community.

Field of dreams in focus

cost for the high quality fields was still too high for the group.

"We just can't keep on doing everything first-class Cadillac," said committee member and selectman Merle Brown. "I'm looking at keeping the project under $200,000 or we don't do it at all. It's just too much money, and the town can't afford it."

Haddad agreed with him saying he did not want to have to borrow money to build the fields. He instead hopes to keep the cost low enough to be able to fund it through free cash, donations from the Little League, and perhaps money collected by the Community Preservation Act.

The act, passed this past spring, allows a certain amount of money be spent each year on town recreational facilities.

Haddad suggested building one field and parking lot, and setting aside space for another field to be built at a later time.

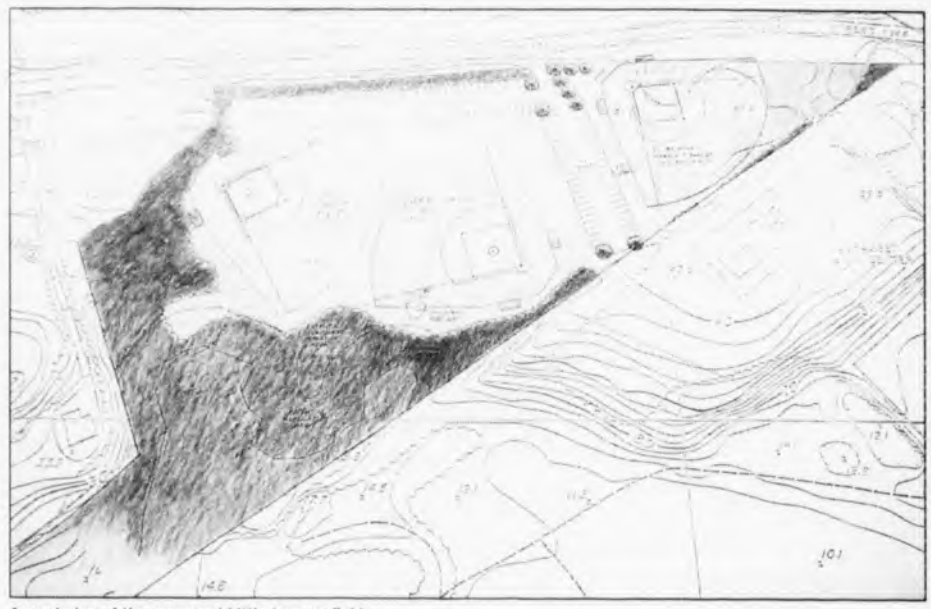
He aimed for a price between $150,000 and $175,000.

"I could possibly find $125,000, plus the Little League funds, and not have it impact the tax base," Haddad said.

Committee member Arthur Lehr called that plan "more palatable."

The committee decided to have Haddad and member Wayne Sawchuk meet with Esser, trim some more money, and develop a formal bid proposal.

Sawchuk mentioned a number of cost-saving measures such as using gravel from the existing parking lot as the base for the new fields, and replacing the lost gravel with fill from the Deer Hill School renovation project.



The gravel pit, which was the former source of the town's gravel, is the home to 20,000 cubic yards of fill from the middle/high school renovation project. However it still remains between four and six feet lower than street level. The committee plans to build the fields with a very slight slope and install a gravel/clay base beneath the grass to allow the fields to quickly drain and discharge water into the wetlands at the rear of the site.

Haddad hoped to have the bid results in hand by this fall's yet-unscheduled special Town Meeting. He wants to put out the bid as an "add/alternate," where the bidder gives the town prices on building one field with the option of building the second. By doing it this way, the town would be able to know exactly how much is needed to finish the second field.

Committee member Mark DeGiacomo, who also serves as the president of Cohasset Little League, said the new fields would help ease the space crunch the town's youth sports programs are currently experiencing.

He also backs breaking the project up into phases.

"If the town appropriates $200,000, then we'll be able to say this is what we have to raise. It will give us a target to aim for," he said.

A rendering of the proposed Little League fields

Cohasset Little League has already begun its capital campaign, he said. According to DeGiacomo, the group raised $17,000 at a recent party and auction and is planning more events for the future.

The group will meet with selectmen on Aug. 7 to discuss the plan.

Democratic League sponsors talk tonight

From 7-9 p.m., tonight (Thursday, July 19), the Plymouth County Democratic League (PCDL) and Massachusetts Democratic Future will sponsor an event to bring young people from the South Shore together at Tosca, 14 North St in Hingham, to discuss the environment and the ways young people can work to preserve it.

U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, D-Quincy, U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, D-4th District, Massachusetts Democratic Party Chairman Philip Johnston, and State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, have all agreed to act as honorary chairmen for the event. Corine Young of Rep. Delahunt's office and P.J. O'Sullivan of P.J. O'Sullivan and Associates will be on hand to lead the discussion.

Massachusetts Democratic Future is a statewide network of public and private leaders, age 35 and under, committed to training leaders, helping democrats win elections and advocating progressive public policy. Through state-of-the art training in political skills, networking sessions and small meetings with political leaders from Massachusetts, MDF is training a new generation of leaders and working for progressive victories today.

LIBRARY CORNER

Children's programs

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library presents a "Burt the Raccoon" puppet show on Tuesday, July 24 at 7 p.m. Come and learn about the wonderful world of raccoons with interesting facts about these "masked marauders." Also experience American Sign Language with this program. Fun for all ages!

Coming up on Tuesday, July 31 at 7 p.m., the library has invited a cast of snakes, lizards, turtles and tortoises. Presented by Marla Isaac, in conjunction with the New England Reptile Exhibit, this promises to be a real crowd-pleaser.

Call the library at 781-383-1348 or come in and register for each program. This summer's Tuesday night programs have been generously provided by The Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Video contest

All teens, grades seven-12, are invited to create a short video (no more than 20 minutes long) during the summer. You may choose from drama, comedy, cartoon animation, documentary, music video, "how to," commercial, or local history show. Be careful not to include any copyrighted music or images.

Films are due by Wednesday, Aug. 1 to the Duxbury Free Library. An "Oscar Night of Stars" will be held for all entries on Friday, Aug. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Merry Meeting Room of the Duxbury Free Library. All grand prize-winning videos will be screened and "Oscars" will be presented to the winners.

The contest is sponsored by Adelphia, MediaOne and local friends of the library groups in participating South Shore towns. Contact the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 781-383-1348 for more information.

Calling all gardeners

The Pratt Memorial Library has just purchased a wonderful selection of gardening books that are located in the new non-fiction area. The following is a list of some of the newly-available selections:

"Continuous Bloom" by Pam Duthie. Duthie has arranged 272 perennials according to bloom time so you can mix and match to suit your garden.

"Passionate Gardening" is by two of America's top gardeners, Lauren Springer and Rob Proctor. They share their practical wisdom, wit and tales of perseverance in a volume that challenges all the elements of gardening.

"Creating a Cottage Garden in North America" is for those who love the riots of colors, shapes and textures found in the cottage garden. Author, Stephen Westcott-Gratton offers a mix of history and practical advice on design tips, plant profiles, and how to start your own cottage garden.

There are so many new gardening books from colorful borders to hardy rock gardens and more. Come into the library this summer and check them out.

hol."

Since May 25, Cohasset police have made 53 arrests, of those 18 were for minors in possession/transport alcohol. Of those 18, only two were Cohasset residents.

Noonan said police are open to any program that fosters communication between police, parents and teenagers. But in his 25 years of law enforcement experience, he's found that parental participation in those sort of seminars is low. Often, the parents who do take part are those whose children are never in trouble, he said.

In reaction to severe underage drinking problems in Wellesley, "study circles" were formed there that included a cross-section of the community. They proved to be an effective way to discuss the controversial issue, according to Lisa Stone, one of the organizers. The small circles, which meet several times, follow a discussion guide and present ideas for action to the full group of participants. Then task forces are formed to work on the different ideas.

After last summer's underage drinking arrests, including 22 in one night — and the reaction of some who criticized police for arresting first-time offenders — the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee looked for ways to start a dialogue in town. To that end, the committee invited Stone to a meeting last March to see if a similar program could be started in Cohasset. The Rev. Cliff Cutler, pastor at St. Stephen's Church, who is chairman of the committee, is on vacation and couldn't be reached for an update.

But committee member Jody Butman said perception is a big part of the problem with the way teenagers see the police.

"We think the study circles could go a long way to addressing that if they are handled tactfully," she said.

Noonan has a problem with some parents' understanding of the police.

"It boils down to people wanting us to be a baby-sitting service. We're just not," he said. "You can't go out there and expect not to be bothered if there's alcohol involved and you're a minor."

Parents, whose children are arrested, don't have to worry that their teens' lives and college hopes are ruined. Noonan explained that 90 percent of teenagers arrested as a minor in possession/transport alcohol are put into a diversion program and pay a $50 fee to Mothers Against Driving Drunk. "No record of their arrest ever shows anywhere," he said. "That's because they are put into a diversion program prior to arraignment."

Smoking in Legion questioned

The question has been sent to town counsel Paul DeRensis for a decision — one that could result in the town's veterans being forced outside to smoke.

U.S. Marine Corps veteran and Mealy Post member Mary Jeanette Murray isn't sure how much ruckus the smoking ban could make, but said the popular veterans hangout is frequented by a number of smokers.

"They've always allowed smoking in there," said Murray, who has been a member of the post since V-J Day in 1945, "but I don't know of anyone that's ever complained."

She said the legion post is a private club, and guests have to be signed in by legionnaires.

"There is a bar, but you can't just walk in off the streets," she said.

The no-smoking ban also applies to places of business accessible to the public, and to restaurants. Godzik said in order for a restaurant to allow smoking, it must first receive a variance from the board of health.

The variances, issued for a five-year period, are granted to establishments that have a separate area for smoking, usually a bar with separate ventilation system in that area and negative pressure so air flows into the bar area and not the other way around. The establishments must also provide evidence of a maintenance contract showing that the ventilation system is being maintained. Only three restaurants in Cohasset currently have variances: Koko Island, Atlantica and the Red Lion Inn.

The impetus behind the smoking ban is to protect non-smokers from second-hand smoke.

Jim Wells, the director of the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program, said exposure to second-hand smoke is a major health issue and kills an estimated 53,000 people nationally a year.

Ten area towns have adopted some form of smoke-free regulations. Of those Hingham and Duxbury are smoke-free, while others, such as Cohasset and Braintree, allow variances with strict standards. Only four towns - Abington, Rockland, Hanover and Kingston - go by the less restrictive state regulations that stipulate 25 percent of the area be set-aside for non-smokers.

'Teen' Garage attracts younger set

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The generation gap usually refers to teens and their parents. But among teenagers, themselves, a distance of just two to three years can seem like 20.

Case in point, is the Garage — the town's teen center — that draws the "younger set" of pre-teens and 13-year-olds who are in the sixth through eighth grades. But when it comes to attracting "older" teens, the Garage hasn't found the right combination, a fact that adds to the perception in town that teenagers have nothing to do and no place to go.

Steve Murray, 17, a drummer who practices off hours at the Garage with his band, says the teen center has an image problem.

"Older kids like the idea of independence," Steve says. That, according to his band mates Mike McMillen and Jack Jerz and friend Nick Laas, means dispensing with the word "chaperone" and creating a nightclub-like atmosphere where teenagers can come and go as they please. They all admit that chaperones may have to be a reality — but they need to be called something else and become practically invisible, the teens say.

The Garage, which approaching its second birthday, is housed in the old DPW garage behind the Red Lion Inn. About $40,000 was raised privately for The Garage project and inmates from the Norfolk County Work Release program provided much of the construction at no cost. The Garage replaced the former Teen Center in the old Independence Building [now Cohasset Greenery] on South Main Street, which replaced its predecessor, the Teen Center on Depot Court.

The Garage, which once housed town trucks, has been transformed into a bright, cheery place with one oversized room that contains a small stage, dance floor, pool and ping pong tables, and four TVs with video games; another large room with a snack bar, and an office.

Under the jurisdiction of the Cohasset Youth Resources Committee and leadership of town recreation director Jack Worley, The Garage receives a $15,000 annual subsidy from the town to pay for part-time staff, and appears to be on a firmer footing than its forerunners. The Garage can also be rented out for private parties for $75, money that, along with $5 admission fees to dances, goes into a revolving account that can be used for equipment upgrades, utilities and other expenses, such as the cost of hiring disc jockeys.

"It's open for grades six through 12, but generally appeals to grades six through nine," Worley says. "Once kids have their license, they don't want to stay around."

Worley also says the sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders haven't established firm "cliques" or groups of friends the way older teens have. They are more open to meeting as a group when the 11th- and 12th-graders want to do things with their friends, he says.

However, the eight-member Cohasset Youth Resources Committee hopes as time goes by and the younger kids progress through high school, they'll continue to come to the teen center because they've established the habit.

CRC member Jody Butman says the board is open to ideas from the "older kids."

"But it's a challenge getting them [older teens]," through the door," she says.

Cohasset schools health education director Michael Gill said it might be a futile effort.

"Older kids generally stay away from teen centers because they are supervised by adults," he says. "As teens get older, they seek out more independence and less supervision and that's the way it's always been."

Steve says The Garage has "stigma" to it for older teens but thinks that image could be changed with the right marketing and creating a "club" atmosphere. He said the Bahama Beach Club, dubbed the BBC, in Marshfield is successful.

The boys said "mosh pits," for example, should be allowed at dances and the lights have to be turned down.

"A mosh pit is just more aggressive dancing to heavier music," Steve says, and is otherwise harmless.

For more information about The Garage, call the recreation department at 781-383-4104.

Tanglewood trip

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Yefim Bronfman on piano on July 29 when South Shore Conservatory sponsors its annual trip to Tanglewood. The concert features Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 and Shostakovich's Symphony No. 5.

A deluxe, air-conditioned motorcoach will pick up concert goers at the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury, leaving at 8:30 a.m., and at the commuter parking lot in Rockland at Route 3, Exit 14, across from Home Depot, leaving at 9 a.m. A noon arrival allows time for a picnic lunch and stroll around the lawns and gardens of Tanglewood. Tickets for the 2:30 p.m. concert are for reserved seats inside the shed.

The cost for the day, including concert tickets, transportation, lunch and refreshments on the return trip is $115 per person. For reservations and information, call Laura Carleton at 781-934-2731, Ext. 14.

Concerts by the sea

The Friends of the Nantasket Beach Reservation, together with business and private sponsorship have scheduled summer musical and dance programs as a community service at the M.D.C.'s Bernie King Pavilion at Nantasket Beach in Hull. The programs feature swing and ballroom dancing, sing-a-longs and audience participation. The pavilion is handicapped accessible.

All programs start at 2 p.m. and will continue through Labor Day with the following schedules:

July 29, Dave Foley Country.

August 5, The Ray Cavicchio Band. August 12, The Gregg Savage Band. August 19, The Swingers. August 26, The Jack Alessi Group.

September 2, The Gregg Savage Band. September 3, Four Guys in Tuxes.

For information, call Barbara Kinakos at 781-925-3566.

Chamber celebrates

On Wed., July 25 from 5:30-8:30 p.m. the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold a barbecue at Kimball's By-The-Sea on Cohasset Harbor. Just $15 per person will provide an evening of conversation, food, and a view of the harbor. Meet Joseph Campbell, executive director of Kimball's and Atlantica, and Kathleen Quist, director of sales, marketing, hotel operations for Kimball's. Quist is also a new member of the Cohasset Chamber's Board of Directors. The barbecue is a members and their families only event, but prospective members are always welcome. Mail your check with the names of the persons who will attend, to Cohasset Chamber, PO Box 336, Cohasset, MA, by July 20. Call 781-383-1010 for more information.

Garage dance

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, July 27 from 7-10 p.m. Everyone from grades six and up is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Refreshments will be sold.

The Garage is also open this summer on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 3-7p.m.; Fridays, from 4-10 p.m., and the first and third Saturdays of every month from 6-10 p.m. It is open to everyone in grades six and up. It is free of charge, however, snacks and drinks do have to be paid for.

Other activities and events will be planned this summer. Stay tuned for particulars of these events.

Summer band concert

The Cohasset Recreation Department is hosting a concert on Tuesday, July 24 at 7:30 p.m. on the Cohasset Common. Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concert-goers may bring blankets or lawn chairs to sit on and insect repellant.

Concerts are available thanks to the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. of Cohasset and a matching fund grant from the American Federation of Musicians of New York City.

'Happy-Dog' training

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering two dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training.

The first class is good manners for beginners, which will start Monday, Aug. 6 at 6 p.m. The cost for this five-week program will be $90.

The second class is agility and heel combination, which will start Monday, Aug. 6 at 7 p.m. This class will teach agility by using bar jumps, tunnels and other obstacles, as well as heelwork to better your dog's walking on a leash. The cost for this four-week program is $80.

For information, call the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109.

Chatterton fund

Committee members of the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund are sponsoring "An Evening with the Beach Boys" on Sunday, August 19 at 9 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus. Cost of the concert is $60 per ticket with $30 going to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

For tickets, contact Ron Ford at 781-383-6103; Linda Bolster at 781-383-6148; or Linda Schultz at 781-383-0597.

Barnyard tours

The Trustees of Reservations is offering the following educational programs at Weir River Farm on Saturdays and Sundays throughout July: 11a.m. story time, 1 p.m. general barnyard tour and 2:30 p.m. tour with farm project. Each program will allow you and your child close interaction with the farm animals. Trustees members are free. Nonmembers are $2 per person. Parking is available at the Turkey Hill Parking Lot at the end of Turkey Hill Lane.

Visiting artists

The South Shore Art Center is becoming a summer destination for artists, art students and cultural enthusiasts. The center's summer initiative, Visiting Artist Workshops 2001 includes master classes in the visual arts. Eleven master art instructors are offering an innovative array of workshop topics including photo etching on metal, landscape painting in oils, color woodcut printing, pastel painting, watercolor landscape, encaustic painting, book arts, photography, and impressionist still life painting

The instructors include: Karen Christians, Jared Clackner, Stuart Baron, Annie Silverman, John Brooks Maginnis, Heidi Whitman, Tracy Spadafora, William Ternes, Peter Madden, Frank Gohlke, and Margaret McWethy. They are all practicing artists as well as instructors at some of the most highly regarded art schools in the area including Boston University, Harvard, the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, the Massachusetts College of Art, the DeCordova Museum, and the Worcester Art Museum.

All participating instructors' work will be on exhibition in the Bancroft Gallery, Summer Encounters: Visiting Artists Exhibition will open Friday, Aug. 10 from 6-8 p.m. The reception is free to all and will provide the public an opportunity to meet the instructors and view some of their work.

The exhibition will be on display until Sept. 9. For more information or to register for any of the visiting artist workshops call 781/383-ARTS or visit www.ssac.org.

Piano recitals

Olive Mullen of Cohasset and Mary Depperman of Scituate presented their 14th annual joint-piano recital on June 3. They are both members of the South Shore Music Teachers Association, which presented four recitals again this year in jazz/pop, classical, ensemble, and an honors recital for high school students. There was also a successful Playathon Fund Raiser for the Pine Street Inn and Rosie's Place .

Sarah Lambert of Cohasset performed in all five events. Ms. Lambert was also recognized at the High School Arts Awards Night, where she received the Frederic Chopin Piano Award for her work as an accompanist for the choruses in their concerts during the year.

Ross Lieb-Lappen also played in all five events and he and Ms. Lambert played 12 Shostakovich duets for a high school music night. Mia Lieb-Lappen performed in three events, as did Nicole Hall and Jason Raynor, both from Scituate. Dana Cullen and Brooke Kingsland also performed.

Other students who performed in the end-of-year recital were Kara and Christopher Wilcox, Christine Fitzgerald, Meaghan Costello, Alexandros Deligiannidis, all of Cohasset; and Destanee Ringler and Tom Watson from Scituate.

Teen garage summer hours

The Teen Garage will be open throughout the summer on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays from 3 to 7 p.m., Fridays from 4 to 10 p.m. and the first and third Saturdays of every month from 6 to 10 p.m.

During these times, The Garage is open to all teens in Grades 6 and up. It is free of charge; however, snacks and drinks do have to be paid for.

Special activities and events will be planned during the summer. Stay tuned for the particulars of these events.

The Garage is also available for rentals at $75 for two hours.

Polish organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church is presenting Elzbieta Wlosek in recital on Sunday, July 29 at 3 p.m. The afternoon's concert will include compositions by Polish and eastern European organists.

Ms. Wlosek was born in the Silesia region of Poland and studied at the Academy of Music in Katowice. She has performed widely in Europe and is a faculty member of the Music School of Raciborz and the Music School of Rybnik. She began performing at an early age and has since taught master classes in France, Germany, the Netherlands and Italy.

St. Stephen's Church is at 16 Highland Ave. The concert is free of charge but donations will be accepted.

Stars of the Week

Brian Hill

The Cohasset 11-year old baseball All-Star came up huge in this week's thrilling 4-2 extra innings win over Stoughton. Not only did he pitch well for the two-time defending District 8 champs in the game, but he doubled home the tying run in the fifth inning and then singled home Chris Rose and Sam DeGiacomo for the gamewinner in the seventh.

A painful ending

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Losing two straight games with a post-season berth on the line would be painful under any circumstances. If those losses were both by a single run, the word excruciating might better apply.

There are no singular adjectives, however, to accurately convey the depths of despair the Cohasset Post 118 players must have collectively experienced as they watched their playoff hopes die Monday night in Braintree.

For the second time in three days, under the lights at Braintree High School, Cohasset fell by the score of 7-6 after relinquishing a large lead in the late innings.

"What can I say?" said understandably despondent Cohasset coach Scott Arnold, as he watched his players shuffle quietly off the Braintree High field.

"That's baseball," he concluded

Cohasset tracksters shine at Bay State's

Laney and Maitland medal, Baird takes fourth at state games

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

This past weekend, three tracksters from Cohasset went to the Bay State Games to show the rest of the state what made the Skippers undefeated league champions this past spring season.

Seniors Tim Baird, Steve Laney and Pete Maitland all finished within the top three of their region to advance to finals, eventually finishing in the top four individually.

For more Bay State Games coverage, see page 16.

Laney was Cohasset's highest placer of the day, coming in second all-around in the discus. After winning his region in the preliminaries, Laney threw a personal record 130 feet, outdistancing his previous best by nearly five feet.

Laney held first place for nearly the entire day, until the final athlete made his last throw of the competition, beating out Laney by mere inches.

Maitland entered in the javelin, the event for which he finished fifth in All-States and 17th in New Englands, and came in third in the Bay States with a solid throw of just over 158 feet.

It is possible that since the school track season ended so long ago, Maitland was not up to full form, as his personal best of almost 179 feet would have won the competition by a whopping 13 feet.

Baird, who was co-captains with Maitland this past spring, came in fourth overall at the Bay State Games in the mile, with an impressive off-season time of 4:43.

In the preliminaries, Baird came in third in what was very obviously the toughest of the four brackets, posting second, fourth and fifth place out of the 12 runners in the finals. Baird lost out on third place by only one second, and was only five seconds behind Mark McDermott of Mansfield, who was in Baird's region.

After all three had outstanding seasons, helping to lead the Skippers to their first South Shore League crown in over 25 years, the three finally had the chance to measure up to some of the best competition around. Some of the top finishers were even invited to Nationals at some point over the last few months.

Other Cohasset/ Bay State Games notables

This coming weekend, this trio will have the chance to measure up against some great opponents in the 7-versus-7 soccer competition. In addition to Baird, Maitland and Laney, Cohasset sophomores Jesse Brewer (goalie) and Chris Clarke, juniors Robert Hickey and Greg O'Connell, and senior Dan Kinchla will be going.

11-year old Little League All-Stars seek another District 8 crown

By Mark G. DeGiacomo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Little League's 11 year old All Star Team has won it's last three games in their quest to defend their District 8 Championship which they have held for the last two years. With only four games left in the regular season, these All Stars are already looking forward to the playoffs as well as tournaments in Raynham and Middleboro which will take place over the next several weeks.

The season started slowly with losses in their first two games to Rockland and Braintree American. In the opener, Rockland was out for some "pay back" against the boys who beat them in the last years' District 8 Championship Game.

"We've been waiting for this game since last August," Rockland's coach told Cohasset's head coach Bob Morgan before the contest began.

Cohasset jumped out to an early lead in the first inning when Tommy Chase doubled in Cody Morgan, who had singled. Later in the inning, Sam DeGiacomo doubled in Chase and Pat Doonan who had reached on a fielders choice.

Dave Snowdale shut out Rockland in the first two innings but he ran into trouble in the third inning when an error, two walks and a single left the score knotted at three.

In the bottom of the third, Brian Hill led off the inning with a long home run over the left center field fence. Cohasset's new pitcher in the fourth inning had some control problems which resulted in six walks and four runs. Rockland added one run in the Three of the 16 members of this team played for Scituate's Patriot League runner-ups this spring.

That number could easily have been higher.

Junior Judy Karlberg, named by us an Honorable Mention, emerged as a force in singles behind Jackie Oulette to give the Lady Sailors a solid one-two punch that should be even more of a force to be reckoned with in 2002.

After consulting with area coaches, however, these are the choices we made for our 2001 All-Scholastic girls tennis team:

hardwood this winter, earning her a High Honorable Mention with the Mariner's All-Scholastic Girls Basketball team…ranks in the top 10 of her class… Cohasset Coach Sarah Meehan: "She is so mentally strong, I think she can beat anyone."

Katherine Ehle - Senior (Capt.)
First Singles - Marshfield

Unquestionably one of the most successful tennis players to come out of Marshfield High and arguably one of the most dominating singles players on the South Shore…In her four-year career at Marshfield's first singles spot, Ehle racked up an impressive 62-4 record…Ehle went undefeated this season at 15-0, leading Marshfield to an undefeated regular season (16-0) and an Atlantic Coast League title…Her solid performances at the number one spot helped lead the Marshfield team to the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament…Ehle made it to the quarterfinals of the State Individual tournament…The senior has received a full tennis scholarship to Div. 1 Quinnipiac College in Hamden, Conn. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "She's very professional when she's on the court. It's her prime sport and means a lot in her life. She was a joy to coach. She needed very little help. She's very mature and has been since her freshman year."

Katherine Ehle

Liz Kelly - Senior (Capt.)
First Singles - Hingham

Her consistency at the number one singles spot helped lead the Harborwomen to an undefeated Patriot League title (10-0, 14-3 overall)…The PL All-star's performance in 5-0 and 3-2 wins over PL rival Scituate helped Hingham gain a little revenge on the Sailors, who edged the Harborwomen for the league title last year…Helped lead Hingham to the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney…Kelly will be one of the greatest losses felt by Hingham as she will move on to play tennis for St. Lawrence College next year. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "She was a great captain and worked very hard all season long. She was really on her own as far as caliber of play. No one could touch her. She was always very supportive to everyone. She's just an all-around great kid."

Liz Kelly

Sara Bitetti - Junior
First Singles - Norwell

Followed up a sensational17-2 sophomore season, with a solid 13-5 campaign…Only lost twice in South Shore League play this year, with both of those defeats coming at the hand of Lindsay Grossman (who remained undefeated in high school match play this season)…Sara came as close to anyone as taking Grossman down, however, taking her to a third set tiebreaker in the regular season finale…her other three losses were to non-league all-stars Sasha Sullivan of Bourne (twice) and Jackie Oulette of Scituate…later avenged the loss to Oulette…a two-time South Shore League Tennis All-Star…also a track star at Norwell High, having been named a South Shore League All-Star for cross country in each of her three years at the school…ran winter track as a freshman…Editor of the Yearbook Staff…Class Treasurer…Ranked Ninth in the Class of 2002…Would like to play tennis in college…has looked at the University of Pennsylvania and Boston College, among others….Norwell tennis coach Sharon Flaherty: "Sara has a lot of athleticism and potential as a tennis player. When she puts her mind to it, she can be as god as anyone. I'm hoping she can put it altogether for a big senior year."

Sara Bitetti

Jackie Oulette - Junior
First Singles - Scituate

A multi-time tough luck loser this year…finished 8-2 in Patriot League play and 9-5 overall, with three of those losses coming to star players in tightly contested three set matches…her two league losses came to Hingham's unbeaten Liz Kelly (another of our All-Scholastic's) , including one of her three set thrillers…split season series with Norwell star Sara Bitetti (another Mariner All-Scholastic)…considered a student of the game who is always working to improve her craft…a Patriot League All-Star… took over the number one singles spot from the Patriot League's most dominant tennis player in 2000, Shannon McCarthy, and did so admirably, according to coach Judy Mullin….works at Driftway Tennis Club in Scituate…strives to be "better prepared next year"…older brother Jim (Scituate High, Class of '98) was captain of the boys tennis team from his sophomore through senior years and lost only five matches for his high school career…Scituate girls tennis coach Judy Mullin: "Jackie stepped into some big shoes and really gave us a solid and consistent presence all year. She took losses very hard because such a competitor, but all the losses were to the cream of the crop in this area. She works hard, and I figure she's really going to come back for a great senior year."

Jackie Oulette

Danielle Spencer - Sophomore
Third Singles - Abington

Formerly just a hobby, this talented sophomore proved herself on the varsity courts this season, posting an impressive 17-2 record…Prior to this year, Spencer had only played tennis recreationally, but her addition to the Abington High squad proved invaluable…The South Shore League All-star's solid performances on the third singles court helped lead Abington to a third place finish in the league and to its first Div. 3 South Sectional tourney win (a 3-2 decision over Hopkinton) in the program's 10-year history…Now serious about the sport, Spencer will participate in tennis camps this summer and will among the top returnees to the Green Wave tennis program next year. Abington coach Marc Liberatore: "She had a great year for us. The fact that she did so well in her first varsity year is really something. By the time the season ended, she was probably one of the best players in the league. We're really excited to see how she'll do next year. She could really take off."

Danielle Spencer

Doubles

Lauren Benbenek / Katie Ryan
First Doubles - Marshfield

Had a stellar 2001 campaign in the duo's first year playing together…Benbenek, a sophomore, and Ryan, a junior, posted an impressive 14-1 regular season record, helping to lead the Lady Rams to undefeated regular season and an Atlantic Coast League title…Both ACL All-stars, the girls' combination of strength (Benbenek) and consistency (Ryan) at the number one doubles spot helped the Marshfield team advance to the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tournament…Both players will be back next year, returning as one of the team's top prospects. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "They worked so well together this year. They're very comfortable on the court. They talk to each other and they know where each other is going to be."

Lauren Benbenek

Katie Ryan

Lisa Trebino / Meredith Kernan -
First Doubles - Hingham

The talented senior co-captains were a gem on the court this season, often notching the point to secure a victory…The duo—who have played together for two years—went undefeated in regular season play this season from the number one doubles spot, boasting a perfect 4-0 record (8-3 overall)…Both Patriot League All-stars, Trebino and Kernan helped lead Hingham to an undefeated league title (10-0) and to the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament…Trebino is making her second appearance on a Mariner All-Scholastic team as she was chosen to our field hockey squad last fall…Both Trebino and Kernan plan to attend Middlebury College in the fall. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "They are a great team. They're just good together and were always very supportive of one another."

Lisa Trebino

Meredith Kernan

Nilah Pandian / Dee Wheeler -
First Doubles - Hanover

Were the shining stars on the extremely young Lady Indians' team…Had a solid year from the number one doubles spot, going 9-1 in the South Shore League…The duo split decisions with the league champion Norwell's first doubles team's for their only league loss…Pandian, a senior captain, and Wheeler, a sophomore, went 9-3 overall this season, their only out of league losses coming at the hands of fellow All-Scholastics Benbenek and Ryan from Marshfield… The duo was playing together for the first time this season and were both elected SSL All-stars… Pandian is a two-year league All-star after playing her junior season with HHS graduate Kelly Sarson…Pandian will be among the most felt losses next season as she will be attending Boston University in the fall…Wheeler will be among Hanover's top prospects next season. Hanover coach Jim Sylvia: "They really complimented each other well. It's really a credit to Nilah who played with two different people and was an All-star each year. It takes a while to learn each other's style and how to communicate, but they made it work."

Nilah Pandian

Dee Wheeler

Christine Donehue / Sarah Nelson
First Doubles - Scituate

This dynamic senior duo lost only twice playing together in match play over the last two seasons…their lone loss this season came in the rubber match with Hingham's Lisa Trebino and Meredith Kernan…loss last year came in state tourney…two-time Patriot League All-Stars…made it to quarterfinals of state individual tourney this season after going to the semifinals last season as juniors (at which point Christine had to pull out due to mononucleosis)…the two recent graduates have been playing together and against one another since grade school, but only teamed up as doubles partners last year…complimented one another well, with Sarah's big serve and Christine surpassing ground strokes…for the past two years, the pair worked together every week year-round with Chris Horne, the owner of Driftway Tennis Club in Scituate, to refine their doubles play…Christine has chosen Harvard over MIT…Sarah will attend Mary Washington University in Virginia, where she is leaning towards majoring in business… Scituate girls tennis coach Judy Mullin: "There's not a lot more I can say about these girls that hasn't already been said. They really are the best. They work hard and play great together, and they're great kids. They're obviously going to leave some real big shoes to fill next year."

Sarah Nelson and Christine Donehue

Erika Schmidt / Ashley Dye
First Doubles - Norwell

Went 12-2 in their second season as partners, splitting their season series with the South Shore League's other dominant team (and fellow Mariner All-Scholastic selections)— Nilah Pandian and Dee Wheeler of Hanover …Erika, a senior, and Ashley, a junior, smoked the Hanover duo the second time around, 7-5, 6-1…helped the Lady Clippers to a co-league championship with Cohasset…both of their losses (Hanover and Westwood in non-league action) came in three sets…Ashley started out playing singles at the beginning of the season, but soon came back to rejoin her partner for the betterment of the team…the two compliment each other well, with Erika being strong on the serve and at the net, and Ashley possessing an adept ground stroke game…one of the highlights of the season was beating powerhouse Bourne High's first doubles team…Ashley is leaning towards majoring in business and would like to go to school down south…Norwell tennis coach Sharon Flaherty: "Erika and Ashley worked so well together. It would have been nice to see them get another year together because they just seemed to really be taking it to another level. I don't think the rest of the South Shore League will be too heartbroken though (about Schmidt's graduation)."

A painful ending

as he turned and walked away, clearly not in the mood to say anymore.

The scene was eerily similar following Saturday night's setback at Adams Field in Quincy, where a win would have pushed Cohasset past host Quincy in to the fifth and final playoff spot in District 6. Cohasset had staked itself to a 5-1 lead over Quincy just to see the home team roar back and take the lead at 6-5. Cohasset tied it up in the top of the seventh, but Quincy scored the walkoff game-winner in the bottom of that frame on a bang-bang play at the plate.

Things looked even better for the Post 118 squad on Monday night, carrying a 6-1 lead into the fourth inning after scoring four runs in the second and two more in the third.

Braintree started the comeback in the fourth, making Cohasset starter Tom Fitzgerald pay for allowing the first two batters to reach without a batted ball, as the lefty hit Chris Gooding and walked T.C. Okinski. Each would come home on scratch singles.

Fitzgerald appeared to settle down in the fifth, striking out two sandwiched around an infield single.

Control again became an issue in the sixth, however, as Fitzgerald surrendered a pair of walks, the second to the number nine hitter with two outs. Back-to-back doubles over the head of left-fielder Eric Dmohowski by Derek Rice and Nick Angelini tied the game at 6-6.

This knocked Fitzgerald from the game in favor of staff ace Jesse Cole. After getting two strikes on the always dangerous Brant Smith, the Braintree number three batter won the battle when he dropped a soft line-drive just over the head of second baseman Alex Knight. Angelini, off on contact with two outs, scored easily from second to give the hosts the 7-6 lead.

Brian Wood fouled off a couple of tough two-strike pitches to work a one-out walk in Cohasset's final at bat, but Gooding, who pitched three scoreless innings of relief, bared down after that to notch back-to-back strike outs to close out the game and Cohasset's playoff aspirations.

The big hitters did most of the damage for Cohasset in the game. Leadoff man Jason Connelly went 2-for-4 with four RBI, three of them coming home on a two-out, bases-clearing double to left-center in the third.

Cole also went 2-for-4 out of the three-hole, with a pair of doubles. He led off the fifth inning with a smash down the leftfield line for his second two-bagger, but wound up stranded along with two others, as Cohasset failed to cash in on a golden opportunity.

Cohasset also lost an opportunity to cushion its lead in the third. It appeared Mike Snowdale would be the fourth baserunner among the first five in the inning when his long drive to center was bobbled and dropped by Angelini as he went straight back on the ball. However, Wood, not seeing the miscue, initially retreated to first base, providing Angelini the opportunity to fire in and force him at second base.

Cohasset wrapped up its season on Wednesday night under the lights at Adams Field against the Morissette Post.

Correction

Due to misinformation in the Bay State Games media packet, it was reported in last week's Mariner that Sarah Roche would be competing in this week's 6-on-6 field hockey tourney. In fact, Sarah is one of the coaches for the Southeast team in the Bay State Games. Her daughters—Anne and Katie Roche, who were not listed in the media packet—are actually the ones playing on the team.

Cohasset Swim team stays perfect

Swimmers blow Duxbury out of water to go to 3-0

By Eileen McBride
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It's now three out of three for Cohasset Swim Team. On Friday afternoon the team extended its winning streak when they defeated Duxbury Yacht Club by 166 points.

Cohasset started well in the 100-yard medley relays with first, second and fourth place finishes for the eight and under boys (1st: Mahoney, R.; Buckley, T.; Carrier, J.; Durkin, T.; 2nd: Lynner, W.; Campbell, B.; Shipp, M.; Durkin, J.; 4th: Murphy, C; Faber, J.; Murphy, J.; Carpenter, C.) and first, third and fourth places for the girls (1st: Michalowski, A.; Fontaine, E.; Musto, E.; Donohue, M.; 3rd: Axelson, D.; Seraikas, A.; Murphy, O; Berbe, M.; 4th: Farren, A.; Teague, M.; Kelly, K.; Farren, N.).

The ten and under boys struggled in this event but the girls redressed the balance with a first place finish (boys: 4th: McCormack, T.; Yeager, J.; Ofsthun, C.; Queenan, C.; girls: 1st: Mahoney, M.; Lehr, S.; Meehan, S.; Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Costa, A.; Teague, K.; Lehr, T.; Asnault, A.; 5th: Jennings, M.; Sullivan, O.; Dickinson, R.; Zappolo, C.). Cohasset then went on to win three out of the remaining four relay races (boys, 12 and under: 1st: Hunt, A.; Musto, C.; Conway, C.; Zappolo, N.; 3rd: Shipp, A.; DeGiacomo, S.; Daly, B.; McCarthy, J. ; 4th: Porter, N., Kuppens, C.; Faber, C.; Masotta, B.L.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Herman, E.; Fortin, S.; Durkin, L.; Englander, E.; 4th: Plante, V.; Campbell, A.; Regan, M.; Teague, M.; 5th: Foley, A.; Previte, M.; Swain, K.; McCarthy, M.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Bilton, B.; Faber, S.; Ingber, D.; Flynn, C.; 2nd: Roach, J.; Herman, A.; Berg, P.; Blackburn, C.). Although the seventeen and under girls missed the win, they put in a strong performance to secure second, third and fourth positions (2nd: Orsini, M.; O'Brien, K.; Daley, M.; Lehr, R.; 3rd: Harrington, B.; Anderson, C.; Ogrodnik, M.; Musto, L.; 4th: Foley, T.; Faber, A.; Larson, J.; Regan, D.). The first event of the afternoon ended with Cohasset nudging ahead of the visitors by 20 points.

As the swimmers prepared for the individual medleys, the ten and under boys and girls swam the 50-yard freestyle. The boys missed the win and took second, fourth and fifth places (2nd: Ulmer, W.; 4th: Ofsthun, C.; 5th: Connors, R.), but the girls were right behind them with first, second and fourth place finishes (1st: Meehan, S.; 2nd: Lehr, T.; 4th: Mahoney, C.).

The individual 100-yard medley relays started well with a win from the 12 and under boys (1st: Conway, C.; 2nd: Hunt, A.; 4th: McCarthy, J.), and a first and second place from the girls (1st: Durkin, L.; 2nd: Englander, L.). The fourteen and under boys event went uncontested, and produced an unfortunate DQ for the only Cohasset swimmer. The girls barely missed first place, but secured second, third and fourth position finishes (2nd: Lehr, B.; 3rd: Larson, J.; 4th: Ogrodnik, M.). The seventeen and under boys again just missed the win and took second and third places, while the girls swept the board, shutting out Duxbury with first, second and third place finishes (boys: 2nd: Bilton, B.; 3rd: Roach, J.; girls: 1st: O'Brien, K.; 2nd: Orsini, M.; 3rd: Daley, M.). Going into the 25-yard freestyle event, Cohasset continued to hold onto the lead (99:56).

Cohasset's youngest swimmers put in their usual good performances to win three out of four of the 25-yard freestyle races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: Durkin, J.; 4th: Durkin, T.; 5th: Campbell, B.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 3rd: Fontaine, E.; 5th: Murphy, O.; boys, 10 and under: 3rd: Connors, R.; 5th: Ofsthun, C.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Lehr, S.; 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 5th: McElhinny, C.). And the 50-yard freestyles were almost as productive for Cohasset, with a win from the twelve and under girls, the fourteen and under girls and boys, and the seventeen and under girls (girls, 12 and under: 1st: Englander, L.; 3rd: Teague, M.; 4th: McCarthy, M.; boys, 14 and under: 1st: Roach, K.; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Anderson, C.; 2nd: Musto, L.; 4th: Harrington, B. girls, 17 and under: 1st: O'Brien, K.; 3rd: Regan, D.; 4th: Foley, T.). The 12 and under boys and the seventeen and under boys were denied the win but took second, third and fourth places (boys, 12 and under: 2nd: Zappolo, N.; 3rd: McCarthy, J.; 4th: Shipp, A.; boys, 17 and under: 2nd: Ingber, D.; 3rd: Flynn, C.; 4th: Blackburn, C.) and Cohasset's lead was further extended.

Cohasset won three out of the six 25-yard butterflies, with the eight and under, ten and under and twelve and under girls securing first places in each of their races (girls, 8 and under: 1st: Musto, E.; 3rd: Murphy, O.; 4th: Kelly, K.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Meehan, S.; 2nd: Lehr, T.; 4th: Mahoney, M.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Herman, E.; 5th: Anderson, M.). The eight and under boys may not have won but they took the rest of the spoils, finishing second, third and fourth (2nd: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Shipp, M.; 4th: Durkin, T.) but the ten and under boys were pushed back into fourth, fifth and sixth places (4th: Daly, R.; 5th: Ulmer, W.; 6th: Ofsthun, C.) and the twelve and under boys came through in second, fourth and fifth positions (2nd: Conway, C.; 4th: Musto, C.; 5th: Daly, B.).

In the 50-yard butterfly, Cohasset got a good start with an uncontested first in the fourteen and under race (1st: Berg, P.) and a second and third from the fourteen and under girls (2nd: Daley, M.; 3rd: Larson, J.). Both the seventeen and under girls and boys put the icing on the cake with wins in their races (boys: 1st: Ingber, D.; 2nd: Flynn, C.; girls: 1st: Orsini, M.; 3rd: Shea, E.). The score now stood at Cohasset 202, Duxbury 127.

The breaststroke events were up next and, true to form, the eight and under swimmers put in great performances to win both the girls and boys races (boys: 1st: Buckley, T.; 3rd: Campbell, B.; 4th: Murphy, C.; girls: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 2nd: Axelson, D.; 5th: Seraikas, A.). The ten and under boys and girls couldn't quite make the win but did make it into second place in their races (boys: 2nd: Porter, I.; 5th: Yeager, J.; 6th: McCormack, T.; girls: 2nd: Lehr, S.; 5th: Teague, K.; 6th: Sullivan, O.).

Cohasset Swim Team member Melissa Orsini placed in four events in Friday's whitewashing of the Duxbury Yacht Club team.

In the 50-yard breaststroke, once again Cohasset got off to a great start with a clean sweep of first, second and third for the twelve and under boys (1st: Zappolo, N.; 2nd: Daly, B.; 3rd: Musto, C.) and a first, third and fifth for the girls (1st: Durkin, L.; 3rd: Fortin, S.; 5th: McCarthy, M.). The success continued with wins for Cohasset in the remaining four breaststroke races (boys, 14 and under: 1st: Roach, K.; 3rd: Gannon; girls, 14 and under: 1st: Anderson, C.; 2nd: Faber, S.; 5th: Shea, E.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Faber, S.; 2nd: Roach, J.; 3rd: Blackburn, C.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: Foley, T.; 2nd: Weston, E.). Duxbury were now trailing by more than 100 points.

The breaststroke had gone well and the pattern prevailed for the 25-yard backstroke event. Cohasset went undefeated in all four 25-yard backstroke races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Lynner, W.; 3rd: Mahoney, R.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Musto, E.; 4th: Kelly, K.; boys, 10 and under: 1st: Connors, R.; 4th: Daly, R.; 5th: Queenan, C.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Costa, A.; 2nd: Mahoney, M.; 6th: Jennings, M.).

The 50-yard races were not so consistently productive, but the home team had a swimmer in first place in three of the six races (boys, 12 and under: 1st: Hunt, A.; 3rd: Shipp, A.; 4th: Porter, N.; girls, 12 and under: 2nd: Daly, S.; 6th: Foley, A.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Bilton, B.; 3rd: Faber, S.). The fourteen and under girls took second, third and fourth places and their seventeen and under team-mates finished second and third (girls, 14 and under: 2nd: Harrington, B.; 3rd: Musto, L.; 4th: Faber, A.; girls, 17 and under: 2nd: Regan, D.; 3rd: Shea, E.). The fourteen and under boys were unplaced in their event.

The last races of the day were the free relays. In the 100-yard event the home team once again scored high with wins in five of the six races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: Buckley, T.; Campbell, B.; Carrier, J.; Durkin, T.; 2nd: Durkin, T.; Mahoney, R.; Murphy, J.; Shipp, M.; 3rd: McCarthy, M.; Culhane, Murphy, J.; Durkin, T.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Fontaine, E.; Musto, E.; Murphy, O.; Michalowski, A.; 3rd: Berbe, M.; Donohue, M.; Seraikas, A.; Axelson, D.; 4th: Farren, A.; Farren, N. Teague, M.; Kelly, K.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Mahoney, M.; Lehr, S.; Mahoney, C.; Meehan, S.; 3rd: Dickinson, R.; Donohue, T.; Lehr, T. Sullivan, O.; 4th: Culhane, C.; McBride, F.; Teague, K.; Kearns, A.; boys, 12 and under: 1st: Hunt, A.; Conway, C.; Daly, B.; Zappolo, N.; 2nd: DeGiacomo, S.; Musto, C.; McCarhty, J.; Porter, I.; 4th: Cunningham, C.; Drybanski, J.; Kuppens, C.; McCarthy, E.; girls, 12 and under: 1st: Herman, E.; Durkin, L.; Englander, L.; Previte, M.; 3rd: Anderson, M.; Campbell, A.; Coggins, E.; Daly, S.; 4th: Fortin, S.; McCarthy, M.; Teague, M.; Swain, K.).

The ten and under boys just missed the win but secured second and fifth places (boys, 10 and under: 2nd: Ofsthun, C.; Porter, I.; Yeager, J.; Ulmer, W.; 5th: McCormack, T.; Plante, J.; Queenan, C.; Connors, R.). The meet ended as it had begun with wins for Cohasset when the seventeen and under boys won an uncontested first and second place, and the girls pulled off first, third and fourth position finishes (boys: 1st: Blackburn, C.; Bilton, B.; Flynn, C.; Ingber, D.; 2nd: Berg, P.; Roach, K.; Faber, S.; Roach, J.; girls: 1st: Daley, M.; Larson, J.; Lehr, R.; Orsini, M.; 3rd: Musto, L.; Anderson, C.; Foley, T.; Regan, D.; 4th: Faber, A.; Harrington, B.; Ogrodnik, M.; Shea, E.).

The afternoon added to an increasingly impressive record for Cohasset Swim Team. Congratulations to the swimmers and their coaches Alison Hughes, Ted Hughes and Garet Jacobucci. And well done to the visitors, Duxbury Yacht Club. Thank you to the volunteers who work as timers, organizers, runners, concession-stand managers, scorers and unofficial cheerleaders! The meet couldn't happen without you.

We look forward to a busy week when the team will compete against Eel River Swim Club, mid week, and meet MASK on Friday, July 20th.

Family affair

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

This coming weekend, two pairs of South Shore League sisters will lead a Notre Dame Academy attack into the field hockey Bay State games in Fort Devens.

Senior Anna Roche and her junior sister Katie will represent Cohasset in the 48 team field. Ditto for the Wahle sisters of Hingham, senior Courtney and junior Cara.

In addition, the Roche sisters' mother, Sarah, has done the organizing of the team, and serves as the closest resemblance they have to a coach.

Anna remains convinced that the close knit team needs little to no coaching.

"We don't really have a coach," she said. "[This team] has played together for so long that we all know each other, and we know what we are going to do."

Regardless, Sarah Roche has experience on the field hockey field, as she played all through her high school career in England. But even if she has not been given the official title of Coach by her team, she is still thrilled simply to be working with her daughters.

"It will be fun to see them," reported Roche. "With Anna, I have been watching her for so many years, and it's funny, but this is her last season."

All four of the Roche and Wahle girls will likely play for the NDA varsity Aces next year, and Anna has recently been elected captain for the 2001 field hockey season. In addition, she was selected for the Futures team, an elite squad playing for the American Field Hockey Association at Wheaton College.

Cara, Courtney, Katie and Anna also play for an indoor league in the Bridgewater Dome year round, so playing this weekend will be nothing new for them.

What will be new, however, is the format, as they will be playing a 6-versus-6 for full hour games. Notre Dame senior Katie D'Amore, who was named a League All-Star team for her efforts with the Aces, will be the team's goalie, with five position players.

"It is a lot different," explained Cara Wahle of the difference from the normal 11v11 they play for their school. "You need to plan out the field more and communicate."

These girls do have some experience with a six player field from summer league field hockey as well as the indoor league, but on those teams, they opted to play without a goalie.

This Saturday, 48 team fields will be split into 12 pools of four teams each. Each squad will play three half-hour games, with a half-hour rest between each one. If a team wins all three, they move into the playoffs, which will be held Sunday, culminating in the championships at one o'clock on Sunday.

Still, this is all for fun, and the girls have kept that in mind.

"It should be fun, because there is no pressure," said Katie Roche. "There are going to be some pretty talented girls out there, and we can just go out there and do our best."

Added Anna Roche: "I think we are going out there more to have fun than anything else."

Southeast Dominates Bay State Lacrosse

The South Shore and its neighbors proved to have no peers in boys' high school lacrosse, dominating the 2001 Bay State Games competition by going unbeaten, topping the West 11-5 in the gold medal game held Sunday at Wentworth Institute in Boston.

In the championship contest, the South was led by three Hingham all-scholastic players – defenseman Greg Sowyrda, and attackmen Conor Fitzgerald and Patrick Lenhart – who stifled the West attack and scored seven of South's 11 goals. Fitzgerald, who'll be a senior in 2002, had five goals and an assists to lead all scorers. He finished the tournament with nine goals and four assists. Teammate Lenhart had two goals and a pair of assists in the medal game, and wound up with five goals and five assists as the team's second-best scorer.

"Our most valuable player was probably Greg Sowyrda," said South head coach Kevin Orcutt, who also led the Cohasset High School squad to a state runner-up finish in this, his first season as a high school varsity coach. "He shut down Peter Streibl."

Streibl, the Deerfield Academy star who was the cornerstone of the West offense, scored just one goal, and that came with Sowyrda was in the penalty box.

"Greg did that for us in every game," continued Orcutt, "taking on the other team's top scorer."

Sowyrda got a lot of help from Milton's Gerard Dhooge, Needham's Scott Farquharson and Weymouth's Ed Melville, who comprised a defense that allowed an average of only six goals per game against some of the most highly-touted offensive stars in the state. Longstick midfielder Nick Spirito, who'll be a junior at Cohasset next year, was superb on faceoffs, supporting midfielders Tony McDonald of Weymouth, Kevin Lynch of Milton, and Ben Fuchs of Duxbury, as South won two out of every three draws. And Needham's Adam Maxwell, injured for the first two games, gave solid support to the other defensemen in the wins over North and the West.

"We thought our strength would be in our midfield depth," said Orcutt, "and that proved to be the case. No one we played could match up with our three midfields. Without a doubt, we had the best two-way players in the tournament in the middle of the field."

Besides Fuchs, McDonald and Lynch, the South could field Russell Chase of Thayer Academy, Mark Rossi of New Bedford High, Steve Williams of Norwell, Steve McDevitt of Scituate, Justin Marks of Salisbury Prep, and Brendan Reardon of Needham. Matt Erisman, a Nantucket High attackman, also saw several shifts on midfield, especially in the gold medal game, when the South was missing both Williams and Marks.

Despite the fact that 10 of the 11 goals scored in the championship game came from the attack (McDevitt was the lone middie to find the back of the net), it was in the midfield the South controlled the pace of the second half.

Tied 3-3 after two periods, the first time the South had found itself in a game without a lead, the champs reeled off four unanswered scores from Fitzgerald and Needham's Brad Luckhardt. Luckhardt, who scored seven goals in the tourney, finished the game with a pair of goals and an assist.

"After that run, we relaxed and played the kind of game we'd shown in the earlier contests," said Orcutt, who was assisted by Cohasset assistant Terry Kahn, Emerson College head coach Stu Curran and Scituate High coach Chris Webber. "In the last period, we really moved the ball well, took the body and dictated the way things would go."

In the final period, Fitzgerald added two more, while McDevitt and Cohasset attackman Curt Kahn added single tallies.

"Our attack really played well," said Orcutt. "Getting the eight players we used at that position – Fitzgerald, Lenhart, Luckhardt, Kahn, Erisman, Cohasset's Paul Previte, Russ Chase, and Ryan Voccola of Philips Exeter – to come together as a unit was probably the most difficult task our coaches had. Obviously, they meshed pretty well."

Another standout position for the South was in the goal. All-Scholastic Kyle Weber, who earned a silver medal in 2000, added a gold to his collection and finished the tournament with an outstanding .710 save percentage. In the championship game, Weber had nine saves and allowed just two goals. His partner in the cage, Duxbury's Pat Kelley, made his first Bay State Games competition a success by posting a solid .684 percentage, and stopping seven shots in the finals while giving up three goals.

"This was a validation that our region plays outstanding lacrosse, and that our boys represent the best in high school lacrosse that Massachusetts has to offer," said Orcutt. "I can't wait for next year."

Cohasset tracksters shine at Bay State's Cohasset.

Away from the track and onto the mat, Cohasset High School was originally going to send three very strong competitors in senior Dan Littauer, freshman Jon Littauer, and sophomore Phil Strazzula.

However, neither Jon Littauer nor Strazzula could make the events due to injury and sickness, respectively.

Dan Littauer, arguably the best wrestler Cohasset High sent to the mat this past season, was living proof of how tough the competition was, winning only one match and losing two.

BC High senior athlete from Cohasset Ben Kinch also entered, placing eighth in his weight class.

Gizele Richards took fourth in both the Open Women's triple jump competition (9-53-meters) and the long jump (4.10-meters).

sixth to make the final score 8-4.

The Braintree American game also started out well for the good guys from Cohasset. In the first inning, with two out, Sam DeGiacomo hit a long drive that one hopped the left field fence for a double. He then scored on a solid single by Kyle Pinkus. Cohasset starter Cody Morgan pitched shut out innings in the first and second but the third inning was again Cohasset's downfall when three walks and two errors led to five Braintree runs. When Braintree scored three more in the bottom of the fifth inning, it looked like lights out for Cohasset, but the "never say die" boys in blue wouldn't go down without a fight.

Nine Cohasset batters came to the plate in the final sixth inning and four runs scored before Braintree escaped with an 8-5 win. The last inning comeback included a RBI double by Dave Snowdale and RBI singles by Justin Hollis and Chris Mills.

"After that last inning rally in Braintree the boys never looked back" said Coach Morgan.

Pity poor Braintree National who found themselves next on Cohasset's schedule. After two hours of baseball at Barnes Field, they limped home after receiving a 14-2 thumping. Dave Snowdale, Kenny Muir and Chris Mills' combined pitching effort allowed Braintree only four hits. Meanwhile, Muir and Morgan led the Cohasset attack with three hits each while DeGiacomo, Snowdale and Cunningham each chipped in with two hits. Defense also played an important role in this lopsided victory, as five Braintree runners were cut down on the base paths.

Next up was a tough Stoughton club. Their coach made no bones about it: he told his boys this was their biggest regular season game because they were coming up against the champions. When Stoughton scored two in the bottom of the first inning, all looked bright for the Stoughton faithful. Unfortunately for them, those two runs would be the last they would score during this extra inning contest. A third inning walk to Justin Hollis followed by back to back singles by Kenny Muir and Cameron Cunningham led to Cohasset's first run. Then back-to-back doubles by Kyle Pinkus and Brian Hill in the fifth tied the score at two.

Strong pitching by Brian Hill and Tommy Chase, as well as a stellar defense led by centerfielder Dave Snowdale who threw out three runners at second and one at home, forced the game into extra frames.

Cohasset struck early in the seventh. Lead off batter Chris Rose singled to right field and the next batter, Sam DeGiacomo, singled to left. After both boys stole a base, Brian Hill brought them home with a single of his own. Dave Snowdale pitched a scoreless seventh inning to gain the hard fought win by final score of 4-2.

Next up was Weymouth. Cohasset struck early scoring four runs in the first inning on five hits including a double by Brian Hill. Cohasset had five different pitchers hold Weymouth to just three runs in a 9-3 victory that featured three hits by Tommy Chase.

It looks like our champions have hit their stride just in time for the playoffs and two tough tournaments where they will play teams from Raynham, Brockton and other large cities and towns. Don't bet against them!

OBITUARIES

Richard F. Howe

Richard F. "Dick" Howe, 87, of Arundel, Maine, formally of Cohasset, died June 13, 2001, at home after a long illness. He was born in Springfield, a son of the late Arthur B. and Mary J. Mulcahy Howe and attended Cohasset schools.

Mr. Howe worked at Avco in all aspects of the research, design, development, testing, manufacturing and deployment of components for intercontinental ballistic missile manufacture and deployment as vice president and general manager for missile programs. He retired in 1971.

The mother of his three children, Edythe (Wilcox) died in 1988. His daughter, Linda Grey, died in 1999. His brother, Arthur B. Howe, his sisters, Louise Ryder and Marion Jeannette Raschi also preceded him in death. All three were formally of Cohasset.

Mr. Howe leaves his wife, Elenore, of Arundel, Maine; a daughter, Sheila Borgsteede of Florida; a son, Richard Jr. of Florida; six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren; a sister, Katheryn Shea of Wyoming and New Hampshire; a brother, Robert Howe of Danvers and a brother Paul Howe of West Springfield; and several nieces and nephews. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Dana Salvador

Dana Salvador, 44, of Cohasset, a lobsterman for 30 years died July 14, 2001, at home.

His fishing vessel was named Bessie S. after his grandmother.

Born in Brockton, he was a lifelong resident of Cohasset.

He graduated from Cohasset High School in 1967 and later from a trade school.

He leaves his parents, Manuel E. and Jean M. (Barrow) Salvador.

A memorial service was held in St. Anthony's Church. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Kidney Research Foundation, Massachusetts General Hospital, c/o 44 Binney St., Boston.

Russell Henry Yeager

Russell Henry Yeager, 69, of Cohasset died at home on July 7, 2001 after an eight-month battle with cancer.

Mr. Yeager was owner of a food brokerage company for 16 years and retired in 1997.

He was a Navy veteran of the Korean War and Purple Heart recipient.

He was a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and the Masons.

He enjoyed traveling with his family to Maine and Florida, golfing and deep-sea fishing.

Born and raised in Williamstown, Pa., he graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a bachelor's degree in business. He lived in Delray Beach, Fla., before moving to Cohasset seven years ago.

Mr. Yeager leaves his wife, Vicki (Thomas) Yeager; a son, Russell H. Yeager, Jr. of Watertown; and a daughter, Margaux Yeager of Cohasset.

A funeral service was held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Interment will be private, at a later date in Cohasset Central Cemetery. Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., Braintree 02184; or to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Arthur E. Sands

Arthur E., Sands, 88, a 20-year resident of Marshfield, formerly from Cohasset and Hingham for 40 years, died July 11, 2001, in his home, following a brief illness.

He was born in Medford and graduated from Quincy High School. During World War II Arthur was a Civil Air Patrol Technician. He was a member of the Massachusetts Audubon Society and enjoyed watching birds.

He leaves two daughters, Priscilla Beck of Pembroke and Janet Samson of Santa Cruz, Calif.; a son, John Sands of Marshfield, six grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a nephew, Stephen Sands of London, England.

He was husband of the late F. Louise Alden Sands.

Services were private. Memorials may be directed to the South Shore Wildlife Sanctuaries, Mass. Audubon Society, 2000 Main St., Marshfield, MA 02050. Arrangements were handled by the Cremation Society of Massachusetts, Quincy (www.csofma.com).

WORSHIP NEWS

Fr. Mulvehill re-appointed

The Rev. John R. Mulvehill has been re-appointed as pastor of St. Anthony Parish for a second six-year term. Father Mulvehill said that his appointment was made recently by Boston Archbishop, Bernard Cardinal Law. He thanked all those who have made his past six years in Cohasset "a time of great joy and spiritual growth." Before coming to Cohasset, Fr. Mulvehill was pastor of St. Francis Xavier Parish in South Weymouth and previously served at St. Theresa Parish in West Roxbury.

In other news, altar servers from St. Anthony's will be treated to a free outing to Six Flags on July 28. Invitations will be sent out this week to those who volunteer for this ministry. Parents are welcome to attend as chaperones. The only expense for participants will be for refreshments. The parish will pay for the bus and tickets as a way of thanking young volunteers.

Annual outdoor sunset Mass

The Annual Outdoor Sunset Mass al the Portiuncula Chapel, located on the campus of Cardinal Cushing Centers at Hanover (405 Washington St. Route 53 in Hanover), will be held on Thursday, Aug. 2, at 6:30 p.m. Most Reverend Bishop Richard J. Malone will be the Principle Celebrant, with signing for the hearing impaired provided by Concelebrant Reverend Charles Murphy. Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament will be observed inside the Chapel and the rosary will be recited every half-hour from noon to 5:30 p.m.

The chapel overlooks Cardinal Cushing Centers at Hanover, the special needs school which the late Richard Cardinal Cushing together with the Sisters of Saint Francis of Assisi co-founded in 1947. The late Archbishop of Boston had the chapel built in 1953 with pink stones quarried in Carara, Italy. It is an exact replica of the Portiuncula, meaning "little portion" in Italian, that Saint Francis built in Assisi over 700 years ago. Cardinal Cushing is entombed within the Portiuncula's altar.

In case of rain, the Mass will be held in the school auditorium.

Rides offered to worship services

Transportation for the elderly and disabled to and from worship services can be scheduled by calling 383-9215 by noontime the preceding Friday. This service is provided to Cohasset residents by the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs.

POLICE BRIEFS

Armed assault

A Hingham man, who allegedly brandished a pistol and a billy club, was arrested following a fight with another man at a private home last Tuesday night.

Responding to a 911 call about two males fighting, police were dispatched to James Lane where police encountered Thomas E. Turner, 57, of 19 Beals Cove Road, and, following a struggle, placed him under arrest. Sgt. Robert Jackson grabbed the billy club from Turner, who allegedly resisted arrest, and during the struggle, Jackson's glasses were broken and his thumb was sprained, according to the police report. After Turner was handcuffed, police allegedly found a 38-caliber pistol in his pants pocket.

Witnesses said a heated argument ensued between Turner and a Cohasset man after Turner, whom police suspect was using alcohol, entered the house at about 10 p.m., July 10. During the altercation, Turner allegedly hit the Cohasset man with the club and at some point, brandished the pistol. The two female occupants of the home and the Cohasset man wrestled with Turner while he was holding the gun, police said. Police charged Turner, who was initially held without bail, with armed assault in a dwelling, resisting arrest, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, and wanton destruction of property valued at $250 or less.

Turner, who was released on July 13 on $1,000 cash bail, will return to court Sept. 6 for a pre-trial conference. Sgt. Jackson said conditions of Turner's release include in-patient treatment for alcohol abuse at a treatment facility and abiding by conditions of a restraining order.

Bridge 'tagging'

Police arrested James Stenson, 17, of 12 Conahasset Road in Scituate, and charged with vandalism last week.

Responding to a call from pay phone at Lawrence Wharf in the harbor at about 5 p.m., July 9, police went to Border Street bridge to investigate a report of "tagging" [signature or symbol painted on a structure] by a white male. As a result of an investigation at the scene and interviews with witnesses, police arrested Stenson, who was charged with vandalism that caused $100 in damage.

Although alcohol was not involved, Stenson was put into a diversion program by the court and required to pay a $50 fee to Mothers Against Drunk Driving, said Sgt. Robert Jackson. Jackson said Stenson would be getting his license soon and therefore, the MADD program could be of some benefit. Stenson was also ordered to remove the graffiti, which he has done, Jackson said.

Youth arrested with golf cart

Investigating a garage-door alarm at the Cohasset Golf Club at about 11:04 p.m.., last Wednesday, police discovered the garage door to the golf cart storage area open. While checking the interior of the garage, a cart came straight at the officer, police said. Subsequently, police charged a Jari R. Martin, 17, of 67 Lamberts Lane, who was allegedly driving the cart, with breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony, possession of buglarious tools (flashlight) and larceny in a building. According to the police report, Martin said he gained entry by lifting the garage door and that he intended to return the golf cart after taking it for a ride.

Martin was arraigned on the charges at Quincy District Court and released on personal recognizance with the promise to return Aug. 15 for a pre-trial conference.

Teens charged after traffic stop

At about 2:15 a.m., Sunday, police made a traffic stop at Route 3A and Brewster Road after seeing a woman allegedly driving too closely to another vehicle and weaving over the white fog line at the side of the road. Further investigation revealed the driver, Ashley M. Eisner, 17, of 90 Beach St., Green Harbor, Marshfield, was a junior operator in violation of the hours-of-operation restriction and also the passenger restriction on her driver's license. Police found an open 30-pack of Budweiser beer in the trunk. Police charged Eisner with operating a motor vehicle without a license, minor transporting an alcoholic beverage, junior operator passenger restriction violation, marked lanes violation and following too closely. Driving after hours on a junior operator's license effectively means driving without a license, police explained. Also charged with minors transporting alcohol, were Manuel A. Lopes, 17, of 2103 Ocean St. in Marshfield; Darrel D. Rodrigues, 20, of 235 Hatherly Road in Scituate; and a 16-year-old juvenile.

The three minors were arraigned in Quincy District Court and put into a diversion program and each were required to pay a $50 fee to MADD. The 16-year-old was slated to appear in juvenile court yesterday.

MV accident in Town Hall lot

A 54-year-old Cohasset woman was arrested after allegedly leaving the scene of a motor vehicle accident in the Town Hall parking lot. At about 1:20 p.m. Friday, police responded to a report that a motor vehicle had hit a town truck and left the scene. Police subsequently saw the vehicle that matched the description and plate number parked at Tedeschi's on South Main Street. After further investigation, police arrested Brenda M. Kelleher, 54, of 29 Sohier St., and charged her with operating a MV with a suspended license, operating a MV after revocation of registration, operating an uninsured MV, and leaving the scene after property damage. Kelleher also had an outstanding warrant for her arrest.

Kelleher was arraigned on the charges at Quincy District Court and is slated to return Aug. 28 for a pre-trial conference.

Police charged Turner, who was initially held without bail, with armed assault in a dwelling, resisting arrest, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, and wanton destruction of property valued at $250 or less.

Turner, who was released on July 13 on $1,000 cash bail, will return to court Sept. 6 for a pre-trial conference. Sgt. Jackson said conditions of Turner's release include in-patient treatment for alcohol abuse at a treatment facility and abiding by conditions of a restraining order.

Bridge 'tagging'

Police arrested James Stenson, 17, of 12 Conahasset Road in Scituate, and charged with vandalism last week.

Responding to a call from pay phone at Lawrence Wharf in the harbor at about 5 p.m., July 9, police went to Border Street bridge to investigate a report of "tagging" [signature or symbol painted on a structure] by a white male. As a result of an investigation at the scene and interviews with witnesses, police arrested Stenson, who was charged with vandalism that caused $100 in damage.

The three minors were arraigned in Quincy District Court and put into a diversion program and each were required to pay a $50 fee to MADD. The 16-year-old was slated to appear in juvenile court yesterday.

MV accident in Town Hall lot

A 54-year-old Cohasset woman was arrested after allegedly leaving the scene of a motor vehicle accident in the Town Hall parking lot. At about 1:20 p.m. Friday, police responded to a report that a motor vehicle had hit a town truck and left the scene. Police subsequently saw the vehicle that matched the description and plate number parked at Tedeschi's on South Main Street. After further investigation, police arrested Brenda M. Kelleher, 54, of 29 Sohier St., and charged her with operating a MV with a suspended license, operating a MV after revocation of registration, operating an uninsured MV, and leaving the scene after property damage. Kelleher also had an outstanding warrant for her arrest.

Kelleher was arraigned on the charges at Quincy District Court and is slated to return Aug. 28 for a pre-trial conference.

Hutch has the writer's touch

Former Marshfield resident enjoys novel success

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Joe Hutchison's foray into novel writing is no paradox.

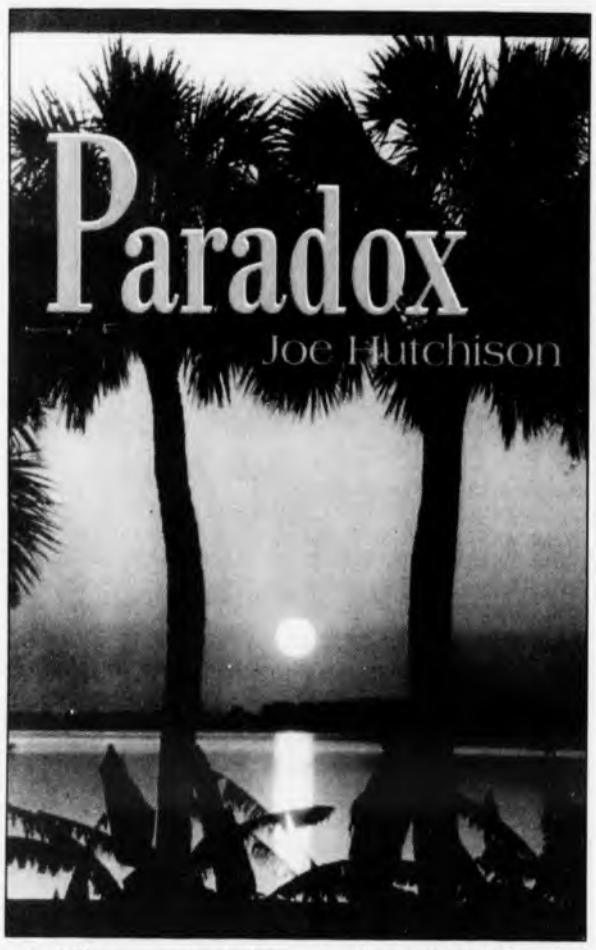
The former Marshfield resident took his time on his first book "Paradox" — a work he first penned in 1993 and just recently published.

"It's a mix of romance, mystery, murder and fantasy," Hutchinson said of the novel. "When I start to write a book, I always say 'What if?' The writing eventually takes on a life of itself."

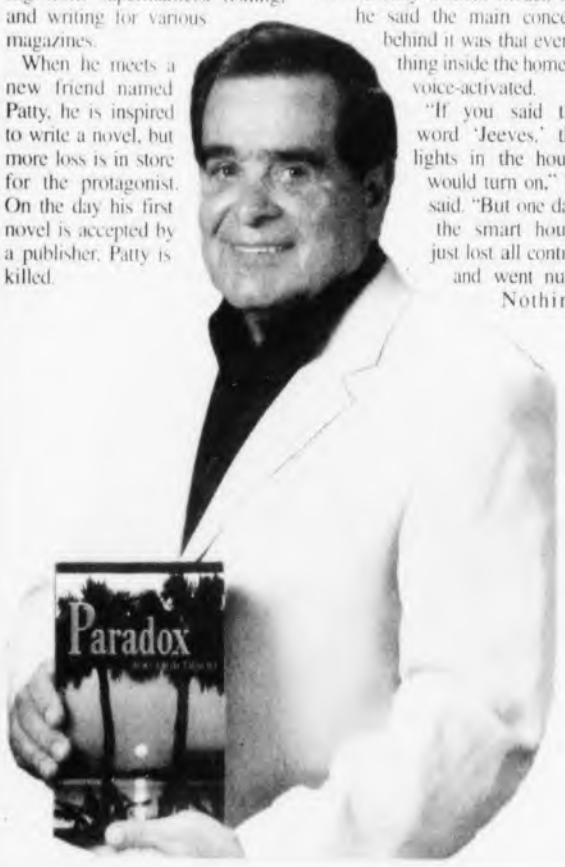
"When I start to write a book, I always say 'What if?' The writing eventually takes on a life of itself."
-Novelist Joe Hutchison

Hutchison said "Paradox" has a plot that will keep readers hooked until the end. The story begins with a man named Chuck who loses his home and his construction business and survives the loss by stealing from supermarkets, fishing, and writing for various magazines.

When he meets a new friend named Patty, he is inspired to write a novel, but more loss is in store for the protagonist. On the day his first novel is accepted by a publisher, Patty is killed.



Later in the story, Chuck wins $33 million in the state lottery, spends a fortune on promoting his book, and it becomes a best-seller.



He then decides to use his fortune to build a fortress-like home on a river. He eventually recruits the help of a NASA engineer, who talks him into building a sophisticated voice-activated security system in his home, which soon turns against him.

"The book was actually inspired by a true story," Hutchison said. "I was in the building business for 42 years, and I had a sub-contractor down here (Florida) who wanted to give me a demonstration of something called a 'smart house.'"

Hutchison said the smart house was basically a small model, but he said the main concept behind it was that everything inside the home is voice-activated.

"If you said the word 'Jeeves,' the lights in the house would turn on," he said. "But one day, the smart house just lost all control and went nuts. Nothing worked. That was my inspiration for the story."

"Paradox" was published in May and Hutchison has been getting some good responses and feedback on the book. He said in his current home-state of Florida, he has several book-signings scheduled. Paradox has been doing well in local bookstores and in the bustling online book market as well.

"There's no great message contained in the story or underlying theme I'm trying to get across," Hutchison said. "It's just an easy-reading story that is very satisfying and has a good twist at the end."

Hutchison said he hopes all of his old friends on the South Shore will pick up the book and read it, because he feels he spent some of the best years of his life in this area. Before he moved to Florida in 1979, he owned two homes in Marshfield, and he also owned a restaurant in the town called The Hutch as well as a real estate office in Hanover.

"I go back to Marshfield to visit every year," he said.

But now that he just recently retired, most of Hutchison's time is spent writing in Florida. In fact, he has three more books coming out within the next two years—"The Other Side of Sunrise," due out in December, "Dream Stealers," which is coming out in April, and "From the Edge of Styx," which is not going to be on the shelves until 2002.

Hutchison said all three new books to be released were written in the past, but he said he will continue coming up with new ideas. He said he's got about 20 years of writing experience under his belt, as he's published short stories, articles in fishing magazines, and he has also dabbled in poetry.

Now, Hutchison is enjoying the good life, calling himself a "full-time writer and fisherman."

To buy a copy of Hutchison's book, call your local bookstore, or log onto Amazon.com or BarnesandNoble.com.

A trance encounter

The Power of Suggestion includes Delores Paradise (vocals, keyboard and percussion), Judy O'Mara, (bass, drum programmer) and Jack Rootoo (guitar). The Brockton-based trio just released an independent CD titled Unalone.

Brockton band depending on word of Web to promote new CD

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

So much music available in so many styles from so many players in so many ways.

That's how the writers of VH1's "Behind the Music" put it in their recent episode summing up the year 2000 and the state of the music business, which brought the high-water mark of Napster along with numerous other less publicized, MP3-driven online outlets competing with the old-fashioned methods of buying discs and tapes at regular retail shop venues.

While all this has had rattling effect on those concerned about the risks to music-biz profits, many fans and musicians have welcomed the opening of new areas of music distribution, particularly those with leanings toward the offbeat and experimental. Still, left-field music might call for left-field measures in getting distributed and heard, which is why one Brockton-based studio project has sought yet another route.

The Power of Suggestion is a trio recording venture consisting of vocalist/keyboardist/percussionist Delores Paradise and bassist/drum programmer Judy O'Mara, who share a house equipped with a digital home studio in Brockton, plus guitarist Jack Rootoo, of Abington. The group has recently released an independent CD, titled Unalone, on its own Shoe City Sound label and chosen to distribute it for retail exclusively through two online outlets, Amazon.com and DotClick.com. The two Brockton housemates, both veterans of the Boston music scene going back to the New Wave late 1970s, find this to be the most pleasing means of delivering their music to a potential audience at this point in their off-and-on musical careers.

"Both Judy (O'Mara) and I have been in numerous bands in the past," said Paradise, "and we've worked together on different recording projects. And we've decided not to go through the conventional channels of promotion and distribution with this project. In the past we've been so frantic about promotion, sending demos to record labels and using any visual or merchandising means imaginable to get the music out there and potential word-of-mouth going. Now, with this deal we have with the internet companies, everything about the promotion and marketing is so relaxed. It's like the music is just being given a chance to breathe before we have to worry about where it's going or how fast it's getting around."

Now, with this deal we have with the Internet companies, everything about the promotion and marketing is so relaxed. It's like the music is just being given a chance to breathe before we have to worry about where it's going or how fast it's getting around."
Power of Suggestion member Delores Paradise

Paradise is happy to impart that the Internet distribution of her group's disc is proving effective.

"We got a call a few weeks ago that a well-known New York City club DJ has picked up on a copy of the CD and begun spinning at different clubs in the scene where he works. He's said that audiences have given it a very positive response, along with most of what else is hot in the city's dance club scene now, which is great news to us," Paradise said.

Both Paradise and O'Mara, who performs under the pseudonym DJ Julio on the disc, have a history in the Boston music scene rooted in the New Wave era. The two women spent much of the late 70s and early 80s playing in numerous Boston club bands, most notably a sassy female act called White Women.

Paradise's local music history is personal as well as professional. Her ex-husband is the late Tim Doherty, better known to Boston music fans as local New Wave-era legend Lou Miami, an outlandish, theatrical front man of the "glam-punk" band the Kozmetikz — known to area fans as almost the punk-rock equivalent of a John Waters film. Doherty/Miami was found dead of undetermined causes in his Los Angeles apartment in 1995.

Later that same year, Paradise and O'Mara hooked up independently for the first time in a studio project called the Trance, an aptly named group which produced one CD of hypnotic, organically mystical vocal/keyboard music with funky, dance-floor beats. With The Power of Suggestion, the two musicians follow a similar atmospheric, trance-like muse, but leaning toward the "techno" and "electronica" grooves that dominate edgier, more experimental current dance halls.

Most of the Unalone disc's twelve tracks convey what Paradise describes as a sort of visceral sense of being. The overall mood is perhaps typified by the mid-tempo mesmerizer "RE: LAX," on which the singer/keyboardist intones almost mantra-like chants of "Relax/Don't be nervous/Don't buy anything today." Other tracks offer titles as cryptic and spiritually-minded as their lyrics, from "High" and "Air Kiss" to "Burning" and "Imagination." There's even a dusted-off update of the 80s dance-club hit "The Politics of Dancing" to throw listeners a curve.

"We actually took the CD's title from the line of one song that we left off the disc, which is 'By myself, I'm unalone, and I have all that I need,' Paradise said. "We sort of hope that listeners interpret the disc that way. We'd like it to be a sort of soundtrack to people's lives."

Benefit bash is answer for Y

Mt. Blue hosts fundraiser for new teen center

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

When the South Shore YMCA turned to Mt. Blue for some financial help, the owners of the popular Norwell restaurant said "Y-Knot?"

This year's annual Mt. Blue summer benefit party planned for July 30 will support the local Y's teen center and renovation project — an $8 million job overall. The fundraising event will take place on the grounds of the Norwell Center restaurant from 6-9 p.m. When the project is complete, the new YMCA teen center will be called the "Y-Knot Club."

"It's a big social event in and out," Mt. Blue co-owner Patrick Bowe said of the annual benefit party. "It has sold out every year." He added the restaurant has been hosting the party for the past five years, helping area organizations like the North and South Rivers Watershed Association and the South Shore Natural Science Center.

Party-goers can expect the usual tasty fare at the Mt. Blue bash. Hor d'ouevres, drinks and live music are all on the menu. Local musicians Chrissi Poland, Virgil Kane and the Chris Fitz Band will all perform during the fundraiser.

It's a cause Mt. Blue owners were pleased to support.

"This year, the Hanover Y seemed to be a good idea because they are in a rush to raise money," said Bowe.

June Blair, vice-president of financial development at the Hanover Y, explained that the Y needs to raise $6 million by December in order to get a matching $650,000 through a "challenge grant." She added the whole renovation project will cost $8 million, a large amount of those funds being used to construct the teen center. She said the Y already has about $5.4 million in its coffers thanks to generous donations from the public during the past couple of years.

"It's a big social event in and out. It has sold out every year."
Mt. Blue co-owner Patrick Bowe

"There's no question we'll raise the money that we need to," Blair said. She believes the Mt. Blue benefit party will get the Y there more quickly.

"We were really hoping the people at Mt. Blue would choose us," she said. "It's great timing for us, and I think it's a good match. We're thrilled." Blair said the teen center will be a safe place for teens to spend time, and one night a week, the center will be transformed into a coffeehouse called the "Y-Knot Café" where teens will be invited to play guitar, sing, and relax.

"These days, there's not many places for teens to do that," Blair said.

Bowe said before they picked the Y as the benefit organization, they were looking at other possible organizations to sponsor. But when Bowe and his wife Jayne took a tour of the Hanover facility and were told about the possibilities of the teen center, they made up their minds very quickly. Patrick said he also was influenced by the fact that he once saw a coffeehouse being held at a business near his called Mug Shots.

"I just remember how much the kids dug that kind of thing," he said.

In addition to the Mt. Blue Party, Blair said there will be a huge event held at the Hanover Y on July 28 which is being labeled the "YMCA Outdoor Music Fest." Nine or 10 bands will be playing from 12-6 p.m. that day, all proceeds from the event's $10 cover charge going to benefit the teen center.

"These kids just need a place that they can call their own," Blair said. But she added that the renovation project will not only cover the teen center. The staff at the facility are also aiming to add two new indoor swimming pools, more locker rooms, a computer room, and even a new septic system.

"Our aim is to raise as much as possible through the party," Bowe said. "We don't have any particular dollar figure in mind."

In addition to helping local groups and organizations, Bowe points out the annual fundraisers are great parties.

"People call us all year and ask us about the annual party," Bowe said. "It's such a well-known event and I'm glad it's viewed as very enjoyable time. It's big, it's bustling, and it's all for a good cause."

For more information or to make reservations for the party, call Mt. Blue at (781) 659-0050. The cost is $50 per person, and spaces typically fill up very quickly. For more information on the YMCA Outdoor Music Fest, log onto www.ssymca.org or call (781) 829-8585.

Barbecue ribs at home

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

The problem with homemade barbecue ribs is that they are usually tough and dried out, nothing like the moist, fall-off-the-bone ribs one gets in an authentic barbecue joint. I wanted to create a recipe for ribs that can be done easily at home, had great flavor, and produced meat that was soft and luscious.

I started out restricting my testing to pork ribs, both spareribs and baby backs. Spareribs are the larger cut and come from the belly of the pig; baby back ribs (this is strictly a marketing term invented by a foreign supplier) are taken from the back as the name indicates. I found, after cooking both types, that spareribs are meatier and have more flavor. They also serve two to three people whereas baby backs serve one hungry diner only. So, spareribs was the cut of choice.

I knew from prior experience that both a low oven and a grill were going to be necessary to produce great ribs at home. The oven allows one to cook the ribs over very low heat — the best environment for producing tender, juicy meat— and the grill adds crust and flavor. I also knew that covering the ribs with aluminum foil during their oven stay was a good trick — this, in effect, steams the meat, producing very tender ribs. For my first test, I started the ribs on the grill over low heat and then finished them in the oven wrapped in foil. Next, I started the ribs in the oven (a method preferred by the authors of "Thrill of The Grill") and then finished them over the grill. I preferred the latter approach since it was difficult to maintain an even, low temperature on a grill for three hours.

Now I had excellent ribs but I thought that I could do better. In an effort to produce really soft, tender meat, I placed the ribs on the top half of a broiler pan, poured a half-inch of water in the bottom, and then covered the whole thing in foil. This steamed the meat during the oven stay, producing incredible ribs. To finish, I started a charcoal fire — I found a medium-low fire to be best to avoid drying out the ribs— and then cooked the ribs about 5 minutes per side. You can slather the ribs with a wet barbecue sauce at this point and cook them another 2 minutes per side.

The only thing missing at this point was a dry rub for flavor. My goal was to flavor the ribs with a rub that was balanced, interesting, not overpowering, and not too spicy as to prevent this dish from being family fare. In my opinion, most cookbook authors go overboard with rubs, often using a dozen or more ingredients including three kinds of pepper and two types of sugar. My final rub included salt, cumin, black pepper, chili powder, paprika, sugar, and cayenne. Simplicity is often best.

Finally, I had achieved a crispy, flavorful outside crust and tender, moist meat inside with a minimum amount of effort. The final touch was a wet sauce on the side (or to finish the ribs on the grill). There are many commercial sauces which are excellent (Gates makes a great sauce) but if you want to make your own, I have included a recipe for homemade below.

FALL-OFF-THE-BONE BARBECUE RIBS

Two racks of ribs may not fit in one pan. You can use two pans or bake one rack at a time. They may be baked up to two days ahead and wrapped well in aluminum foil and refrigerated until they are ready to go on the grill. The term "3 down" refers to racks which are 3 pounds or less. It is important to be sure that your oven is well-calibrated for this recipe since you do not want to cook the ribs at a temperature below 200 degrees.

2 racks pork spareribs, 3 down, trimmed if they appear to have an extreme amount of fat
1 recipe rib rub (recipe to follow)

For the rub:
2 tablespoons kosher salt
2 tablespoons ground cumin
2 tablespoons freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons chili powder
3 tablespoons sweet paprika
4 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon cayenne, or to taste

1. Heat oven to 200 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. (If using two pans adjust the racks to the upper and lower third positions.) Combine all rub ingredients in a small bowl and mix well.

2. Apply a liberal amount of rub to all surfaces of the ribs and place on broiler rack or roasting rack. If baking the ribs sequentially you may coat the second rack just before it goes into the oven. Fill the bottom of a broiler or roasting pan with about 1/2-inch of water. Position a rack on the pan and cover tightly with aluminum foil without pressing on top of the ribs. Place in the oven and cook for two and a half to three hours or until the meat is tender when poked with a fork. The ribs may be finished immediately or refrigerated for up to two days at this point.

3. Ignite grill. When the fire is medium-low (you can hold your hand 5 inches above the flame for about 7 seconds) place the ribs on the grill grates. Cook for about 5 minutes or until they have browned well and formed a crust. Flip the racks and grill for an additional 5 minutes on second side or until well browned, crusted and heated through. For wetter ribs you may brush each side with barbecue sauce and grill for another 2 minutes per side. Serve immediately with barbecue sauce (recipe below) passed separately.

Serves 6

HOMEMADE BARBECUE SAUCE

This sauce can be brushed on the ribs for the final minutes of grilling or it can be served on the side.

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 onion cut into 1/2-inch dice
3 medium or 2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped or pressed
1 28 ounce can diced or ground tomatoes and their liquid (not packed in puree)
1/4 cup white vinegar
1 tablespoon brown sugar, light or dark
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 1/2 teaspoons paprika
1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder
1 tablespoon molasses
1/4 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard

In a medium saucepan, heat the oil over medium heat. Add the onion and cook until softened but not colored, about 7 minutes. Add the garlic and cook for an additional 2 minutes. Add all other ingredients and bring to a simmer. Lower heat and maintain a slow simmer for 45 minutes. Purée in batches if necessary.

Daylily Delights

Green thumbs up

By: Suzanne Mahler
CORESPONDENT

Butterflies float from flower to flower, hummingbirds dart about the borders, hovering for a few moments here and there to sip nectar from fiery red blooms of bee balm and cardinal flowers, and frogs bask in the afternoon sunshine alongside my tranquil water garden. Mid-July in the perennial garden is one of the loveliest times during the growing season as a new wave of glorious color ignites the borders with rainbow radiance. Golden coreopsis, purple and white cone flowers, the blue spires of veronica, puffy purple and white balloon flowers (Platycodon), brilliant white shasta daisies, and the airy, lavender spikes of Russian sage are just a few of the star performers in the July sunny garden. Mother Nature has supplied just the perfect blend of warmth and moisture over these past few weeks to create a spectacular floral display complemented by lush green lawns.

Adding to the splendid display are the bountiful blooms of annuals which become well-established by the latter half of July. In our gardens and on our town traffic islands, colorful collections of kaleidoscopic brilliance offer a long season of continuous flowers. The hard work that clubs, businesses and private individuals expend to beautify our communities is truly commendable. It is such a disappointment to witness the devastation caused by careless motorists who run over these attractive plantings which are the culmination of weeks of watering, weeding and nurturing and even more unthinkable that some thoughtless scoundrels would have the audacity to dig up and confiscate some of these plants for their own pleasure, but this seems to be a fairly common occurrence each season.

Few perennials rival the daylilies for their ease of culture and their diversity of bloom size, color and form. Nearly all colors are represented in the modern daylily with the exception of true blue and pure white. Sunny yellows, luscious peaches and melons, fiery oranges and reds, pretty pinks and pastels and deep velvety purples are just some of the colors currently available. Unusual patterns and blotches in contrasting colors have also been developed resulting in a fascinating assortment and range of possibilities among the thousands of colorful cultivars on the market which offer blossoms from June to frost if re-bloomers like 'Stella de Oro' and 'Happy Returns', are interspersed with early, midseason and late-blooming varieties.

Daylilies originated in China where they were grown in doorside gardens as a source of food, medicine and for an uplifting of the spirits. Their botanical name, Hemerocallis, means beauty for a day, and in fact, each individual blossom lasts for only one day but given multiple stems, known as scapes, and dozens of flowers on each scape, their bloom period usually lasts for many weeks. Sometimes known as the poor man's orchid, these fibrous-rooted perennials are members of the lily family but should not be confused with the "true" lilies which grow from scaly bulbs.

Flower sizes in daylilies range from the tiny flowers of two inch miniatures to the massive blooms of large-flowered cultivars up to eight or nine inches across. Foliage and scape height is equally variable with dwarf varieties only 10 to 12 inches tall, suitable for the rock garden or front of the border, to statuesque plants 3 three to four feet high, ideal for the back of the perennial beds.

Meadows and roadsides ablaze with 'Tiger Lily', as the species Hemerocallis fulva or the tawny daylily is often nicknamed, are a cheerful sight during the early weeks of July, but beware, as tiger lily spreads rapidly on long, stoloniferous roots and consequently, it may not be the ideal selection for a mixed perennials border as its vigorous nature often crowds out other valued plants. If grown among newer daylily cultivars, which tend to have a considerably more restrained growth habit, it may invade and overtake its cousins. It should be noted that daylilies cannot change color, but vigorous, chance seedlings or the infiltration of tiger lily may give the appearance that your prize pink daylily has taken on a new tint. Slight variations in color may result due to temperature and moisture extremes, but their ultimate color is constant. Tiger Lily may be best left to flourish on its own in naturalistic settings, at some distance away from other daylilies and perennial borders.

Although daylilies are drought tolerant and will bloom with as little as four to six hours of filtered sunlight, they thrive when provided with copious quantities of moisture and full sun. Moisture-retentive, well-drained soils, which are rich in compost or manure, are ideal. The application of a summer mulch is beneficial. Daylilies can be planted anytime the ground can be worked and can even be transplanted in full bloom although May and early September are perhaps the best time to divide and transplant these versatile perennials. Feed yearly with a granular fertilizer with a formulation of 5-10-5 or 8-8-8.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, JULY 19

The planet Mars takes the spotlight today. At 6:45 p.m. Mars, standing at 15-degrees Sagittarius, will begin to travel in direct motion. Mars has been traveling in retrograde motion for the past ten weeks. A new moon will culminate tomorrow, signaling a turning point in planetary energies this summer. Today the dark side of the new moon prompts you to get organized and prepare new starts.

FRIDAY, JULY 20

Wake up in a good mood. Others may be moody, temperamental. Don't overpersonalize. Give extra time and attention to loved ones. This month's new moon comes together at 3:44 p.m., 28-degrees of the sign Cancer. At this time the moon becomes inactive until 6:43 p.m., when it enters playful Leo. Put on your party hat and go for the good times this evening.

SATURDAY, JULY 21

A Leo moon sets the stage for a fun weekend. A lunar polarity to Neptune can make for a lazy morning. Take your time; enjoy a leisurely breakfast. The green light is on for launching important ventures, particularly between 8:00 a.m.-12:36 p.m., when the moon forms a harmonious contact to Saturn. However, the remainder of the day rates high across the board, whether you plan to work or play.

SUNDAY, JULY 22

The Leo moon becomes inactive at 8:34 a.m., making this day prime for fun and games. Gather with friends, kick back and enjoy life to the fullest. The sun enters Leo at 2:26 p.m., remaining there until August 22. At 6:29 p.m. the moon enters Virgo. A harmonious lunar alignment to Jupiter at 10:00 p.m. continues to generate a party mood.

MONDAY, JULY 23

Astrological storm clouds move in, making this a challenging day. Keep it light. Remember that compliments will work better than criticism. The Virgo moon forms 90-degree alignments to Saturn, Pluto and Mars. Zero in on health and physical fitness concerns. Eat light foods and avoid stimulants. Get back on track with exercise regimens. You can also channel this energy constructively by staying busy with practical projects. It is best to finish old business rather than starting anything new.

TUESDAY, JULY 24

This is a great day to get things done. Make up a list of things to do; handle projects you have been putting off and get them out of the way. Clean out desk drawers, closets. Get your life in order. A positive attitude is your ace in the hole. At 3:48 a.m. the Virgo moon aligns with Venus and becomes inactive until 7:08 p.m. Planetary influences turn around completely at 7:08 p.m., when the moon enters Libra. Social activities and romantic rendezvous get the green light this evening.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 25

This is one of the best days of the month. If you have been putting off launching important new activities, now is the time to act. The Libra moon forms flowing alignments to Neptune, Saturn, Pluto and Mars. Venus, the planetary ruler of Libra, prepares to align with Uranus. This day also rates high for meeting people, beginning new alliances, relationships. Follow your hunches; be more spontaneous. Don't be a hermit tonight. Planetary action tops the charts for partying or enjoying a romantic evening with the love in your life.

THURSDAY, JULY 26

Get an early start to this day. Influences remain above-average for launching important new enterprises, making major purchases and decisions until 11:10 a.m., when the Libra moon becomes inactive. A Venus/ Uranus alignment culminates at 6:18 p.m. Social activities, communications are also highlighted today. Chat, network, collaborate. At 10:17 p.m. influences turn around completely, when the moon enters mysterious Scorpio.

FRIDAY, JULY 27

A Scorpio moon today and tomorrow prompts you to roll up your sleeves and plan to get a lot accomplished. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 6:08 a.m., signaling the buildup to the full moon culminating next week, August 4. There is one stumbling block at 11:30 a.m., when the moon aligns with Neptune. Stay alert and use common sense. People may be pensive, moody, hypersensitive. Choose your words carefully.

SPIRIT OF COMMUNITY AWARDS

Spirit of Community Award recipients and their parents attended a reception in June at Community Newspaper Company in Marshfield honoring the students.

Community Newspaper Company would like to congratulate the recipients of the Spirit of Community Award.

Caitlin Foley

Beth Gosselin

Ali Selby

Suzanne Timmons

Amanda Cadin

Dane Grigas

Anna Roche and Mark Skala

Hannah Harvester

The Spirit of Community Award honors a high school student's achievement in community service. It acknowledges those students who have actively participated in school, civic and church related service projects. Congratulations to Caitlin Foley, Beth Gosselin, Ali Selby, Suzanne Timmons, Amanda Cadin, Dane Grigas, Anna Roche and Hannah Harvester!

Future nominations...

Each month, we recognize a South Shore high school student who has answered the call of community service. Those students selected are featured in the newspaper. At the end of the school year, we will invite each of the winners featured throughout the past year, as well as two guests, and our advertising sponsors to a reception honoring the students' achievements.

If you know a high school student who you believe should be a Spirit of Community Award recipient, submit your nomination by completing the ballot on this page, which is also printed in our Living section every week. From all of the nominations we receive, a winner will be selected by a panel of CNC Editors.

Sponsors...

If you are a company, business or organization who would like to join Community Newspaper Company in sponsoring the Spirit of Community Awards, contact Mark Skala, Editor In Chief, CNC/South, at 781-837-4574.

Village upgrade gets yellow light

Money, train are concerns

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Cohasset selectmen placed caution flags all around the Village Revitalization Task Force's improvement plan Tuesday night, citing the proposed cost of the changes and lack of an implementation plan.

Task force chairman Tim O'Brien spent more than an hour presenting the comprehensive plan and answering questions. Some of the changes range from small, such as a new formal sidewalk along Elm Street, to major such as the redesign and configuration of the Depot Court/Ripley Road/Pleasant Street intersection.

But although board members generally like the plans, they refused to commit to the project until they have more concrete cost estimates and detailed project phasing plans.

"Any approval would be way premature in my mind," selectman Michael Sullivan said.

"I generally like the concept, but it's too early to spend any money on it," said selectman Thomas Callahan.

The task force broke the plan into six sections: the Depot Court area, Ripley Road by the Post Office, the town parking lot, the proposed St. Stephen's sidewalk, the main village area, and Elm Street.

Even though the plans are seemingly simple, myriad variables surround them, such as funding and scheduling. But the biggest variable is the proposed restoration of the Greenbush commuter rail. The town's mitigation deal with the MBTA calls for the state to pay to renovate the town parking lot, support a $1.5 million Public Works Economic Development grant for the village area, and reimburse the town $1.2 million for the last phase of the James Brook Flood Control project.

Selectmen said the project would have to be coordinated so the town could avoid having the town parking lot torn apart multiple times. The board also wants the task force to decide the order of the different phases.

"I don't think the price is the biggest concern, but instead it's how and when do we implement it," said selectman Ronnie McMorris.

"I don't think the price is the biggest concern, but instead it's how and when do we implement it."
— Selectman Ronnie McMorris

But the cost was an issue to other members of the board. Dean Rizzo, executive director of the Cohasset Revitalization, which has spearheaded the planning aspect of the project, estimated the complete plan, from sidewalks to curbings, to run upwards of $2.25 million.

He said the majority of the project could be paid for through the $1.5 million PWED grant, the state reconstruction of the town parking lot, a $170,000 state grant awaiting the town for the St. Stephen's sidewalk, and other state and private funding sources.

Selectmen wondered how the plans would be affected if the MBTA decides to not build the train after all, and the town gets none of Neighborhood planning meetings to start

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

Residents frustrated with local zoning issues or who want to have an impact on the town's future, get their chance starting tonight at the Beechwood Congregational Church at 7:30 p.m.

The neighborhood forum is the first of four such public meetings the town Growth and Development Committee has planned to get resident input on topics such as economic development, land use, traffic and transportation, and town facilities in Cohasset.

The committee is gathering information that will eventually help form the town's new master plan, a blueprint for the future of Cohasset. The last town master plan was adopted in 1961.

Members of the committee met Monday night in the Beechwood Street Church hall, along with representatives of the Planning Board. Town Planner Liz Harrington, and discussion facilitator Bet Baker to fine-tune the meeting's structure.

The group described Thursday's meeting as a public "brainstorming session," and an opportunity for residents to say what they like, dislike and would want to see changed in their neighborhood and in the town.

Sohier who?

A look at the names behind the streets

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

They are the streets we drive on every day. Sometimes we admire their beauty, their sweeping vistas, their tree-lined ways. Other times we curse their bumps, their humps and their crowded conditions. And occasionally we just simply ask, "Who was Sohier and why is there a street named after him?"

The reason behind the names, North and South Main Street, is simple enough — but what about town roads, such as Gammons and Nichols? Did Jerusalem Road have religious roots?

Why is a section of Route 3A known simultaneously as a state highway, King Street, and Chief Justice Cushing Highway? And who was Cushing anyway?

The Mariner unearthed some of these answers thanks to Cohasset Historical Society archivist David Wadsworth.

Sohier Street

When Cohasset was originally divided as part of Hingham's common land in 1670, the land surveyor set aside a few long straight strips, some running east to west, others north to south, for roads. Sohier Street is one of those roads, as is Pond Street and King Street from North Main Street to Lily Pond.

"The surveyor didn't care whether he was going over water, swamp, or mountain, the strips were as straight as an arrow," Wadsworth said.

Sohier Street is actually the exact length and width as when it was first created 331 years ago. Among its earlier names were Deer Hill Lane, King Street Lane, and Winter Street. However, in the mid-1800's, a prominent Bostonian family summered in Cohasset, named the Sohiers. William Davies Sohier owned a large yellow house on the corner of North Main Street and what is now Sohier Street. Apparently, he ran in the right circles to have the entire street named after him.

But his original family name wasn't Sohier, and Cohasset residents should be glad he changed it. When his predecessors called the British Channel Islands home the family name was "Sohier de Vermandoix."

Tax-cap law makes the history books

Prop. 2-1/2 comes of age

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

On Dec. 16, 1773, Massachusetts citizens staged an uprising against unfair import taxes levied by Parliament, by throwing tea that had arrived on British ships into Boston Harbor. The tea duty represented unfair taxation, something the colonists railed against. The historic event — chronicled in the nation's history books — provided the kindling that ignited the fires of the American Revolution.

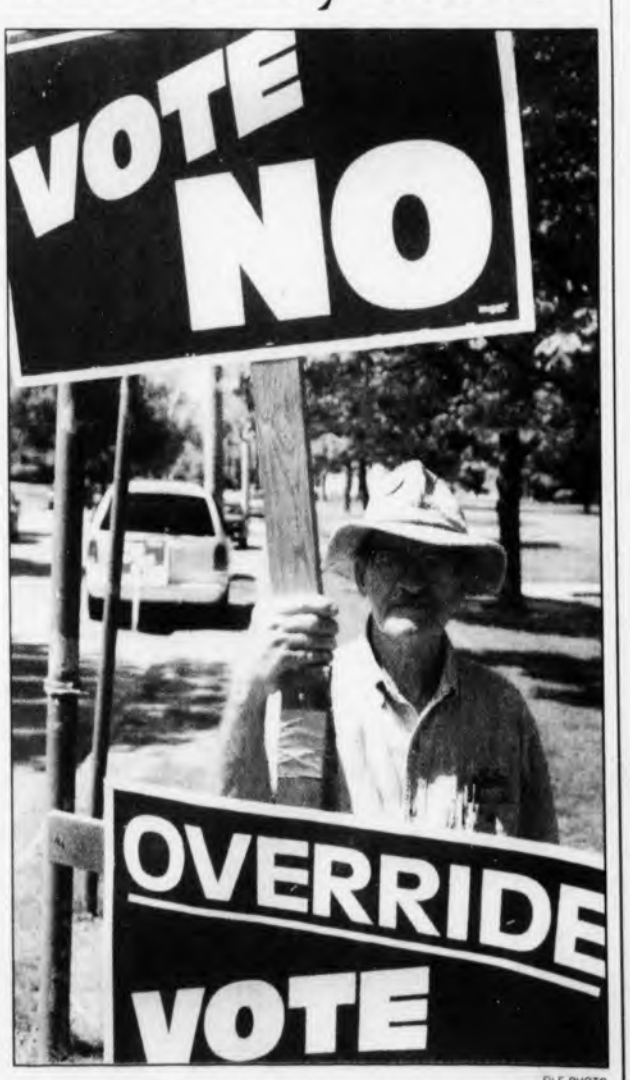
"Prop. 2-1/2 was a revolution waiting to happen," the Harts wrote, about the late '70s. "Hingham's Richard Manley, president of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, warned taxes in the state had become the laughingstock of the nation.

"'Some noble soul once said that being a taxpayer in Massachusetts is like making love to a gorilla,' Manley said. 'You don't stop when you're tired, you stop when the gorilla is. And whoever heard of a gorilla being tired?'"

The outrage behind the 1980 referendum resonated with overburdened taxpayers. By a margin of 59-to-41 percent, they said a resounding "yes" to capping their property taxes, and profoundly changed the way the state's hundreds of municipalities would conduct their finances for a generation.

"The state was in horrible shape because we were so excessively overtaxed."
— Jack Conway, Realtor

A little more than 200 years later, history repeated itself. But this time those behind the Massachusetts tax rebellion didn't have to disguise themselves as Native Americans and conduct a raid under cover of darkness. Angry taxpayers took their case to the shopping malls, dumps and Main Streets across the Commonwealth to obtain thousands of signatures for an initiative petition. Their effort placed a question on the November 1980 statewide ballot asking voters if they wanted to take control of their soaring property taxes.



In "Not All Is Changed, a Life History of Hingham," authors Lorena and Francis Hart, describe the tenor of the times.

"Before Prop. 2-1/2, government thought it was entitled just to take instead of ask," says Barbara Anderson, director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, the grassroots group that led the tax-control effort.

The so-called Proposition 2-1/2 tax cap, which became law and took effect on July 1, 1981, has become part of the lexicon of homeowners across the state, although some may not have a clear picture of how the complex law works.

To put it as simply as possible, the

- Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees, Aug. 8, 7:30 p.m., Paul Pratt Memorial Library
- Harbor Committee, Aug. 14, 7:30 p.m.

The school building committee meets every Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the selectmen's office.

Lambert's Lane

Four Lambert's Lane residents appeared before selectmen Tuesday to request temporary speed bumps be placed on the narrow, but busy street during the summer.

The private road way provides access to the Cohasset Gulf Club, and residents say most drivers ignore the posted 15 mile-per-hour speed limit on the road and go as fast as 35 miles per hour.

The temporary speed bumps, which would be removed for the winter, were opposed by both Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Police Chief Brian Noonan, as well as Town Counsel Paul DeRensis.

Selectmen turned down the residents' request.

"We can't put speed bumps on every narrow, winding road in town," said selectman Thomas Callahan. "It would set a precedent. Then everyone is going to want speed bumps on their street."

Selectmen asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to look into posting additional traffic and warning signs on the road, as well as increased police patrols, and possible cameras to catch repeat offenders.

Gas main on Norfolk Road

Keyspan Energy received permission from selectmen to install 100 feet of two-inch gas main on Norfolk Road that will service two new houses.

However, before granting permission, selectman Merle Brown chastised Keyspan representative Francis O'Leary for what he perceived as shoddy clean-up of their projects. He said areas the company dig up are left bumpy and uneven for months after work is completed. O'Leary gave the town the name of a person to contact with any complaints.

Haddad vacation

Selectmen approved the week of Aug. 13 as a vacation week for Town Manager Mark Haddad. Police Chief Brian Noonan will be Acting Town Manager during that time.

Maritime Institute

The Cohasset Maritime Institute literally packed the room with supporters at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting, where the renewal of the group's lease was up for debate.

Nearly 40 men, women and children filled the stuffy room to back the Maritime Institute and director Jack Buckley. The institute's lease of the town-owned boathouse off the Hagerty Property had actually expired in February but gone unnoticed due to an administrative oversight.

The board quickly renewed the three-year lease for the group, which sponsors community rowing and maritime education programs.

But they did question Buckley on the progress of renovations to the boathouse. Buckley said the second half of the roof should be finished soon, as should the boathouse's front doors.

Responding to concerns raised by Hagerty Property Committee Chairman Russ Bonetti, selectmen asked Buckley to talk with the committee about a plan for boat storage on the property.

A group of young rowers called the Youth Ladies Crew thanked the board for its support and also challenged them to a rowing race off Sandy Beach at the institute's rowing outing on Sept.1.

"You have five weeks to get ready," they said.

"That is the easiest race you'll ever win," Town manager Mark Haddad joked.

No comment yet from the board on whether it will accept the challenge.

Lightkeepers' Residence is the most popular place in town

But some abuse the 'honor' system

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

At the base of Beacon Rock, the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island has one of the nicest views in Cohasset.

It may not overlook the open Atlantic Ocean, or the jagged nooks and crannies of Little Harbor, but it does offer a nearly complete view of Cohasset Harbor. Hidden behind a set of draping trees, the two-story house watches the water level rise and fall and the harbor's 400-plus boats move slowly in and out.

Just seven years removed from its near-complete overhaul, the house has become one of Cohasset's go-to places. More than 200 events — ranging from weddings and receptions, to lectures and readings — are planned there a year and reservations must be made with plenty of advance notice.

"It has always been popular right from the beginning, but now it seems to be getting even more popular," said R. Murray Campbell, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, which leases the property from the town for $1 a year. "It's almost solidly booked through the middle six months."

The result has been heavy use of the hall by Cohasset residents, and also some abuse of the system.

"The last couple of years, more Cohasset people have taken advantage of it being there. I think they're realizing what a good bargain it is, and if they want it, they have to book ahead," he said.

But enough residents have been "fronting" for non-residents to get the cheaper price that the corporation has felt the need to address the situation.

"Sadly, a few Cohasset residents have been willing to front for a non-resident, thus escaping the non-resident fee," Campbell wrote in last week's Mariner. "In effect, the Lightkeepers Corporation, and the residents and non-profits we subsidize, are cheated out of the difference of fees, which difference may be $600."

Campbell said if the Cohasset resident wanted to initiate the booking for a relative and assumes responsibility for the event, that's one thing. But he called it "improper" to front for an out-of-town person just to "simply to get the better rate."

The reduced revenue hurts a non-profit organization such as the Lightkeepers, Campbell said. Like every other business and residence, the group has to deal with rising expenses, and the more resident discounted events the hall holds, the less revenue comes in.

If it was just Cohasset residents using the hall, that would be one thing, he said. But by fronting for non- residents, Campbell considered it "cheating" the group. "All we do is operate the hall for the benefit of Cohasset residents and non-profit organizations," he said. "The only reason we let non-residents use it is to gain some revenue in support of those activities."

In 1991, the historic building that the keepers of Minot's Light called home for nearly a century was falling apart. Joe McElroy, the first president of the Lightkeepers Corporation said in the late 1980s, the house had become a money pit and came before the town Capital Budget Committee on three separate occasions looking for money for renovations.

"And it was still falling down around our ears," he said.

A group of 17 Cohasset residents, led by McElroy and Herb Towle, helped organize a fund-raising campaign. The house underwent a complete renovation, including a new floor plan, heating and air-conditioning systems and kitchen, and reopened in 1994. Aside from a group of volunteers that helped gut the building, McElroy said they also received significant work contributions from the South Shore Vocational School, which made the house one of its semester projects, and from Ira Stoughton who helped arrange for volunteer labor from the Braintree Rehabilitation Center to do "tens of thousands of dollars of work."

The $400,000 renovation included two rental apartments upstairs, and a 1,200 square foot hall, community kitchen and wall of windows overlooking the sheltered harbor.

Bancroft Hall, named after Jane Bancroft Cook, one of the project's benefactors, offers its guests oak floors with an inlaid compass rose, and chandeliers to go along with the sweeping view of the water. Murray said it can sit 85 people at tables and 140 if seated in rows. Government Island and the house were awarded a spot on the National Register of Historic Places in 1994.

"We are all just so proud of how it turned out," said McElroy, who saw a daughter get married in the hall.

Because the restoration was a community project, the Lightkeepers Corporation has made an effort to make the hall available to the Cohasset community. Non-profit groups, such as the Rotary Club, are able to hold their functions in the hall at no charge, and town residents are given a significant discount from the market rate rental price.

From April to September, it costs non-residents $500 for events held Monday through Thursday, and $800 Friday through Sunday. From October to March, non-residents are charged $300 and $500, respectively. But Cohasset residents pay just $200 for the weekends, and $100 for the rest of the week, year-round.

The corporation, overseen by a 22-member board of directors, remains viable as of now, and is still able to give back to the community events such as the annual Memorial day cook-out. But rising heat, electricity, and janitorial services could force a small rate increase in the future.

But meanwhile the house remains another benefactor to the harbor front community. Another function will be held this weekend, where guests will gaze out the windows, and admire the manicured gardens kept by local gardening groups.

"That building is a great asset to the town," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "The Lightkeepers do a great job with it, and they have always been very cooperative."

Selectmen end town manager inquiry

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

The subcommittee of the Board of Selectmen asked to look into additional complaints against Town Manager Mark Haddad said it would not recommend pursuing the charges any further.

After hiring an independent investigator to examine cross-complaints of harassment and verbal abuse between Haddad and Planning Board member Peter Pratt earlier this month, selectmen chairman Fred Koed and vice-chairman Michael Sullivan examined eight subsequent complaints filed by various town residents.

Koed said in a prepared statement that he and Sullivan had talked with each individual involved "for at least half an hour," then talked with Haddad, and did not consider the complaints worthy of further investigation.

"We did not find any cause where the incident was anything beyond a disagreement between individuals," he said.

Koed also said the complaints, except for one, were more than a year old, and in some cases, as old as four years.

"If there is a complaint, we need people to come forward in a timely fashion," he said. "Selectmen have an open period at every meetings."

He said that although Haddad is a public servant, residents shouldn't expect Haddad to "agree with every member of the public." Koed also said that the public does the right to be treated civilly, and the same is true for town employees.

"We need to have mutual respect for each other," he said.

Koed said his personal experiences with Haddad have been "professional" even on issues when the two have not seen eye to eye.

Koed said he will call each of the complainants and explain the board's decision.

"We did not find any cause where the incident was anything beyond a disagreement between individuals."

— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

"It's time as a town to come to closure on this chapter of our history," he said.

Sullivan added, "I'll be glad to put this behind us."

Acting on the recommendation of the independent investigator, selectmen voted unanimously on July 10 to not take any disciplinary action against Haddad for his part in his dispute with Pratt.

Haddad said about the board's decision, "I thank the board for its support, and appreciate them looking into these complaints. I think the support of the board speaks for itself."

SWIM COURSES

The Cohasset Swim Center of Cohasset is offering some great courses in the month of August. Water Safety Instructor Training is being held Aug. 6-10, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. To be eligible to take the WSI course, candidates must be at least 17 years of age by the end of the course and successfully pass the pre-course written test and skills test. The Water Safety Instructor course is not designed to teach you the required strokes. This course is dedicated to developing the skills needed to instruct and plan courses in the American Red Cross Swimming and Water Safety program. Fee covers all course materials and is $275 for members and $325 for non-members.

Lifeguard Training is being held Aug. 13-17 from 9 am.-5 p.m. Candidates must be 15 years old by the end of the course and successfully pass a pre-skills test. The purpose of the American Red Cross Lifeguard Training course is to teach lifeguard candidates the skills and knowledge necessary to prevent and respond to aquatic emergencies. The course prepares candidates to recognize and respond quickly and effectively to emergencies and prevent drowning and injuries. The course includes first aid and CPR training as well as preventing disease transmission, oxygen administration and automated external defibrillation. Members cost are $225 and non-members are $325.Please call the Cohasset Swim Center at 781-383-9463 and ask for Darleen Koetsch-MacNamara for more information and registration. She is available Mondays-Fridays from 2-7 p.m. Space is limited so act now if interested.

The deadline for registration is Aug. 1. CSC is a private, non-profit organization.

SWIM AWARDS NIGHT

Here's some more Swim Center news. The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team Awards Night is being held on Friday, August 3. This wonderful evening is being held at the Osgood gym from 6:30-10 p.m. and is for the whole family to enjoy. From 6:30-8 p.m. is the Awards Ceremony in the Osgood Gym. Immediately following that will be Refreshments served in the cafeteria and then, let the party begin. From 8-10 p.m. is Family Fun with a DJ and entertainment in the gym for all. Parents, this is an evening to spend with your children and is bound to be a wonderful evening. Children 10 & under are required to have a parent for the entire evening. Swim team members and their families with last names beginning with A-M should bring a baked good for 1-2 dozen people. Members and families with last names starting with N-Z, should bring a finger fruit for 10 people. The Dive Team and families are responsible for bringing chips and salsa. This sounds like a great event and Swim Team and Dive Team families should plan on attending.

DEAN'S LIST

We have two students from Providence College who were named to the Dean's List for the spring 2001 semester.

Patrick Leahy, who is majoring in management, and Andrea Freeman, who graduated with a major in management both received this honor. Congratulations to both of you.

Another student, Emily Henderson was named to the dean's list at Wheaton College. Emily received her degree this past spring with this great honor. Great job, Emily!

BC HIGH HONORS

John R. Crowley-Buck and Evan M. McCaffrey of Cohasset were 2001 graduates of Boston College High School were honored at Senior Class Night. John Crowley-Buck received "The William Francis Whalen Social Studies Award," for his great knowledge of history. John also won awards of Excellence in Economics, Spanish IV and Twentieth Century World History, naming him best student in these three classes. Evan won the Excellence award in his Film and Media class, naming him the best in his class. You both deserve congratulations and a huge pat on the back for your hard work.

In other BC High news, Christopher J. Carr (Class of '02) and David F. Crowley-Buck (03) were named to the fourth-quarter honor roll. Way to go, guys!

BEHIND THE SCENES

Stephanie Eno, who grew up in Cohasset, has been appointed to the position manager of programming for Fine Living, the new cable network developed by Scripps Networks, which is scheduled for launch in early 2002.

In her new position, Stephanie will be responsible for supervising production and development of original series as well as programming specials and will be based in Los Angeles.

Stephanie joins Fine Living after extensive production experience on various television specials including "The Academy of Country Music Awards," "The Golden Globe Awards," "Dick Clark's Rockin' New Years Eve" and "Miss USA," along with the news parody "Daily Show with Jon Stewart." She also has a history with Nickelodeon where she most recently served as an on-air promotions producer for TV Land. Her past experience also includes production work with Nickelodeon's "Kids' Choice Awards", "Big Help" and "Snick House," as well as off-air creative production for both Nick at Nite and TV Land. Maritime Museum open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum located at Elm St., Cohasset Center, is open for its summer season. Open times are Tuesday through Sunday, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission, and donations are accepted. The museum itself is an old Ship Chandlery, or marine supply building, built in the 1700's by Samuel Bates and originally located at Cohasset Harbor. It is the sole remaining 18th century maritime-related building in near-original condition found in Cohasset today.

The Maritime Museum is devoted to preserving and presenting Cohasset's history as a seafaring community during the latter 1700's and the 1800's. During the "Age of Sail" the town's principal maritime occupations were fishing and shipbuilding and its maritime activity centered around its harbor, then known as "Ship Cove." Peak years for Cohasset's fishing industry were the mid-1800's, when family owned schooner fleets fished for mackerel in Canada's Gulf of St. Lawrence. Cohasset youths often went to sea on the mackerel schooners by the time they were 10 or 11 years of age. Some went on to become crew members of large ocean-going merchant vessels sailing from Boston, and a few became "Deep Sea Captains" commanding clipper ships sailing to all parts of the world. The Maritime Museum preserves and presents that part of Cohasset's own history with ship models, carvings, dioramas, documents and pictures relating to the town's "Age of Sail". Shipwrecks, navigation and lifesaving were an important part of that story and are represented in the museum's exhibits; as is the story of the two Minot's Ledge Lighthouses off our shores.

Additionally the museum holds numerous unique exhibits on general historical subjects relating to Cohasset's early years. Currently the Museum's building is in process of being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. The Historical Society's telephone is 781-383-1434

Harrington helps lead planning process

By Rick Collins
RICOLLINS@CNC.COM

She has been on the job just ten months and already Liz Harrington has become one of the more important behind-the-scenes people in Cohasset Town Hall.

As the town planner for a growing community embarking on a master plan, Harrington's role is crucial in helping to decide the town's future. Along with working closely with the Planning Board and helping to review subdivision site plans and answer questions on zoning bylaw changes, she also serves as an important resource for the Growth and Development Committee, which is spearheading the master plan process. And then there's the Senior Housing Committee, Village Revitalization Task Force, and the work she's doing to create a town-wide Geographic Information System (GIS) which, when completed, will contain data about every piece of property in town, such as topography, fire hydrants, water mains, septic systems and conservation areas.

"This will be a tremendous tool for reviewing site plans and planning purposes overall," she said.

The wide selection of topics she deals with on a daily basis requires Harrington to be a flexible jack-of-all-trades.

"You need a base level of knowledge, and to be conversant enough on a number of different issues to be effective," she said. "But as a rule, a town planner is more of a generalist, than a specialist. You need to have the kind of personality to switch hats quickly and be very flexible.

"You need to have the kind of personality to switch hats quickly and be very flexible."

— Liz Harrington, town planner

"If I was a person who needed a set routine, and to know what I was going to be doing every minute, this job might be difficult."

Harrington is originally from the Squantum neighborhood of Quincy. She developed a love of politics from her father who served as a Quincy City Councilor, and double majored in economics and political science at McGill University in Montreal. She began her first foray into planning and development while as a graduate intern student from the University of New Brunswick. She received a master's degree in business administration, but the work she did with a regional planning agency in the Canadian province allowed her to "develop a taste" for public planning.

She joined the City of Quincy Planning Board in 1995, and was instrumental in securing a number of state and federal grants for the city.

"The position was a lot of grant administration, budgeting and writing," she said. The experience allowed her to feel comfortable enough to apply for a position as the joint town planner for Cohasset and Hull last summer. Apparently the town thought she did a good enough job to approve expanding her position to full-time as part of the new fiscal year town budget.

"There had been some very significant issues such as senior housing and developing a master plan that had been appearing on selectmen's yearly goals and objectives, and for the last few years, we really hadn't had anyone to help us complete those goals," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, who openly lobbied to include the money for Harrington's position in the town budget. "And now you are starting to see these issues come to the forefront...She has been an invaluable asset to this town."

Tonight is the first neighborhood public forum for the master plan process [see related story], and last month, the Senior Housing Committee received permission to spend $3,000 on creating design sketches for a senior housing development off Pleasant Street.

Harrington, who is paid $48,000, hopes to get more involved in town grant writing, but a full plate has pushed that to the bottom of the priority pile. "There's lot of things to do," she said. Along with going through the file of grant opportunities she has collected, she also hopes to reenergize the dormant Design Review Board and reorganize the planning board archives.

She said her role is more of technical assistance to the various town groups and committees; a source to go to with questions on things such as zoning bylaw issues.

Harrington considers her new position "much more open and fluid," than her former position as one person in a city planning office of 15.

"It's much more exciting," she said. "Professionally, it's very challenging."

Neighborhood brainstorming sessions start

"This is an opportunity for people to become involved in the town planning process," said Planning Board member Peter Pratt, a liaison to the committee.

The room was laid out with a plethora of maps and charts, outlining the history of property lines in the town, current zoning districts, topography, and watershed protection areas — almost to the point of overload, noted some committee members.

Although a comprehensive master plan has a number of specific components — a goals and policies statement, land use analysis, housing market analysis, economic development, natural and cultural resources, open space and recreation, service and facilities, and traffic/circulation/transportation — the committee won't limit comments to those topics.

"I think we should use those elements as a guide, and really just hear what people think without confusing them too much," said Thomas Callahan, the selectman liaison to the committee. "It's then our job to collect the information and focus it later."

Planning Board liaison Bill Good agreed with Callahan.

"We're going to have people say, 'I don't know about those [components] but I heard there was this meeting and I came out and want to say what I like and dislike,'" he said.

The committee decided to allow comments on regional issues such as the proposed new Logan Airport runway and restoration of the Greenbush commuter rail. But it hopes to limit discussion to how it would affect the town instead of the pros and cons of each issue.

"If the issue is about redevelopment of the downtown, or how we can use the money we're going to get from the train, that's one thing," Callahan said, "but it's not going to be a debate on whether the train should come."

Pratt warned not to dismiss a personal issue a resident may have, such as the dislike of a new subdivision next to his or her property.

"I don't want to choke off individual problems because that may be how they look at the general larger world," he said. "If they mention a certain subdivision, maybe that means there is a problem with a certain policy of subdivision planning."

The committee is also planning similar neighborhood meetings next Thursday, Aug. 2 at the Lightkeepers Residence; Aug. 9 at St. Anthony's Parish Center; and Aug. 16 at the Nativity-Assumption Greek Orthodox Church. Even though they are considered "neighborhood" forums, the committee said anyone is welcome to any session. The committee also hopes to have transcripts of the meetings available later.

Once finished, the committee plans to gather the information, conduct a large town-wide survey, and ultimately create a consensus vision of the future for Cohasset.

"The optimal result is that we see people nodding their heads as we get into the discussions," said committee member Mike Westcott.

Pratt said it's the committee's job to listen to the residents, and then act on their vision of what the town should be like in 20 years.

"We're here to listen, and then it's our job to put into practice what people want," he said.

Baker, a Cohasset resident and professional corporate brainstorming and visioning discussion facilitator, said she is "excited" about helping start off the process.

"Not only as a resident am I interested in the future, but I'm also interested in hearing other people's ideas," she said.

Why? Y Not

Youth center would give older teens a cool place to go

Just about every week we are reporting less-than-favorable stories about teens in trouble on the South Shore.

In the past few months alone we have reported on our front pages or police blotter stories involving:

- A drinking party where a host of teens are arrested;
- 17-year-olds are stopped by police at 2 a.m., well beyond what their license allows;
- What some have called "teen pranks" — such as graffiti on seawalls.

The familiar lament heard is that there's not enough to do on the South Shore and idle time tends to get teens in trouble. We also know they are resistant to structured activities once they reach a certain age, such as 15 or 16.

An effort is underway by YMCA officials to prove the cynics wrong. As part of its major expansion project in Hanover, the YMCA — which attracts residents from many parts of the South Shore — will include a new teen center. Officials are hoping the Y Not club will have teens thinking just that: why not go and have some fun.

"For some reason, we start to lose the teens at a certain age," says Natalie Sheard, executive director of the Mill Pond Y in Hanover. "Some are with us from a young age and then they fade out. It's no longer cool or relevant to them."

The Y's efforts to make the place more hip, cool and free flowing is being bolstered by the ever-hip owners of Mount Blue restaurant in Norwell. Owners Patrick and Jayne Bowe of Scituate, parents themselves, were looking for a cause to support as part of their annual summer gala when they had the brainstorm to work in concert to develop the Y Not club.

Early plans call for a cool place where older teens can hang out and feel some independence while parents are assured there is still some structure. Local high school bands will be encouraged to play club coffeehouses and the like. And that's just some of the cool ideas surfacing for the club.

Since the Y draws from many communities on the South Shore, the proposal is also a good alternative in towns lacking the finances or the public support to build a community center or teen center itself.

It all seems like a winning combination, but will require the support of parents and the community at large. As with every new venture, money as well as encouragement are essential ingredients to success.

The annual Mount Blue party this coming Monday is one way to show that support. The soiree generally sells out and features good food, entertainment and conversation for $50 per person (call 781-659-0050 for information about whether there are tickets still available). It is an adults-only gathering, but teens aren't being left out of the fun. Parents can encourage their kids to attend Saturday's outdoor music fest at the Y grounds. For 10 bucks, teens can enjoy nine local bands performing from noon to 6 p.m. There will be T-shirts, food and hats available for sale during the event. (For more details, call 781-829-8585.)

It's a terrific start by Y officials, Mount Blue and many community members who want to see the Y Not club offer an alternative to teens hanging out and letting trouble find them. The Y Not Club isn't going to change things overnight and there will be teens who still shun the idea, but we applaud the efforts to include teens in more structured activities.

We sure want to cover even more positive news about area teens. We continue to have our share of heart-warming stories about teens who help in their communities or work to better the lives of family and friends. But there's always space for more.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Police respond to parents' letter

TO THE EDITOR:

Recently, members of our association read a letter to the editor in the Cohasset Mariner written by the parents of a Cohasset teen. This letter, quite carefully framed an opinion that argues that the members of the Cohasset Police Department are improperly executing their law enforcement duties with respect to the enforcement of underage drinking, possession of alcohol, and the like. The authors go on to ask what can be done to change the relationship between teens and the police.

The membership of the Cohasset Police Association would like to take this opportunity to address the issues that this letter has raised. On face value and absent any other information, the average citizen of Cohasset might read such a letter and actually believe what they have read. The authors of this letter state in part, that the police in Cohasset are not viewed by many people as being there to "protect and to serve". We disagree with that statement. We feel that the vast majority of residents in Cohasset feel exactly that way and we find that the minority of people who do not agree are most often some of the parents of teens, who have been caught breaking the law.

The department has made efforts to bridge the gap between teens and officers. We attempted to run a "citizens police academy" twice last year — not one teen signed up. We had to abandon the idea due to lack of interest. We have repeatedly asked for the DARE program to be part of the curriculum at the schools to no avail. We offered to let teens come on a "ride-along" with police officers. Nothing. The police association offered to have police vs. the high school football team ball game. The fuzzy answer that we received boiled down to a "no". I could go on and on. It's not fair or even accurate to say that the department or the officers are not trying — the simple fact is that we're open to discuss anything, and we have been for years.

The authors also allege that one of their sons has told them that he has been "followed" by police officers on numerous occasions. This accusation fails to recognize the fact that the police officers assigned to patrol do exactly that. Patrol, in this context, means to drive around the area that you are assigned to. In patrolling our assigned area, our job requires us to make observations and look for criminal activity. Incidentally, contrary to popular belief, underage drinking is criminal activity.

Many people may, from time to time, look in their rear view mirror and see a police cruiser. Most law-abiding citizens are not concerned by that and will frequently only experience this once every great while. This is because most people are driving from one point to another. The teenagers that the authors refer to are by their own admission, out driving around. In some cases, they are doing this for an entire evening. Therefore, statistically, it should be no surprise that they stand a much higher chance of encountering a police officer out patrolling, especially when there are several police cars on the road (that look the same) at one time. We have said it before and we will say it again, if you aren't doing anything wrong, you have no reason at all to fear the presence of the police.

What the authors of the letter may not have known is that their teenage son has had encounters with police and was given a break (or two). This information was easily checked at police headquarters. When an officer has dealings with someone, most usually the officer prepares a report, complete with name, date of birth, and nature of the encounter. Although these reports are not mandatory, some officers have found this to be an effective way to document a stop and protect themselves from false claims, as is the case here. It's a little more work for the officer, but well worth it in the end. Parents should realize that their son or daughter isn't going to come and say, "Hey Mom and Dad, the cops took my booze away tonight, but they didn't lock me up". You're only going to hear from them when an arrest has been made. Then sadly, the next steps are to blame the police officer, police department, or the department's policies and procedures. Very often, the officers are the ones that are made out to be the bad guys. Officers are not to blame — we didn't put your son or daughter in a position where they may face arrest — they made a conscious decision to put themselves where trouble is.

This entire story reminds us once again that good intentions on behalf of the police and the exercise of discretion never fails to invite criticism and false allegations. It's no wonder that "breaks" for teens are not as prevalent as they were at one time. Since the authors felt compelled to offer their own advice, we will offer ours in return: It is important to know and check all of the facts before you make an argument — especially in the newspaper.

On behalf of the men and woman of the Cohasset Police Association,

William P. Quigley, President
Cohasset Police Association
International Brotherhood of Police Officers

Parental denial

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Police spend countless hours assisting teenagers survive to adulthood.

It is clear that the criticism of Bob and Mary Ernst as well as Noria Morales are unwarranted. The Ernsts suggest that Cohasset kids have no options other than to drive around town. It is apparent that they do want the police to be babysitters.

Noria Morales' letter if off the chart. It is disturbing to think that she cannot understand that her brother "…was guilty of minor transport." Her last paragraph is totally nonsensical, to wit: "…a society whose efforts to repress such vices as drinking, drugs and sex have perversely retarded effects…"
